How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two and three bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free St., one mile to our entrance. Call 740-1500.

'Person of the Year'

Sewer Commission Chairman Charlie DeSantis

By Mike Berger

Some people are so familiar with the public, you only mention their first name and you know who they are.

For example, for better or worse, mention Kevin in Boston and you know people are talking about Kevin White.

In Cohasset mention Mary Jane and that is Mary Jane McArthur. Rocky, there's only one Rocco Laugelle.

Mention the name, Charlie and that person can only be Charlie DeSantis.

His stances on the sewer issues are familiar to anyone who has paid attention to town matters since 1979.

But that isn't the only side to Charlie. On a hot

Heads held high despite OT loss

By Carla Lucas and Mike Berger

"We came in as champions and went out as champions." - Head Coach Ed Minelli

ABC's Wide World of Sports calls it the "The thrill of victory and the agony of defeat."

The pain of the overtime loss to Cardinal Spellman probably hurt the 11 members of the Cohasset Skippers for a few days.

But Head Coach Ed Minelli asked each of them to remember the thought of senior captain David Barcomb laying in a bullet, picture perfect pass from Tony Bogarty with three seconds left to send the Division III Championship game to overtime.

The reaction from the 5,000 member crowd: 1967 Red Sox, Bernie Carbo or Carlton Fisk's World Series Homerun, the 1981 World Championship Celtics Absolute Pandemonium.

"We will never forget that moment," said Minelli.

"I don't feel anyone was a loser. It was just an unfortunate loss," he said.

"At any point in the game we could have quit but we didn't. We hung close and came backand came back again and again. We were just so determined. It was a courageous and valiant effort all around," said Minelli.

With one minute to play we were down five and came back to tie it with three seconds remaining as Bogarty fired a cross-court diagonal pass to Barcomb.

"At that point," said Minelli, " the fans went wild as if they had just won Megabucks. I thought the gym was going to explode."

Judith Volungis

Judith P. Volungis of 234 Forest Avenue has announced her candidacy for a seat on the Cohasset School Committee. Judy says she has a strong background in education with nine years teaching experience in Missouri, Connecticut, and Massachusetts.

She graduated from the University of Massachusetts-Amherst in 1964, holds an M.Ed in Elementary Education in Worcester State College, has trained student teachers, and taken several post graduate courses.

She is well known in town for her many volunteer activities in both the schools and in community organizations.

She has served four years on the Osgood Communication Council, served on the Parent School Organization Arts Enrichment Committee in 1983, and done volunteer work in IMS math.

In the community, Judy is currently the Program Director at the Cohasset Community Center, and has served as Vice President and Ways and Means Chairman.

She is treasurer of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, a member of the League of Women Voters, and served the Central Committee of the Village Fair in 1983.

Judy believes that long range planning and the setting of annual goals for both curriculum and budget are absolutely essentials.

"Bandaid solutions are not an adequate means of coping with declining enrollment and fixed expenses," she says.

Drama group in finals

For the fourth time in the last six years Cohasset High School's drama group will appear in the finals of the state drama festival.

As a result of their victory Saturday, the group will present the English farce, "Chinamen" at Boston's John Hancock Hall Saturday, March 24, at 5 p.m.

In addition to this festival performance, a special fundraising performance will be presented Thursday, March 22.

Funds from this evening performance will be used to defray the costs resulting from festival participation.

In addition to "Chinamen," a short production by members of the newly-formed junior high school drama club will also be presented.

This special evening will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets will be priced at $2 for adults and $1 for students.

"Chinamen" was written by Michael Frayn, who is currently represented on Broadway by the smash hit "Noises Off."

Kurt Hochkeppel and Nancy Walls, both of whom have been honored for their performances during preliminary festivals, play all five of the people gathered for a dinner party which turns into far more than was expected.

Murray to run again

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R) of Cohasset announced at her annual fund raiser her plans to seek re-election for a fifth term to the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

Murray, in her statement, said, "I want to continue to be close to the people for whom I serve. Many people have called me, written to me and spoken to me at various functions and stores urging me to seek 10th Congressional seat and the Norfolk Plymouth Senatorial seat. The support given to us was most humbling and deeply appreciated by myself and my family.

"After much soul searching the decision was to seek re-election to the House. Let me tell you why! As all of you know, I have used politics to help people. My representative district consists of 37,000 population. The other positions many thousands more. Let's face it - I want to be able to reach the majority of the people, personally. Also, I have to be able to contact each and every person in my District who wants to talk with me. This would be impossible with many more thousands to represent," she said.

Rep. Murray serves on three top Committees; Counties, Local Affairs and Taxation. She has served on many special commissions as well.

Murray, a Marine, is the first Woman President of the Massachusetts Legislators' Association and is a past chairperson of the Caucus of the Massachusetts Women's Legislative Caucus.

Beechwood forest site

The Beechwood forest site may soon be a play lot with basketball hoops, four square courts and a tennis backboard.

Recreation commissioner Jack Worley told selectmen that the commission would like to use the $12,000 donated by the Beechwood Association, for the play lot.

The biggest cost will be a $3,000 to $5,000 cost for fencing. "The fencing would be to prevent foul balls and kids from going into the street."

Worley said, "This area definitely needs something like this. If we do not use the Beechwood Association's funds by the year 2008 then it will be donated to other causes.

He added, "Hopefully, we will be able to put lights in later."

Worley will present this idea to the advisory committee before the selectmen make a decision.

The recreation commission will meet Thursday at 8 p.m. to further discuss the possible play lot.

Cluster development

Wayne Sawchuk of Beechwood Street is one of a group of investors who are planning a 30 to 50 single family home cluster development for Wheelwright Farm off Beechwood Street, across from Riverview Drive. Sawchuk said the plans will be similiar to 100 Pond Street with the emphasis on opens space and preserving the natural common pastureland. Plans are preliminary and further details will be released soon. An informal discussion was held with the Planning Board recently.

Town meeting voters

Registration by the Board of Registrars for the Town Meeting April 7 and Town Election, April 14, will be Saturday, March 17, from noon to 8 p.m. at the Town Hall and the last day to register is Monday, March 19, from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. at Town Hall.

Cohasset's week . . .

Donkey Ball is coming

The Cohasset High School Basketball Boosters are sponsoring what could be the event of the year when Donkey Ball comes to town Saturday, March 24.

Donkey Ball is the questionable art of playing basketball while riding a four-footed furry beast that often has a mind of its own when its comes to driving down the court for a basket.

The donkeys, imported from Ohio, last made an appearance in Cohasset in 1972 and produced an unforgettable evening. The 24th promises to be equally memorable.

Two games are scheduled to begin at 8 p.m., the first featuring the championship boys' varsity against the championship girls' team. And then the Cohasset faculty/administration team, led by Superintendent Eugene Crowell, will take the floor against the Cohasset All-Stars, who will include Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and four members of the board of selectmen (selectman Mary Jane McArthur will be leading the All-Stars' cheerleaders).

This madcap activity at the Cohasset High gym will be preceded by the annual shooting contests at 7 p.m. that basketballers tall and small look forward to.

Tickets ($4 for adults, $2.50 for students) will be available at the door or by calling 383-1443 or 383-9845. It should be an evening to remember, and all proceeds will benefit the boosters' association.

April Fool's issue

The April 5 issue of the Mariner will have a sassy two-page parody, which we blithely are calling our April Fool's Issue.

Those two pages shall be tucked into the week's honest-to-goodness news. But the tongue in cheek is intended to take the regular format of the Mariner and have a little fun with familiar flavoring of our hometown.

That is to say, those two pages shall contain sheer hogwash. People who don't want a good laugh ought to bypass it. We promise good taste, but we also promise a hearty parody of our own paper.

Those who believe they have a flair for fun parody are welcome to submit material to be included in those two pages. That which is submitted of course falls under the careful if gleeful eye of the editor.

Little League registration

The Cohasset Little League registration will be held Saturday, March 17 at the Cohasset High School gym from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., the Deer Hill School from 9 to 11 a.m. and Sunday, March 18 from 1 to 2 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Mystery House Tour week IA results

Attention members of the Cohasset Historical Society, nearly 500 of you. You now are eligible to enter the Mariner Mystery House Tour.

And we hope some of you did last week.

We challenged 16 people to enter the contest and we came close as 15 people sent in entries for the first official week of the 10-week contest.

Ten people were correct with their answers of 25 Ripley Road, now the Ripley Road Nursing Home.

Those now in the running for the retail prizes are Lynette Lydan of 31 Stockbridge Street, the Galt Grant family of 258 So. Main St., A. J. Antoine Jr. of 17 Elm Court, Verna Martini of 81 Atlantic Ave., Christopher Duggan of Lily Pond Lane, Betty Enders of 150 No. Main St., Robert Leonard Sr. of 39 Bancroft Rd., Elmer Pratt, 51 Gammons Rd., Jean Rosano, 223 Chief Justice Cushing Way and Warren Pratt of 56 Red Gate Lane.

A little history of 25 Ripley Road, the corner of Ripley Road and Sohier Street, finds this was formerly the Cohasset Hospital.

The building to the right of the house has been moved back from the street.

The hospital was established in 1925 and formerly was the residence of Marinda Parker, a leading Cohasset citizen.

Historical records indicate the Parker residence dates back to the latter 1800s.

Last week's entries will be held for playoffs if need be. When we began the contest two weeks ago, we excluded Historical Society members. We didn't realize there were 500 of you.

After talks with Society Curator David Wadsworth he assured us very few society members have access to the selected houses and also assured us many members would have fun playing.

Each week the Mystery House Tour will recognize many historical homes in town and the way they looked at the turn of the century.

Thanks to the Historical Society, the Mariner will publish a turn-of-the-century photo of a home which exists in Cohasset today.

At the end of ten weeks our first place winner will be awarded $100 in retail gift certificates, second place, $50 in gift certificates and third place, a $25 certificate.

If need be, Week 11 and 12 will bet set aside for Playoffs.

Once you find the home, write down the address of the home (exact number and street) along with your name, address and phone number and send it to "Mystery House Tour," care of the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025 or drop off the answers in an envelope at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or Hennessey's News, both in Cohasset Village.

Mystery House No. 2

The deadline for weekly entries will be 9:30 a.m. sharp Tuesday.

The following week we will disclose the correct address with a picture of how the home looks today with a little history brief about each house.

Remember, only one guess per week.

This week's clue is this residence dates back to 1789 as a Cape Cod cottage.

Cohasset state aid

Cohasset will receive an extra $81,245 in state aid once assessments are subtracted from all state receipts. However school aid was cut $66,000. The Advisory Board had expected a state aid increase of $68,594, leaving a $12,651 balance. Town Accountant Bill Signorelli said of the $12,651 amount,$10,916 is committed to the Metco and school lunch program.

In other budget news, the recently approved 5½ percent increase granted to school teachers will cost nearly $130,000. But Stephen Hart, school finance officer, said this amount was already submitted in the $4,065,335 budget submitted to the Advisory Board. The School and Advisory Committees will meet Thursday, March 22 for discussion on the budget.

The School Committee feels if the budget has to be cut, school sports, computers and staff cuts will come.

On the Irish question

'trapped in the past . . . trapped in the present'

By Patricia Desmond

It wasn't until after Padraig O'Malley had come to the U.S. that he became concerned about the Irish Question.

Growing up in Dublin in the years before the random bombings, it didn't seem an important question.

O'Malley, who wrote Uncivil Wars and is senior analyst at the John McCormick Institute at UMass/Boston, remembers that the people "up there in Northern Ireland were kind of funny."

And in 1963, when the Rev. Ian Paisley picketed the Ecumenical Council in Rome, O'Malley thought the man was crazy.

As O'Malley explained to about 25 persons at the Hingham Public Library Monday night in the opening event of a week of programs on Ireland, people in the South didn't believe in their hearts that anything could be done about Northern Ireland.

The country had been split in 1921 and that seemed to be that.

But on Jan. 13, 1972, O'Malley became interested in the Irish Question when violence erupted and 13 died in Derry. He joined with others to raise money for the families of the victims.

A few years later, O'Malley worked to help organize an educational seminar on Northern Ireland for the media. All sides of the conflict were brought from Ireland to Amherst.

"It's difficult to say what came out of the conference," O'Malley said. "It failed. The media of the U.S. had no interest at all in coming. And that was probably just as well because whenever we did get a member of the media, they (the representatives from Northern Ireland) all began shouting out their slogans. When the media were absent, and they (the representatives) were literally locked up when we took away their passports, barriers began to drop and they began to act like real people."

He said the Protestant participants at the conference seemed to truly believe that all Catholics were members of the IRA (the outlawed Irish Republican Army) and the Catholics seemed to truly believe that all Protestants were the same (like the extremist Paisley).

The two groups learned about the differences as both Catholics and Protestants argued amongst themselves.

O'Malley said that until the mid 1970s the Ulster Defense Association (a sort of Protestant counterpart to the IRA) used to engage in indiscriminate retaliation for IRA violence. Catholics were shot at random in response to IRA violence.

Since then an attempt has been made to ascertain whether the person to be assassinated is an IRA member, O'Malley said.

Why did it take 50 years of separation before the violence?

O'Malley believes the welfare state Britain set up after World War II is responsible for increasing the expectations of the Catholics, who had little chance of higher education.

He sees the policies of the British as creating support for the IRA.

"First you had internment, which is no longer the policy," O'Malley said. Under internment a person could be arrested without being charged with a crime. Internment was phased out in 1975.

And then there were the hunger strikes by political prisoners. O'Malley said IRA support was beginning to diminish when Bobby Sands began his hunger strike (Sands died from his strike).

'(Prime Minister) Margaret Thatcher made the IRA . . . she gave human symbols that can be drawn on for years.'

--Padraig O'Malley

"(Prime Minister) Margaret Thatcher made the IRA," he said. "She gave human symbols that can be drawn on for years."

O'Malley contends that it was Thatcher alone who prevented an agreement from being reached between the political prisoners and officials.

At the same time, O'Malley lays a share of blame in the direction of the Irish of the South who don't see diversity as a source of richness.

There are three cultures in Ireland, O'Malley said—Gallic Catholic, Scots Presbyterian and Anglo Protestant. But 96 percent of the South is Catholic. In the North, 40 percent is Catholic.

"Ireland is a tale of two minorities," O'Malley said. "On the one hand, there are the Catholics of Northern Ireland. On the other hand, there are the Protestants who see themselves as a minority in the whole of Ireland."

Religion is very much an issue. Catholic teaching is written into the law of the South, with divorce specifically prohibited by the constitution. And Protestants, like Paisley, see the Pope as the Anti-Christ.

Another problem O'Malley sees is that the Irish do not have the spirit or tradition of sacrificing on behalf of others.

"In the past, we've exported people when there have been problems (such as during the Great Potato Famine of the 1840s). Instead of having smaller slices of the pie, we've exported people so there would be larger slices of a smaller pie. There's no longer a place to send these people. Emigration is no longer a safety chute."

He said that while most people in the South would like to see a United Ireland, they want someone else to pick up the cost--if not the British, then the Americans.

There would be a high cost since the Northern Ireland economy is, as O'Malley describes it, collapsed.

The unemployment rate in Northern Ireland is 22 percent. In Derry, the unemployment rate is 37 percent.

"If they took away public expenditures, Northern Ireland would collapse tomorrow morning," O'Malley said.

O'Malley believes the only answer to the Irish Question is to find a way of linking the North and the South of Ireland while also linking the North to the United Kingdom.

"No solution will work that involves either link exclusively," he said.

Protestants in the North have far greater feelings of being discriminated against as a minority than do the Catholics, despite the fact that the Catholics in the North have suffered far more, according to all measurement, O'Malley said.

O'Malley interviewed 27 leaders of the conflict for his book. During that process he found that to IRA strategists, Ian Paisley is worth more alive than dead.

"There is a symbiotic relationship of violence on both sides," he said.

"Paisley, when he talks about taking care of themselves (the Protestants) if the British can't protect them, legitimates the IRA to the Catholics as their protection against terrorism. Terrorism begets terrorism on the other side. And Paisley's power comes from using the IRA as the whipping boy for all the problems of Northern Ireland."

O'Malley believes that if Paisley were to disappear, the power of the IRA would diminish.

The one thing all sides of the conflict seem to have in common is a belief that there will be a violent day of reckoning.

"No one talked of the future. No one talked of their children. It's as though they were trapped in the present or, worse, trapped in the past," O'Malley said.

Charlie fought the state and is still winning summer's evening, out of the clear blue, he attended a school committee meeting to express his views on sports coaching appointments.

You may find him out on the soccer field or at Town Hall, the Bates Building or come late to a selectmen's meeting.

He feels it is important to be concerned.

"Any town I have ever lived in, I have been concerned about the administration and the decision making. I believe in democracy and I feel it is vital for everyone to try to contribute to the running of a town.

"You don't have to run for office but you can talk or write and you have a right to make your views heard. They could be evaluated in the final decision," said DeSantis.

'He was restrained when another might have belted someone in the mouth.'
Voter

Among the twelve people who voted for him as "Person of the Year," these two quotes stand out.

"He was restrained when another might have belted someone in the mouth. He was sometimes somber, sometimes jovial, with only infrequently tedious discussion about his philosophy on an environment (sewers) most of usdespairedthinking about.

"He was honest, forthright and he won over his most ardent detractors - even with threats of $2,000 a day.

"The state has this madman impulse to produce hundreds of $15 million sewer plants throughout the Commonwealth; and Charlie DeSantis, has, at least thus far, stopped one."

Another quote: "Over two years ago he alone mustered support for an alternative means to an expensive sewer project. We now have that study underway.

"Whether Mr. DeSantis is right or wrong, he did convince others to consider the cost, damage, impact and loss of a lifestyle for which many residents live in Cohasset."

To understand why Charlie has fought the central sewer plant since 1979 is to study his past and his job as an airplane pilot.

In 1946, Charlie was five years old when he moved to Cohasset. After going through Cohasset schools, he went to Thayer Academy in Braintree for high school, much to his disapproval.

He graduated from the Naval Academy in 1964 and served for six years as a Navy pilot. In 1970, he joined Eastern Airlines and in 1979 was assigned to the Boston district. He soon moved back to Cohasset, a move he always wanted to do.

He currently lives on Forest Avenue with his wife, Dee (Adria) and four children, Mike, Justin, Corey and Wesley.

"I have never seen a community like Cohasset which has so much attraction for its young to return. Cohasset is unique and one of the most beautiful towns in America. I look back on my childhood as a happy experience, a marvelous experience."

Charlie loves his job as a pilot. It has given him a chance to see the world and the many different communities.

"Flying breeds a strange breed of people. One common characteristic is individually, we tend to do many things on our own. We generally seem to be resourceful people."

When asked if there was any direct relationship between an airplane pilot and a sewer commission chairman, Charlie said, "There is not one profession which would prepare to make you a sewer commission chairman."

But he later added, flying has madehim view the impact of a lot of communities with a large central sewer system.

Some of his detractors have said Charlie is against town development. He responded by saying, "I am not against development but I am against urban sprawl."

"Cohasset is a natural island in a sea of rather intensely developed communities. If a town like Cohasset becomes overly developed, its natural assets can no longer be enjoyed by everybody. If utilized by so many, they will be appreciated and enjoyed by no one," said DeSantis.

"It's development to the point of over-saturation. Why do people want to come back here? It's because it's a mix of betweenGod-given assets and the harmony of development. I think we have an obligation to those living in Cohasset today — that those who come here after us will be able to enjoy the gifts we have enjoyed.

"Cohasset cannot be a community of 15,000 to 20,000 people and still be the Cohasset of a natural sense."

The federal spending policy has changed, DeSantis said. Communities cannot construct sewer projects for growth but only to solve present problems. The federal agencies will give more money to alternative solutions than to building a central sewer plant.

But what prompted Charlie to begin his anti-central sewer plant fight in 1979 was what he called the injustice of a state fine threat.

"That is an impossible environment for anyone, let alone a community to make a reasonable decision."

He still feels the same way even though the state fine threat is now $2,000 per day (although the court complaint has been postponed pending a final alternative study).

Charlie feels Cohasset has just cause to fight the state officials in court because the plan submitted by Metcalf and Eddy is exorbitant for sewering only a portion of the town and the Metcalf and Eddy plan was not consistent with federal law. We are complying with the federal program and the EPA is encouraging it."

How does he feel about being named "Person of the Year?"

"I am very grateful to the people in town who took the time to write nice things about me. The sewer construction issue, to me, is the single greatest impact on the future of Cohasset."

"I am confident the majority of Cohasset people are behind me, maybe not behind me specifically but behind the theory we have the ability to correct a wrong and the community recognizes the attorney generals, DEQE's and state bureaucracy exist to serve us, not to abuse us."

Charlie feels it is important that Cohasset residents take the time to evaluate the best possible alternative plan for the town, "to come up with the best possible solution we can all live with.

"Some may or may not accept all the aspects of this plan. I may even be one of them. But there is no plan which encompasses the entire town that can ever satisfy everyone in all areas. But I am convinced there is enough good and enough savings in this plan, we can live with it."

After the overtime, Cohasset missed three shots in a row, Cardinal Spellman scored four points and then Cohasset tried to foul. Spellman hit six of seven foul shots from the foul line to clinch the championship.

Cohasset, as a trademark all season, came back from deficits of four after a period, two, 28-26, at halftime on a buzzer shot from Bogarty, five after three periods, 46-41 and six 63-57 with 1:31 remaining.

Cohasset earned the final berth into the playoffs with a team made up of an eighth grader, two sophomores, a junior and a senior as its leading players.

Going into the game, Minelli said to a man, the Skippers honestly felt they could beat Spellman, rated as the team to beat in Division III.

Medway

In semi-final action, Cohasset overpowered Medway 74-64.

"Medway was playing super the first five minutes so I just told the kids if we stay close, we'd be okay. Because I knew there isn't a team in the world who could consistently keep shooting successfully from the outside like they were doing," said Minelli.

"An important key to the game was even though we were down, we never got discouraged," he said.

Changing defenses in the second half, the Skippers improved their execution on offense. "Since we were in better shape, we began to just wear them down, said Minelli.

Brian Edwards scored 18 points and nine rebounds while Bogarty added 18 points, 16 rebounds and 14 assists.

Center James Creed chipped in with 14 points, 17 rebounds and four block shots. Barcomb contributed 15 points and 12 rebounds and David McDonald scored nine points and had five assists.

Against Cardinal Spellman, Barcomb scored 11, MacDonald, five, Creed 19, Bogarty, 17 and Edwards also had 17 points.

Reflections

"We are still the champs and we have everything to be proud of," said Minelli.

"I am proud of all my players and am so happy for the seniors, Dave Barcomb, Peter Caruso, John O'Connell and Chris Kuhn.

"We earned every one of those 21 victories and we have to learn to accept those three defeats as a part of life and go on from there."

"But what this team has shown is it united everyone in Cohasset and showed with a lot of hard work and proper direction, accomplishments will happen and dreams will be fufilled." said Minelli.

☐If you lost a bracelet in the vicinity of Sohier Street and the Osgood School, how lucky you are! An honest lady was cleaning her driveway March 7, found the bracelet and turned it into the Police station. If you are the owner, call the station to identify it, and it will be returned to you.

☐When you see the folks on Flintlocke Ridge wearing blue this week (instead of St. Patty's green), it is for a good reason. A baby boy was born in the neighborhood. Congratulations to Daniel and Pearl Smith.

☐Had a nice note from Nina Bird, formerly of Forest Ave., now living in Windham, New Hampshire. Included was information on her daughter, Suzanne (of "Mammy Yokum fame"). Suzanne graduated from CHS in 1982, and is now a student at the University of New Hampshire. She is a sophomore and majoring in communications and drama, and has been on the Dean's list for the past two years. To add to her credits, Suzanne recently gave a spectacular performance as the Shrew in the "Taming of the Shrew", which was presented at the University's theatre. It seems that all that advised Suzanne to continue acting were absolutely right!

☐Have heard that Mike Mahoney is doing extremely well in his latest venture as a private in the Army, although all of his friends miss him! Thought that it would be good to put his address in, as it is always nice to get hometown news, cards or letters when mail call comes around! The address is: PVT Mike Mahoney, 027-627443 3rd Platoon, RN 316, COD 2nd Bn, 2nd ITB, Fort Bennings, Georgia, 31905.

☐Saw Bob O'Hayre this weekend, great to have him home. Bob always spends the winter in sunny Florida, but this year Mother Nature fooled him. Who would have thought he would be greated by a blizzard and freezing cold in March!

☐After this past week's "Mega-mania", everyone has at least one story of near-misses, almost did that's, etc. Bet not many can top the following: The day after the numbers were announced a certain fella went to the News Store and ordered the same numbers for next week, then showed it to everyone, claiming it to be a winning ticket. Of course, no one bothered to look at the date, and assumed it was indeed a winner. Needless to say, he had a wonderful time all day Sunday...a great Mega-joke that was enjoyed by all.

☐All of the standing ovations, constant applause, and cheers for the Basketball team were an outstanding tribute to an outstanding team. They certainly did a super job in their efforts at the states, and the whole town applauds their efforts! Congratulations to all.

☐As a final fund-raiser for this season, the Basketball Boosters Club is selling raffle tickets. For a $1 donation, you have a chance to win a Get-A-Way weekend at Dunfeys-Hyannis (this includes all extras, i.e. continental breakfast, golf fees, tennis fees, and health club membership), second prize tickets for two to the South Shore Music Circus. The drawing will be held on March 24 during halftime of the Donkey Basketball game. Be sure to support this effort, purchase a ticket today!

To qualify for the dean's list at Bates, a student must maintain a better than "B" average for the semester, for a minimum quality point ratio of 3.2.

☐Paul A. Plante, son of Pat and Maria Plante of 798 Jerusalem Road, is on the Dean's list at Tufts University-College of Engineering.

Paul, a 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School, will be receiving his degree from Tufts May 20.

☐Paul's sister, Jackie, presently a senior at Cohasset High School, is accepted for enrollment at Tufts University in September.

☐ Burk Ketcham of Cohasset has been appointed Vice President Marketing/Public Relations of Anderson-Nichols, a Boston-based engineering and architectural firm. Charles Dudinski, President of Anderson-Nichols, said "Burk Ketcham will be responsible for acquainting business, industry and governmental agencies with the total range of services offered by Anderson-Nichols."

Prior to assuming his present position at Anderson-Nichols, Ketcham was Vice President in charge of the Planning Division.

In his career, Ketcham has provided a wide range of consulting services to business and industry with Anderson-Nichols and through a prior association as a partner in a national consulting firm.

He was responsible for the redevelopment planning of the Newport, RI Waterfront; the plans for reusing Burlington-Northern's 500-acre railroad yard adjacent to downtown Denver; and the revitalization program for downtown Santa Rosa, California, which has stimulated private investments in excess of $400 million.

In Cohasset, Burk Ketcham is a member of the Town's Government Structure Committee and the Straits Pond Committee. He serves as the municipality's representative on the South Shore Coastal Zone advisory Committee.

☐Had a nice note from Bonnie (Edmonds) Ritter last week. Bonnie is a CHS grad, and lives in Texas with her husband and three sons, and is still working as a nurse, this time in the plastic surgery field. Bonnie's husband, Dick, is a doctor. They are planning a trip to Cohasset this summer to attend a reunion, which must find Mom and Dad, Bruce and Mary Edmonds of Pond Street, marking off days on the calendar. Bonnie's sister, Sheila, is also living in Texas. Cohasset's loss is surely Texas' gain.

☐The PSO reports that their phone-a-thon was a grand success. In case you were out when they were busy phoning, you didn't loose out — just drop a contribution in the mail to Cohasset PSO, PO Box 30, Cohasset. Help add to the $3,000 already pledged.

☐All those who attended last weeks Booster's Club awards night had an added treat. This was a preview of what it will be life to have cable television for the local sporting events. Certainly will be nice to see, something to look forward to.

☐Keep your news coming, everyone loves to read it!

Unclaimed state funds list released

State Treasurer Robert Crane today released this week the names of 35,000 persons who are due more than $18 million in funds they apparently knew nothing about.

A Brookline woman is due more than $77,000 representing the largest single unclaimed account on the Treasurer's books. Since 1980 the Treasurer's office has collected more than $90 million in unclaimed accounts and has returned nearly one half that amount to the rightful owners or legal heirs.

Under the state's Unclaimed Money Law, legally designated M.G.L. Ch.200A, bank accounts, insurance proceeds, unchased gift certificates, payroll checks, customer overpayments and the like that have gone untouched for least five years are deemed to be abandoned and must be reported to the Treasurer.

Crane noted one important aspect of the Unclaimed Money Law requires that until claimed, all funds are kept in the state's General Fund where they are invested for the benefit of all residents and taxpayers here in Massachusetts.

The names listed under Cohasset include:

Austin L. Ahearn, Jr.; Dorothy I. Ahearn, George Andrews, John K. Bryant, Cust.; Henry G. Bryant, Susan L. Cahill, Ednah G. Churchill, Pauline Condakes, c/o Pauline Tounpouras; James J. Cony, Cons.; Laura Bullard, James J. Cony, Cons.; Laura Bullard, Clifford J. Dickson, Margaret R. Dickson, Audrey A. Donovan, Lydia G. Fulton and William H. Gray.

Raskin Medical Center expands

Dr. William R. Raskin is pleased to announce the opening of his new practice, The Raskin Medical Center.

Dr. Raskin, a former partner and medical director of the Route 3A Medical Center plans to continue the unique format of combining office based non-appointment service with traditional general practice, which he began on the South Shore in 1981.

The new practice is still located in the new Cushing Plaza on the Cohasset-Scituate line, but now next to Medi-Mart in the former A&P building. The new office will continue to provide X-ray and laboratory service.

His redesigned office will offer increased space, with greater privacy and efficiency. This will enable Dr. Raskin to provide the public with on-premise specialty consultations in the following fields:

Dr. Alfred Branca, Radiology; Dr. Allen Davis, Consultations in surgery; Dr. Michael Goldstein, Consultations in urology for infertility and vasectomies; Mark Mincolla, PhD, Consultations in nutritions, diet and "holistic medicine;" Janet LaRosa, R.A.C., Acupuncture; Genevieve Lane, R.A.C., Acupuncture, and Gunther Weil, PhD, Consultations for counseling and guidance for stress related problems.

Dr. Raskin is optimistic that because of increased problems in getting to Boston due to road construction, the new office in conjunction with the overall renovation of Cushing Plaza will provide area residents with an excellent and improved facility.

A pre-opening celebration will be held on Sunday, March 25 from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., and the public is invited.

The official opening will be held late in March.

Bravo!

Our contest for "Person of the Year" is over and you may or may not agree with the finishes of Executive Secretary Mark Lanza, third, six votes, Fire Chief Martin Dooley, second place 11 votes and Sewer Commission Chairman Charlie DeSantis, as the first place winner with 12 votes.

All three people are visible, all have changed Cohasset with their work and issue philosophies and have been the target of newspaper headlines for a year.

But as we have said before, our nominations are the Cohasset High School Boys Basketball Team a.k.a. "Eddie and the Cruisers."

Last week we ran a page one photograph of the team members, photographed by Rose Cundari. Reflecting back on it the picture shows the natural winning flavor of the youth's faces.

The Cruisers have united Cohasset. For a week it was Cohasset Blue. People from all over town, whether in wheel chairs or 70-year old grandmothers traveled to Brockton to view a basketball spectacle.

People who never would have ventured in to watch a basketball game cheered for Cohasset. It was an awesome sight.

Eddie and the Cruisers have taught us a lot.

It began in the summer when the players banded together to save the job for their coach Ed Minelli when his coaching status was threatened by school administrators.

They showed us the coach need not be a CHS faculty member to foster enthusiasm or school spirit.

They showed us tremendous amounts of money need not be spent to improve the program and still come up a winner.

They showed us Cohasset need not be targeted as too small a school to be a basketball power.

They won the most games won in a season, 21; the most points ever scored in a game, 101 and the highest point average for a game, 70.

And they showed us the value of a team and the value of every team member.

Coach Ed Minelli whose coaching strategies have been used by the pros said it best this week, "With a lot of hard work and the proper direction, accomplishments will happen and dreams will be fulfilled."

We'd like to conclude with two thoughts. A CHS teacher told Minelli he should be proud because all of his players were gentlemen, studied hard in class and "were a pleasure to have."

Second: Over the last year, when did you see so many Cohasset residents applaud and smile considering what this town has gone through in a year?

Just think: Eddie and the Cruisers will soon be back. Amen.

Bates Building repairs

Weeding out the flora from the fauna

By Claire McDonough

"Going to the Flower Show?" I asked my friend Flora.

We were sipping coffee at Angelo's snack bar and she ran her finger around the rim of her cup.

"I don't see how I can avoid it," she sighed. "Bill says if we don't, Fauna and Bruce will get ahead of us. We have to go and figure out what their strategy will be before we can plan our strategy."

"It seems too bad," I told her. "I can remember when you both had very nice yards and the time to enjoy them."

Flora drained her cup and signaled for a refill. "Me too. We had a few flowering shrubs, a couple of rows of perennials, and some petunias. Bill would mow the lawn, I'd do a little weeding, and we'd let it go at that."

"When did it all change?" I asked curiously.

"It was the year Bruce and Fauna put in some creeping red sedum," she replied. "Bill said it made our walkway look unfinished, so he planted myrtle. Then he decided to go Bruce one better and he added a couple of dogwoods.

"We were standing out front admiring them, when Bruce came out of his house. I heard him call Fauna, and the two of them stared at us for a while, then they went back in their house.

"The next morning a nursery truck drove up, and by noon Fauna and Bruce had added Baltic ivy, rhododendrons, and junipers.

"When Bill came home from work that night, he looked at Fauna and Bruce's yard, and stormed into the house. He pulled the gardening encyclopedia out and muttered, 'If they want war, I'll show them war.' The next thing I knew he'd ordered mungo pines, pachysandra and a row of cypress trees."

"That seems so long ago," I told her.

"I know. At the time I was naive enough to think we had achieved superiority and we could relax. But the next spring Bruce put in a sun dial and a goldfish pond."

"Was that when you and Bill built the grotto with the waterfall?"

"Right. But then Fauna and Bruce bought a couple of iron deer, and from there on it was escalation, all the way."

"It must be terribly expensive," I said. "Have you considered negotiating a Freeze?"

"I suggested it, but Bill says we can only negotiate from strength. He wants to be far enough ahead so Bruce won't think we have a window of vulnerability. And anyway, he doesn't trust them to bargain in good faith. He says they might agree to a Freeze, but secretly plant bulbs that will come up next spring and take us unawares."

"Does he have any suggestions?" I asked.

"Actually, yes. He favors a build-down. He wants to get Fauna and Bruce to agree that for each new thing they put in they'll take out two old things and we'll do the same."

"That sounds reasonable," I admitted. "Do you think they'll go along with it?"

"I asked Fauna, but she said Bruce is afraid that if they put in a bird bath and take out the peonies and the gladiolas, we might put in a pavil ion and only take out the Swiss chard and the cucumbers."

"It sounds like you've reached an impasse. Do you see any end in sight?"

Flora shook her head sadly. "I'm afraid not. It looks to me as if it's just a matter of time till someone drops the big one."

I gasped. "You mean?"

She nodded. "Either man-eaters from a Central American rain forest or a patch of quicksand."

I sighed. "And to think flowers used to symbolize peace."

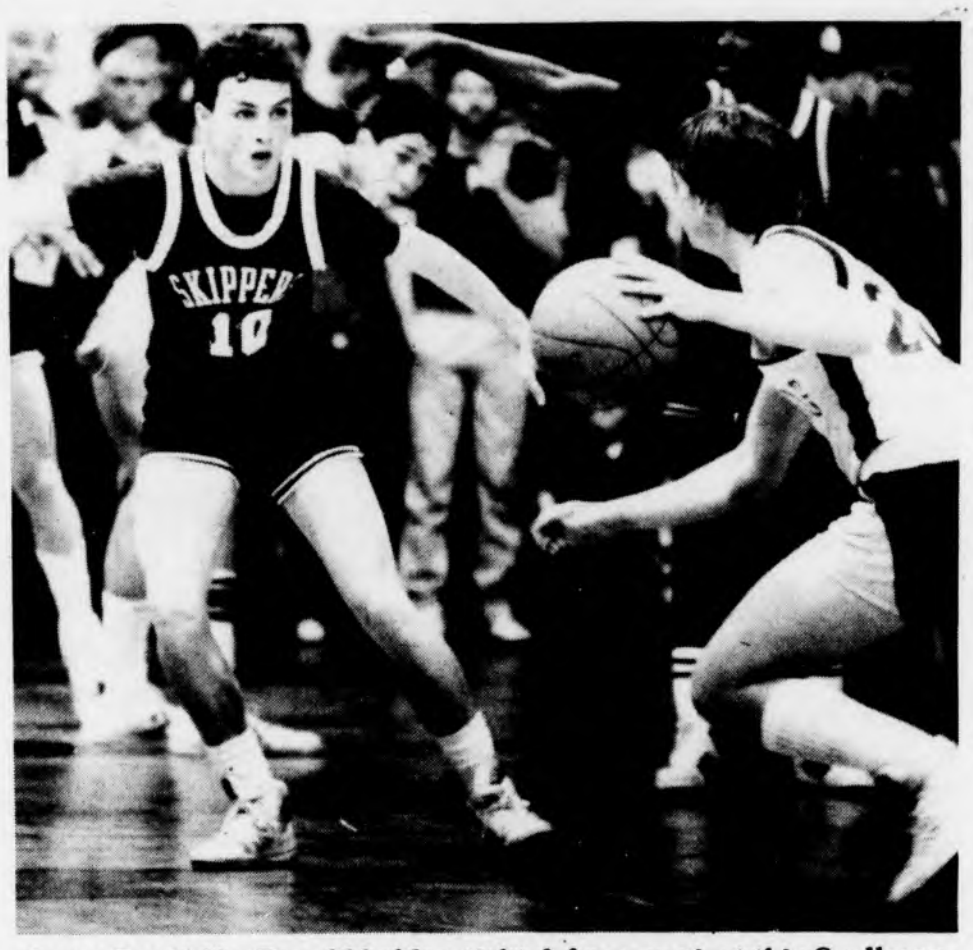
Cohasset's worst shipwreck remembered

By David Wadsworth
Historical Society Curator

Oct. 7, 1849, two large sailing vessels carrying Irish Irish emigrants to Boston neared the Massachusetts coast. They were the brigs "Kathleen" and "St. John," both of British registry.

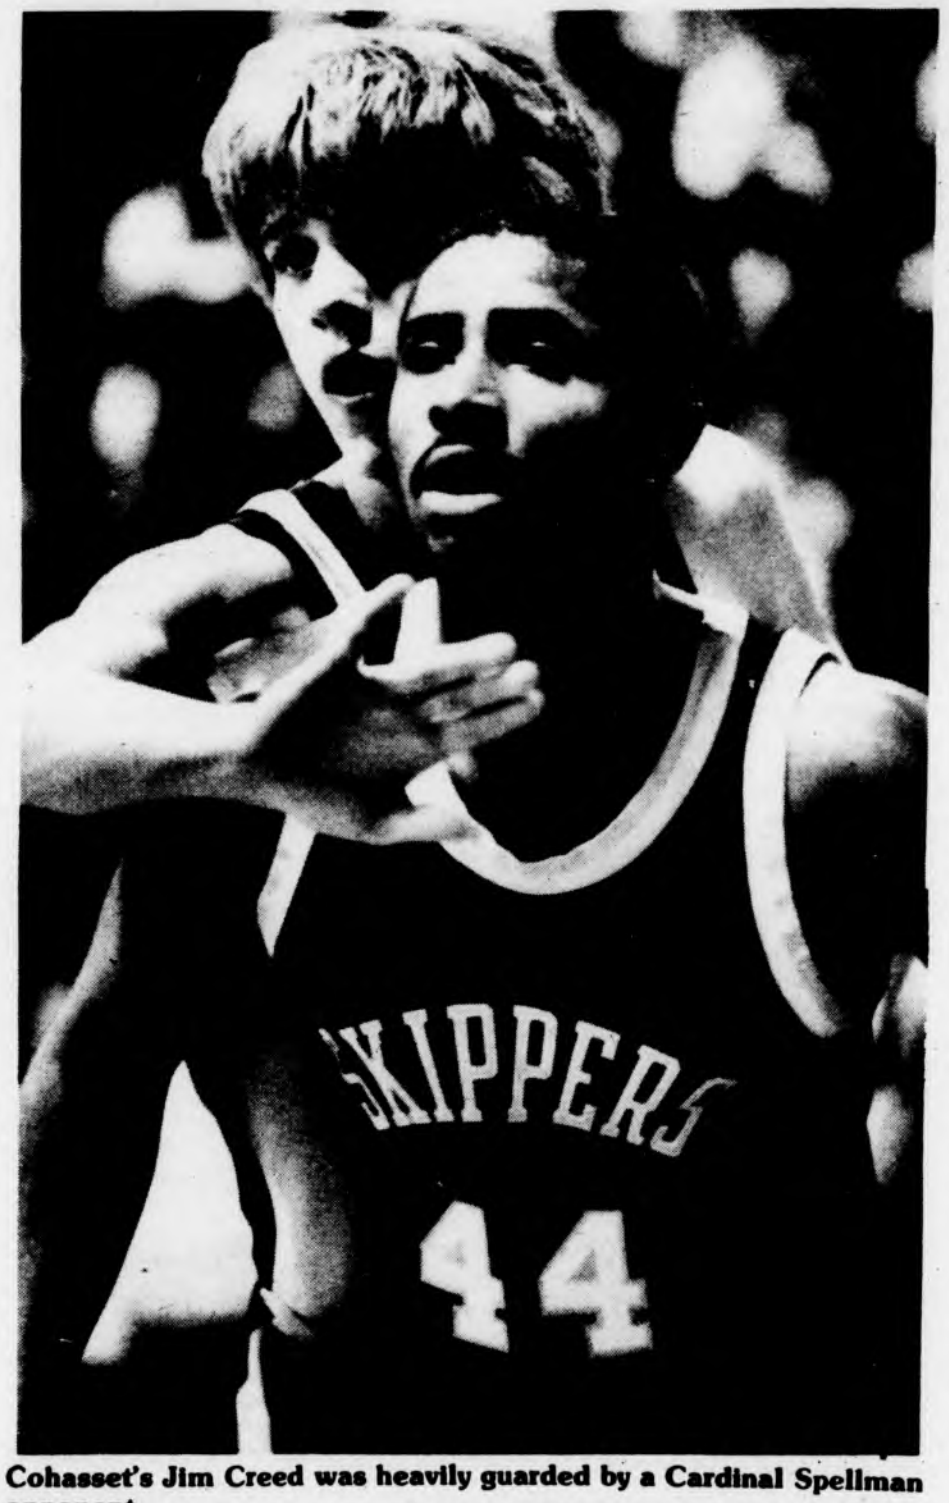
The "St. John" recently sailed from Galway, Ireland, and its passengers and crew were from the Galway area.

As the two ships neared the approach to Boston Harbor, they were caught in a raging northeast storm which drove them perilously close to the dangerous rocks and ledges of Cohasset's shore.



"Kathleen" was the first of the two to be driven into the hazardous shallows, but with that peculiar fate which spares one vessel but destroys another, she drifted undamaged into the entrance of Cohasset Harbor.

Not so fortunate was the "St. John," which struck a rock near the still unfinished new lighthouse at Minot's Ledge.



"St. John" briefly drifted free, then crashed headlong into the most dangerous of Cohasset's sea ledges, a jagged rock called the Grampus. It was at the Grampus

Shamrocks and green carnations will be in vogue on Saturday when another St. Patrick's Day rolls around. It's not only in the Emerald Isle where white-washed cottages dot the green countryside that corned beef and cabbages will appear on many a table. Irish or not, we all like a taste of the their traditional food and this is the time for a recipe from Patricia Nolan called appropriately enough

IRISH BREAD

1 c. raisins
1½ c. all-purpose flour
1½ tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 c. sugar
2 T lard (shortening)
3/4 c. milk
1 egg
3 tsp. caraway seeds
Nuts and fruits (optional)

Boil raisins for 3 min.; drain and dust lightly with a little of the flour. Sift together the remaining flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Rub in the shortening with hands. Add milk, egg, caraway, raisins, nuts and fruits (if desired) and stir to combine. Pour into a greased and floured loaf pan. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven for 1 hour, approx.

As pasta is to Italian cooking, baked beans to the Yankees and flan to the Spanish, so we think of potatoes, carrots, parsnips and other root vegetables as staples in the Irish diet. A popular appetizer these days are potato skins which are being served in restaurants and are surprisingly easy to serve at home. There's a bonus, too, for when you prepare potato skins for a nutritious snack, the pulp may be served in a meal. First scrub and prick four large baking potatoes. Bake in 425 degree oven 40 to 60 min. Cool. Cut into quarters lengthwise and scoop out the pulp with a spoon, leaving a ¼" thick shell. To make more easily, I must confess I buy the frozen shells and then prepare as follows:

SOUR CREAM AND ONION SKINS

1/2 c. shredded cheddar cheese
1 8-oz. carton sour cream dip withFrench onion
4 slices bacon, crisp-cooked, drained and crumbled
Season skins with salt and pepper. Place skins on unheated rack of broiler pan; broil 5" from heat 7 min., or until golden. Top with cheese; broil 1 min. Top skins with sour cream and crumbled bacon. Makes 16.

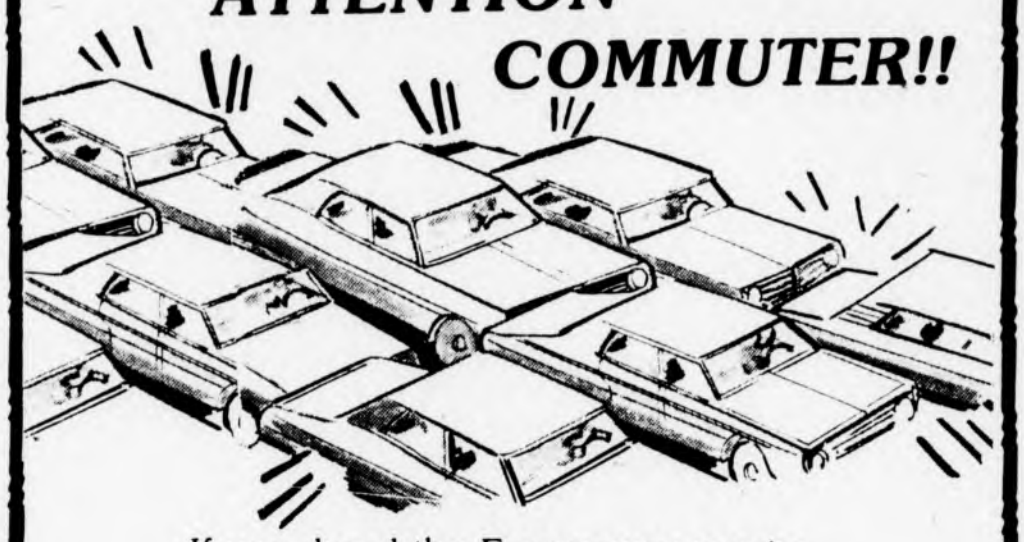
PARMESAN POTATOES

3 T butter or margarine, melted
1/4 c. grated Parmesan cheese
1/8 tsp. garlic powder
Dash ground red pepper
Place skins in 13 x 9 x 2" baking pan. Bake in 325 degree oven for 20 min. Brush insides of skins with butter or margarine. Sprinkle cheese, garlic powder and pepper over skins. Bake 10 to 15 min. more, or until crisp. Makes 16.

Those who have visited the Emerald Isles know how engaging the Irish can be and how they are apt to give a blessing by way of a greeting. Many have been sent on their way with the poetic words: "May you have warm words on a cold evening, a full moon on a dark night and a smooth road all the way to your door." I'm afraid I'm more apt to greet a friend who has just returned from a trip with the words: "Did you bring back a recipe?" So it was that when Peggy Beals went abroad, she was thoughtful enough to share this recipe for

SCOTCH OAT CAKES

1 c. sifted flour
1 T sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1/3 c. shortening
1 3/4 c. rolled oats
1/4 c. wheat germ
1/2 c. milk



Mix flour, sugar, salt, baking powder. Blend in oatmeal, wheat germ, shortening. Pour in milk and mix until sticky. (NOTE: Use hands to mix—it's easier and oatmeal and milk are great for the skin, Peggy says). Divide dough into eight balls, roll fairly thin on floured board. Cut each round part way through into wedges. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 to 20 min., or until crisp and light brown. Peggy writes: "These are not cookies. They were served at breakfast and are good with butter and marmalade as an alternate to toast."

A charter flight is any non-scheduled flight that is fully booked by a single organization. As the charter operation, an organization buys 100 percent of the seats on a plane. Simply stated, the airline is responsible for flying the plane to a specified destination on a specified date, while filling the plane is up to the charter operator. Travel agents usually help in this respect, the biggest plus for a traveler is that charters cost a lot less because operators do not have to worry about scheduled flights that must depart regardless of the number of passengers on board. As a result, charter operators typically fill their planes and pass the savings on to the passengers. Lastly, travelers benefit in that charters travel to desitnations most in demand.

Call COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER for assistance with your charter plans. Providing you with the best vacation deal for your money is our goal. How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two- and three-bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free St., one mile to our entrance. Call 740-1500.

Warren S. Pratt of Red Gate Lane has announced his candidacy for re-election as a member of the Board of Assessors.

Pratt has served on the board for fifteen years, nine of them as chairman. In announcing his candidacy Mr. Pratt said: "Through this service I have developed an understanding of the complexities of property assesment which I believe merits the confidence and support of the townspeople."

He added when first elected to the board in 1969 the total valuation of all real estate in the town was just over $20 million dollars.

In 1977 the figure rose to $98 million which was more nearly in line with true market value at that time.

In January 1983, the Assessors signed a contract with Appraisal Consultants of New England as required by the state.

This work has been completed and the total value of all town real estate is nearly $325 million.

Pratt has attended courses offered by the Association of Massachusetts Assessors at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Pratt, a Cohasset native was Vice President and a Director of the former D. S. Kennedy Company. Now retired, he lives at 56 Red Gate Lane with his wife, Leona.

THE ANION SCIENCE

The first conditioners were made of animal fats to coat the hair and produce an illusion of shiny, healthy hair. Today conditioners are made of carbohydrates, mineral oils, waxes, and fancy named animal fats to coat the hair and produce an illusion of shiny, healthy hair.

Little has changed!

Cosmetic Weight is any substance applied to the hair that is non-water soluble such as oils, lanolins, balsams, or paraffins. Products that contain Cosmetic Weight leave residue on the hair shaft. Because these products are non-water soluble, each time shampoo or conditioner is applied another layer is left behind slowly causing a build-up.

The solution is Cosmetic Strip. Cosmetic Strip removes cosmetic build-up from the cuticles of the hair. Made from enzymes are programmed only to attach and remove wax, oils, balsams and lanolins from the cuticle of the hairstrand.

this unique shampoo was formulated to clean and bind hair without the need for artificial shiners or coaters to give the appearance of healthy hair. Using a process called Ionic Exchange, it is able to fill voids in hair during the shampoo process; therefore, eliminating the need for additional products such as moisturizers, conditioners and finishing rinses.

Reflections Styling Lotion

The ultimate in styling for control body and shine

Reflections creates a moisture barrier to lock sets in and moisture out, producing holding power without flaking or itching.

Reflection acquired the name simply from the results it produces. Reflecting moisture to produce lasting hold. Reflecting dirt, because it contains no oils or waxes, producing cleaner and healthier hair and less damage from mechanical heat (blow dryer, electric rollers, and curling irons).

Enzymatic Binder

Enzymatic Binder is recommended for critically damaged hair in four basic uses:

1. As a void filler.
2. As a chemical additive.
3. As a styling lotion.
4. As a protector from thermal styling tools.

Density Modifier

Density Modifier is a completely revolutionary product and a first in our industry. It is an enzyme controlled filler and density modifier formulated to add strength and volume to baby fine hair during perm waving processing. This results in a thicker, stronger, longer lasting curl with little or no after perm dryness. Used with any manufacturer's perm, this unique product penetrates and fills in voids inside the hair strand by building a natural, organic fiber that holds the hair at its maximum expanded volume. The neutralizer of the perm closes the cuticles, locking in permanently, hair that is three to five times thicker.

Enzymolysis

Enzymolysis is a replacement for hyrogen peroxide. By using enzymes as a chemical processor in colors and bleaches, the damage factor created by hydrogen explosions are eliminated, producing: natural shine, cambability, less cuticle damage and more internal strength.

Arne Gjesteby

Businessman Arne Gjesteby has announced his candidacy for the three year term on the Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners.

He is president and owner of Klausen-Gestby Co., a ship supply company located in Boston.

Gjesteby, who lives with his wife, Martha, at 81 Old Pasture Road, received his law degree from Oslo University in 1950, and was admitted to the Norwegian bar the same year.

His further study for an M.B.A. at Northeastern University was finished in 1956.

During the war in 1944, Gjesteby escaped from Norway, (then under the German occupation) joined the Norwegian forces in exile, and was selected for pilot training.

Gjesteby is a member of the Cohasset Ambulance Study Committee, and is also a member of the Cohasset Rotary Club, where he currently holds the office of treasurer.

Some of the concerns of the Water Commission, Gjesteby said, are the protection of the water supply from pollution and the continued improvement and regular maintenance of the distribution system.

He said that his business experience will be a very valuable asset for cost effective Water Department management.

The Gjestebys are the parents of four children. He has been a home owner and taxpayer in Cohasset since 1961.

Doris Golden

At the reception held at the home of Dr. Patrick and Mrs. Morrissey on Beach St. Cohasset, Sunday afternoon, a large enthusiastic gathering heard Doris Golden, a candidate for selectman discuss the following issues.

She felt that leadership and direction were lacking on the present Board of Selectm n. If elected she would attempt to fill this void by taking positive, rational positions on the major issues and resolving these issues without resorting to confrontation politics.

She cited the recent dispute between Firechief and Firefighters and compared it to situations which were handled much more diplomatically during her tenure as chairman of the Cohasset School Committee.

She said that even on issues where the selectman cannot determine the outcome they should speak out so people are aware of the problems and their consequences.

She discussed many of the problems which exist in the town today, such as sewerage, the orderly development of Rte. 3A, and the low income and elderly housing problem.

She feels these problems will not be solved overnight, but through group action and strong leadership through selectman, sensible equitable results will be obtained.

She concluded her discussion on a bright note, adding Cohasset is a great town possessed of a magnificent landfall and an unequalled populace.

However, she stressed it can and will be an even greater town through proper leadership and participation of all of its citizens.

Water Dept. receives grant offer

William Montuori, Board of Water Commissioners Chairman, announced the Water Department has received a state grant offer ($224,335).

This money will be used to construct new water mains on Border Street, Joy Place, Beach Street and Jerusalem Road and constitutes Phase III of the ongoing rehabilitation of the water distribution system.

A prior grant of $174,612 is being used to fund Phase II of the improvements now under design. The Phase II construction of new mains on Atlantic Avenue and Margin Street is expected to begin this spring.

Other grants received in the past four years include funds for a leak detection study, purchase of instrumentation equipment for leak detection and funds for assisting in the payment of the interest on our treatment plant debt.

The total grant to the Water Department approved by the state in the last year is in excess of $900,000.

According to Montuori, commissioners are continuing to press and work for new funding programs which will allow the town to continue improving the system.

High on our priority is funding legislation which will allow for the replacement of water meters.

Tiger Cubs offer boys a fun time

The following is the first in a three-part series. --Ed.

By Judy Gilman

Say "Boy Scouts" and the average listener tends to think of uniforms, merit badges and songs 'round the campfire. But in the last few years the Boy Scouts of America, as they are officially known, have broadened their horizons in an effort to appeal to a wider age range and to youth from various areas and backgrounds.

The newest Scout program is Tiger Cubs, geared to second grade boys. Unlike the traditional Cub Scout den and pack, this idea is different in many respects.

It's a one-on-one adult-child program, with many of the activities being done in the home, and with a monthly meeting of all the participants coming together. The second-grade level is younger than traditional Scout programs in the past. There are 16 "big ideas" projects to choose from but no levels of achievements and no badges.

Market research (yes, even the Boy Scouts do research these days) showed the need and desire for a younger program that was more family-oriented. These needs, combined with a lifestyle that often is jam-packed with activities already, makes the one-on-one part of the program flexible with a particular family's schedule. And the once-a-month meetings of the Tiger Cub group (between four and eight boys and their adult compatriots) are informal and unstructured in groups kept small enough so any home can host the Tigers.

The Tiger Cubs is, of course, a feeder program for the traditional Cub Scout program. After a year in Tiger Cubs (in most cases, the "year" runs the duration of the school year), the boy graduates to the more structured atmosphere of Cub Scouts. And Boy Scout leadership hopes the adult Tiger Cub will also follow along into the ranks of Scouting.

The "Big Ideas" of Tiger Cubs includes 16 areas of interest, including "Know Your Community," "Fitness and Sports," "Family Entertainment" and "Prepare for Emergencies." Suggested activities are included for the Tiger Cubs, but all are free to improvise their own activities within the scope of the "ideas."

Of particular practical interest is a work booklet that is produced for the Tiger Cub program but that can be used by other groups and individuals, as well. It's called "Prepared for Today" and is a series of exercises for children designed to make them self-reliant when they are at home. In an age of countless articles on "coping with latchkey children," this publication by the BSA is a practical exercise in the survival skills of the 1980s.

Included in the book are "Prepared to Be Home Alone" (knowing emergency phone numbers, what to do when a stranger calls on the phone or comes to the door when you're alone, what to do when leaving the house), "Prepared to Fix Something to Eat" (planning meals, knowing basic food groups, preparing something for your family or yourself), "Prepared for Home Safety" (know where the main water valve and the fuse box or circuit breakers are, plan a fire escape route), "Prepared to Know Your Neighborhood" (learning how to get to places like the drug store, the police station, the school, the doctor, the library, giving directions to get home, learning about dangerous places in the neighborhood), "Prepared to Care for Young Children" (teaching toddlers simple tasks, taking them to the library), and "Prepared for Problem Solving" (situations like the following: "Chris and little brother Sal are home alone in the afternoon. A man knocks on the door and says he wants to come in and read the meter. He does not have on a uniform. What would you do if you were Chris?").

The Boy Scouts of America has recognized that their programs must tailor themselves to the needs of the boys they are serving. And Tiger Cubs is just one of those ways the BSA has hit upon to keep the best of the traditional and build on it.

For more information on this and other programs of the Boy Scouts of America, contact the Old Mills District office at 828-8360. Boy Scout activities at all ages are active on the South Shore. The Boy Scouts receive 25 percent of their funding from the United Way but must raise the remainder to fund programs, and maintain camps and keep the whole show running.

Adult Scout and committee members are currently involved in their Sustaining Membership Enrollment drive throughout the Old Mills District. Individual troops and packs have fund-raisers as well, but Sustaining Memberships keep the whole Boy Scout structure running smoothly. For more information on this or any other aspect of Scouting, call 828-8360. Bill Roberts, the executive director for the district, will be delighted to talk with you.

. . . dance instruction . . . candidate's night . . . METCO dinner

Students at the Joseph Osgood School have a new instructor this month. She is a professional dancer, choreographer and teacher who will let the children discover through experience that dance is "different, interesting and sort of fun."

Glenda Medeiros of Boston commutes to the Osgood School Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, where she divides her day between working with the children and working on her own choreography during "studio time." Medeiros is preparing for a dance-video performance for presentation at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, May 10. Students will have the opportunity to view her "process" of discovery and invention that leads to a new dance piece during their visits to her studio (the gym).

After a few get acquainted weeks, Medeiros will present two school assemblies to give students a sense of her work as a choreographer and performer and to see her as an artist, and discover what it means to her.

Medeiros' experience is extensive and varied. She received a B.A. in theatre arts and psychology from The Catholic University of America and a Masters in Education from Lesley College.

Her choreography work for children includes commissions from Just Around the Corner Theatre Co. for "Riot in the Kitchen," " y= ca = t" for New England Life Hall, "Street Beat" for Alley Theatre, Cambridge, and "S'Cool" for Boston English High School.

She teaches dance two days a week at Wellesley College and last summer won a fellowship to teach at the Atlantic Center for the Visual and Performing Arts, England. She was the jazz and basic dance teacher at Shady Hill School for several years.

Medeiros was co-founder and director of Jassin', a two-woman theatre/dance company from 1978-80 and now directs her own company under the name Glendance. Her approach to choreography, performance and dance is unique. She communicates ideas through dance, combining a fascination with human movement with music and movement drawn from theatre, rock and roll, nature and traditional dance forms.

Some of her adult choreography work includes a solo improvisation at the Berklee Performance Center, a solo and work for other dancers at New England Life Hall, a duet in collaboration for cable t.v., a multi-media event with steam, sculpture, masks and video and scripts for dancers at the M.I.T. Center for Advanced Visual Studies, two water pieces, and commissions for the Ballet Dance Theatre, Boston Philharmonic, Cambridge Arts Council, and Articulture: Dance New England Series.

The Osgood School received a grant from the Institute for the Arts, Boston for Medeiros' residency work, which will last for seven weeks.

STUDENT DRAWINGS

In the current exhibition of the fifth annual All New England Juried Show, "Vision of Spring," at the South Shore Art Center, Cohasset High School and staff member Thomas Lucas has two drawings, "Norfolk Pine" and "Cracked Window," which were selected for exhibition.

His drawing of "Norfolk Pine" was awarded an Honorable Mention. Mr. Lucas is one of the original charter members.

Mrs. Helen Goodwin of Cohasset visited Mrs. Contis' two High School Pre-Chef classes and demonstrated how to professionally decorate a cake.

The students had made cakes the previous day and Mrs. Goodwin decorated one of them explaining each step.

She then assisted students decorating their own cakes.

Some very professional-looking cakes resulted and were enjoyed by the students and their friends after school.

SCHOLARSHIP INFORMATION

The Pell (previously known as BEOG) Grant Program, is a Federal Aid program designed to provide financial assistance to those who need it to attend post high school educational institutions. The amount of the grant is determined on the basis of your financial resources. The awards could range between $200 and $1,800 and, unlike a loan, do not have to be repaid. A student planning to attend a college, vocational, technical or career training institution, even on a part-time basis, may be eligible for a Pell award. In order to apply for this financial aid program, students should complete an F.A.F. form now available in the Guidance Office.

National Direct Student Loans: A program that provides loans for students with need. When the student leaves college, repayment of the loan with percent interest begins. To qualify for this program, an F.A.F. must be completed.

The College Work Study Program: Provides jobs for students with demonstrated financial need. To qualify for this program, an F.A.F. must be submitted.

Ingrid Anderson, a member of the Junior class at Cohasset High School, was recently selected to be a member of the state senate during Student Government Day proceedings in Boston on April 6.

During that eventful day Ingrid will take the seat of Senator Allan R. McKinnon, representing the Norfolk and Plymouth Senatorial District.

She was selected by her high school classmates to represent her school in the Student Government Day program.

It is sponsored by the Bureau of Student Community

Cohasset roadrace

Plans for the eighth Annual Cohasset Roadrace have begun. The race will be held — April 1 at 1 p.m.

This is the eighth annual race and is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club.

The proceeds from the race go to the Club's Scholarship Fund; which exceeded $11,000 last year, to local high school students.

This year's event will feature T-Shirts to all runners, as well as refreshments and entertainment after the race. The Foxboro Company will be assisting in tabulations and administration. The race is limited to 800 runners in order to ensure manageability and safety for all.

Last year many applicants had to be refused, so it is necessary to apply early. The entry fee is $5, applications are available at local merchants or by sending a self-addressed envelope to: Road Race, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Reading and study group

Armen Dedekian will appear at the Scituate Town Library Thursday, March 22 at 1:15 p.m. as the guest of the Scituate Library Reading and Study Group.

Dedekian, Russian language teacher at Buckingham Browne and Nichols School in Cambridge is of Armenian parentage and received his primary and secondary education in Armenia, USSR. During his years in the Soviet Union he was involved in organized sports.

He holds degrees in Russian and Russian Literature from Boston University and Brown University.

Since 1971 Mr. Dedekian has led numerous professional and student groups to the USSR. According to Dedekian, his most challenging trip was the Buckingham Browne and Nichols School's 44-member Russian Dance Group, sponsored by the Citizen Exchange Corps. The group performed in Moscow (which included a television appearance), Leningrad, Sachi, Erevan and Tallina.

During his trips to Russia, Mr. Dedekian has met regularly with officials of several Soviet sports federations. His knowledge of Soviet life and connections in the USSR opened doors which would ordinarily be closed to other foreigners and most Soviets.

Dedekian has lectured frequently in the Boston area on Life In The Soviet Union and recently was heard on the Larry King Show where he spoke about why Russia holds off the West.

Following Mr. Dedekian's lecture March 22 there will be a question and answer period.

The program will take place in the function room on the lower level of the library. The public is invited to attend.

Local history contest

Winners of the local history contest sponsored by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library will be announced at a program for families in the Children's Room of the library Monday, March 19 at 7:30 p.m.

David Wadsworth, curator of the Cohasset Historical Society and writer of numerous articles on local history, will provide program of interesting lore of Minot's Light.

The prize winning entries plus a 4' x 6' map board which highlights 50 points of historical, environmental and cultural interest on the South Shore will be displayed in the Children's Room through the end of March.

The map board which was crafted by Lindsey and Peter Guild and Lucy and Tim Marsac is loaned to the library by the Cohasset Garden Club.

BUSINESS MAN SPEAKS TO CHS CLASS

Dick Straly from Cards & Shards in Cohasset recently spoke to the Business Management class at the high school. He began the discussion with an overview of his business, its scope, and the number and responsibilities of his employees.

He emphasized that since the business is established, he is able to be successful with a small amount of advertising. The customers for Cards and Shards come from all over the South Shore, and represent a diversified clientele.

He gave the class a detailed explanation of merchandise turnover, which means how may times in a given period can you entirely replace the stock of an item.

Gram, you were the good old days

By Lois Martin

We were sitting around, three of us, yammering comfortably about uncritical world events, when somehow our grandmothers came up.

No one would accuse the gathering of being lost for words at the outset but with this fresh topic, we were regaled into years ago when we were precious little granddaughters, gleaning love, warmth and memories from those older women who were important in our lives.

One grandmother to a member of the group lives still in Georgia, alone in the family home, still in charge at 97. There, said her granddaughter, she and her husband had been together, never apart for more than three hours for more than 66 years. The limited separation was when Gramp stayed home while Gram went to church.

PATCHES

He died a while ago at the age of 92. And that ended the career when the two of them went out to the fields every day to plant or to harvest everything from corn to tobacco. The early afternoon was spent in separate but nearby rockers as the grandmother controlled the Georgian heat with an elegant fan decorated with a picture of her church.

Another in the threesome said her grandmother always felt inspired to do a lot with her hair. She and her sister visited Gram and got the quarterly or semi-annual "pixie."

A pixie cut could surely mean different things to a grandmother and the female relative two generations younger. The girl didn't always feel she came away from the experience with an edge on glamor. When Gram listened to protests about a pixie, she'd resort to her alternative, a Toni home permanent. And when the Toni produced more frizz than curls, it was back to the pixie.

Wonderful, we laughed, absolutely wonderful.

I was telling them, as I've done redundantly over the years to anyone who'd listen, about my grandmother's morning ritual. How she'd rise before others for the bathing, for the putting on of the water to boil for rolled oats, how she'd comb those long wavy gray tresses with the everlasting tortoise shell comb, how no one was to mention having seen her gentle preparation for the day.

We were, her small guests, to stay quietly tucked in beds until we smelled the bacon. That got applied to a skillet when Gram had "faired her toilette," hair bunned, apron donned, handkerchief in its place in her neat cotton dress.

For one thing I mention this conversation because it is a rare indulgence to lapse into little girlhood and sing praises of one's Grandmother. Further, recognizing the moving ahead of generations, it is entirely likely that we three who spoke of our grandparents shall be one of those.

So we need reminding. The viable influence imposed forever on a grandchild is the unique privilege of a grandparent. Neither child nor adult should be denied the relationship that is unconditionally accepting. Grandchildren find little fault in grandparents, flaws if any become special trademarks of character or eccentricity. And the grandchild in Gram's or Gramp's eyes is fine 'just as she is.'

It is that acceptance in human relationships that is found among no other people.

If you have a grandparent still, give him or her a hug if that's possible . . . a warm thought if it isn't. And if you are a grandparent, claim time this weekend to impose your important self in the mind of your grandchild forever. Give them something wonderful to talk about 20 years from now by being your self today.

Art Center children's courses listed

Young artists who would like to sharpen their artistic skills should enroll in the South Shore Art Center's spring classes for children.

Two classes on the spring schedule are designed to appeal to students of all levels of artistic ability. The Center, 103 Ripley Rd., is offering Children's Art Workshop I for ages six to eight and Children's Art Workshop II for nine to twelve year olds.

Taught by Serena Brundige, the workshop for younger children will meet on Fridays from 3:30 to 5 p.m. beginning April 13 and will emphasize color, design, observation and imagination. Students will learn sketching, drawing and painting and will most often work from nature.

The workshop for older students, meeting on Wednesdays from 3:30 to 5 p.m. starting April 18, will cover the same basic areas but designed for a higher level. This workshop is taught by Susan Rodgerson.

Both instructors bring an extensive art background to their respective classes. Brundige has a BFA in art education with emphasis on special education from Massachusetts College of Art and has most recently taught in the Hingham Elementary Schools. An award-winning artist, Rodgerson studied at the Museum of Fine Arts School and has received a diploma from the Art Institute of Boston.

Advanced registration is required for these courses as for Center courses and workshops. The offerings in the children's department have attracted students from many South Shore towns. The most recent vacation drop-in for children attracted 117 students from Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Hull and Hanover.

The "drop-in" is just what its name implies--an informal opportunity for students to come to the Center to work on daily artistic activities, directed by one of the Center's instructors. The next "drop-in" is scheduled for the April vacation, April 16-20.

Cherry blossoms, springtime and Washington, D.C. are synonymous with one another. Travellers may enjoy springtime in Washington by participating in the South Shore Art Center's "Spring Arts Weekend, Washington, D.C."

Registrations are currently being taken by Cerel's Travel in Natick for the Washington trip Thursday through Sunday, April 26 through April 29. Registration forms along with a $50 deposit are due by March 17. Cost of the trip is $225 per person, double occupancy; $209, triple; and $269 single.

The fare includes round trip motor coach transportation to and from central South Shore locations; three nights at the DuPont Plaza Hotel; one box lunch and other amenities. Options available at additional cost are two gourmet dinners.

Visitors will have an opportunity to tour the Cocoran Gallery, the National Portrait Gallery, Phillips Gallery and the National Gallery. The group will have a unique opportunity to tour Dumbarton Oaks, an example of lovely 19th Century Georgian architecture, and view its Byzantine and Pre-Columbian collections as well as stroll through its beautiful garden.

The tour offers a chance to browse through the Pavilion, D.C.'s latest restoration in the Old Post Office. The Pavilion itself is an example of fine architecture and now houses exciting shops and fine food restaurants.

The four-day trip further includes stops at the latest exhibits which may be in D.C. at the time and a sightseeing excursion featuring stops at the Viet Nam, Washington, Lincoln and Jefferson Memorials; the Kennedy Center and more.

For further information, call Cerel's or the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The fare includes a tax-deductible contribution to the Center.

Appeals board approves septic field

The Board of Appeals approved a special permit to C & L Realty Trust for construction and maintenance of a septic field at Cedarledge Village.

The Board determined a portion of the septic field for the Cedarledge Village development lies within the Flood Plain and Watershed Protection District.

A special permit under Section 9.7.8 of the Zoning By-law may be granted to construct and maintain a portion of the septic system within the Flood Plain and Watershed Protection District if certain conditions are satisfied.

The land is not subject to flooding and is not unsuitable for the proposed use because of drainage conditions.

The proposed use of the land and change in grade will not obstruct or divert flood flow or reduce natural flood storage capacity, to the extent of raising the high water level elsewhere.

The septic system will not cause pollution or otherwise endanger property or the public health.

The proposed use of the land will not derogate substantially from the purposes of the Flood Plain and Watershed Protection District as set forth in the zoning by-law or the purpose of the by-law.

In further support of this finding is the unanimous support of the subject application by all other responding boards and officers of the Town whose responsibilities include furtherance of the purposes enumerated in a section of the zoning by-law.

Judy believes she can contribute an element of professionalism to the committee and provide a dual perspective as a parent and an experienced educator.

Judy has lived in Cohasset since 1977. She is married to Dan Volungis and they have two children, Tara (11), and Dean (7). Judy has served as accountant/bookkeeper for her husband's company, Air Source Express, Inc. for the past seven years.

and implement the long range plans and programs the Cohasset Public Schools will need to address contemporary problems. While I advocate computer literacy, I realize there are no high-tech substitutes for the basics such as reading writing and math. With this in mind, I advocate use of computers as drill, remedial and tutorial tools.

"Additionally, I would expect to bring the unique perspective and objectivity of a non-parent vitally interested in our schools and the quality of life in our community."

that the long voyage across the sea ended for 99 of "St. John's" passengers and crew, for the vessel broke apart and sank within the space of an hour.

Desperate attempts by its crew to cut away masts and rigging failed to free the ship, and when the first small boat was launched it vanished into the sea.

Finally the ship's longboat was successfully lowered and was filled by the captain, some of the crew and a few fortunate passengers.

Those aboard the longboat, and a small number who clung to floating wreckage were to be the only survivors of the "St. John's" total company.

Meanwhile, ashore, Cohasset residents gathered along the ocean's edge to witness helplessly the disaster taking place offshore. They had no way of knowing the number of people aboard the sinking vessel and could barely make out its outline through the flying spray and rolling breakers.

At Cohasset Harbor, the town's volunteer lifesaving crew went into action.

Stationed at Whitehead point was the lifeboat of the Massachusetts Humane Society. Its crew, all local volunteers, took the 30 foot open boat out into tumultuous seas and gale winds in an heroic effort to reach the stricken vessel.

Rowing towards the site of the wreck the lifesavers caught sight of the ship's longboat coming toward the shore. Those manning the longboat neither spoke with nor made any signal to the lifesavers, but continued their flight to safety without pause.

Interpreting that silence to indicate that the longboat contained the entire compliment of the sinking ship, the lifesavers turned about to assist the nearby "Kathleen," itself wallowing helplessly at the entrance to Cohasset Harbor and flying distress flags.

Reaching "Kathleen," the volunteer crew guided it to a sheltered spot where the big vessel grounded itself safely on the sandy shore.

By that time, word had reached shore of the plight of many more passengers at the Grampus. A second and smaller lifeboat was launched in a final effort to reach the scene of the disaster. Struggling hopelessly against wind and sea, it was unable to make headway, and finally turned about, its crew utterly exhausted.

The few survivors of the "St. John" were housed briefly at one of Cohasset's shoreline hotels nearby, and when they left there remained behind the Captain's writing desk and one small crude trunk, the property of a passenger.

Both relics may be seen at the Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum, where they form part of the Society's collection of items salvaged from local shipwrecks. The total number of survivors from the "St. John" was 22. Two days later, Henry David Thoreau visited the scene of the disaster at the Cohasset shore.

His description of the dismal aftermath appears as Chapter One of his book "Cape Cod."

About 45 of the victims found their final resting place in a mass grave at Cohasset's Central Cemetery, where today a 20 foot high Celtic Cross of granite commemorates Cohasset's worst shipwreck.

The cross was placed there in 1914 by the Ancient Order of Hibernians in a ceremony which saw the main address given by the Governor of Massachusetts, David I. Walsh.

Of the numerous shipwrecks occurring at the Cohasset Rocks during the Age of Sail, the wreck of the "St. John" demonstrates the most vividly the dangers and hazards faced by those who ventured upon the seas during that historic time.

Purim is celebrated with costumes & stories

Purim is a holiday featuring costumes, story-telling, feasting and the joyful celebration of the deliverance of the Jewish people from tyranny and annihilation.

The story of Purim, contained in the Scroll of Esther (Megillat Esther), took place over 2,000 years ago. The beautiful Jewish woman Esther was selected to become the wife of King Ahashuerus, the ruler of Persia. Queen Esther, with the help of her uncle Mordechai, managed to foil the evil plot of Haman, the King's prime minister who wanted to destroy the Jewish people. Purim cleebrates the blotting out of Haman, the archetypal anti-Semite.

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main Street, Hingham, will begin its celebration of Purim during its Family Shabbat Service Friday, March 16, starting at 7:30 p.m.

The Sha'aray Shalom Players will present "The Story of Purim," a lively adaptation from the Megillah of Esther.

Sunday, March 18, the congregation will hold its annual Purim Carnival, featuring a costume parade at 11:30 a.m., followed by food, games and prizes from noon to 2:30 p.m. Please call the Temple at 749-8103 for further information.

Sunday, March 18, the Social Concerns Committee of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, continues its Film Festival with the presentation of the Academy Award winning film, "The Garden of the Finzi-Continis." The film will be shown at 4 p.m. at the Loring Hall Cinema, 65 Main Street, Hingham.

"The Garden of the Finzi-Continis" is set in Italy in 1938, when Mussolini's anti-Semitic edicts began to isolate Jews from their communities. Among them were the Finzi-Continis, an aristocratic Jewish family forced for the first time to acknowledge the world beyond the boundaries of its well-guarded estate.

Directed by Vittorio DeSica, the movie stars Dominique Sanda, Lino Capolicchio, and Helmut Berger. For those who have not purchased a family subscription, tickets will be on sale at the door for $4, adults and $2 for children under 12 years old. For further infomation, call the Temple at 749-8103.

First Parish Sunshine Fund

Purpose: To make available emergency funds for people within our community, and to bring the First Parish family closer together as we perform services for each other.

Plan; During the period from March 4 to Easter, April 22, each family or member is asked to provide and/or purchase a service. Funds received for services will be collected on Easter Sunday morning as a special offering for the Sunshine Fund. (Special envelopes will be distributed later for this purpose.)

A person or family offering a service should fill out the form and leave it at the church office. Services offered will be published in the newsletter. A person wishing to bid on the service calls the family making the offer directly and arranges to complete the transaction.

Examples of services you might offer:

CHILDREN

Shoe polishing, dog walking, babysitting, litter collection.

ADULTS

Baking, carpentry, sewing, lessons in a skill.

GROUPS

Yard raking, plan/host a party, storm window removal, painting.

Second Cong. elevator project

Project Coordinator Rich Silvia and about a dozen people met Sunday to plan the first stage of fundraising for the project: a direct appeal to the church's members and friends which will take place soon after Easter. Four persons will produce a brochure describing the project; mailings, along with personal and telephone contact with the church's members, will invite every family to contribute with gifts, memorial gifts, and pledges.

Some major gifts — in the $5,000 to $10,000 category — will be needed in order to reach the goal, and that a two- to three-year pledge payment period will permit most individuals and families to plan a significant gift to the project.

Meanwhile, the church's plan for a ramp entrance to Bates Hall (replacing the side steps) was given the approval of the Historic District Commission. The Commission noted that while the appearance of the building entrance will be substantially altered by the plan, the advantage of providing easy access for church and community functions outweighed the change. Work on the ramp phase of the project will begin soon.

An important aspect of fundraising for the project will be gifts given in memory of family members and friends. Appropriate recognition of such gifts, perhaps with an honor roll of givers or a memorial plaque, was discussed briefly. The fundraising committee will meet again Sunday, March 18, at 9 a.m.

CHURCH SCHOOL

Ice cream for all who have perfect attendance (or a combination of points earned for attendance and bringing guests) in Sunday School between March 18 and Easter. Other special gifts will also be offered. In addition, the class which earns the most points (through attendance and by bringing guests) will go on a special field trip. Come this Sunday and get all the details. (Remember, children, if you are away on a Sunday and bring back a bulletin from a church you visited or are sick and bring a note from your parents, your absence is not counted.)

The Clergy speaks

Let's be careful

By the Rev. Edward T. Atkinson

In her book "Lying, Moral Choice in Public and Private Life," Sissela Bok observes, "A society, then, whose members were unable to distinguish truthful messages from deceptive ones, would collapse. But even before such a general collapse, individual choice and survival would be imperiled. The search for food and shelter could depend on no expectations from others. A warning that a well was poisoned or a plea for help in an accident would come to be ignored unless independent confirmation could be found."

Public concern over the use of EDB or ethylene dibromide is warranted, but the panic generated by front page newspaper stories and television reports of persons racing back to the supermarket to return a box of cake mix border on the ridiculous and potentially could be more harmful than the ingestion of the product itself. EDB has been used to fumigate grain since the 1940's and thereby has been in the food chain for nearly forty years. Thus, it is difficult to believe that the consumption of one more or less cake will have any measurable impact on a person's health.

The water in the well may be tainted with a poison that should be removed, but the taint is not in sufficient quantity that the next cup you drink will kill you.

Sounding the alarm too loudly when the immediate danger is minimal may therefore only serve to undermine the crucial fabric of trust among people that enables a society to function.

Simply said, eating one more cake containing an infinitesimal amount of ethylene dibromide, I suspect is less damaging to your well being than losing your faith in your fellow human beings—in the farmers, miller, grocers, and government regulators who, taken as a whole, have provided us with a food supply that is convenient, nutritious, inexpensive and plentiful and which has been keeping us all alive for an average of more than three score and ten years.

New Studio IV opens

Saturday, March 17, marks the gallery opening of the new Studio IV located at 4 Booth Hill Road in North Scituate across the street from Riddle's Food Mart.

Antiques and some sculpture will also be offered for sale. Half of the opening day proceeds will be donated to the PSO's Art Enrichment program in the Cohasset schools.

MANNING'S LITTLE PHONE BOOK

A conversation with Sen. McKinnon

By Patricia Desmond

Sen. Allan R. McKinnon said hello to the owner while the reporter walked to a table at Adam's Rib, notebook in hand.

His office had arranged his schedule to allow for an interview in Hingham at the Mariner's request.

The reporter assumed the 4 p.m. appointment would be the last of his day and not too inconvenient for the state senator who lives in Weymouth.

McKinnon exchanged greetings/words/pleasantries with two other constituents on his way to the table.

That's when he looked at his watch and mentioned that he had a meeting in Boston at 6:30. At 7:30 he was scheduled to be back in Hingham for a meeting of all the delegates to the state convention from his district.

"Politics is hard on family life," the senator commented. Sometimes he goes to meetings five nights a week and has five to eight weekend events on his calendar as well.

It's not as bad as it used to be," he said. "After you've been in office for a number of years, you can send a staff member to represent you. People don't expect you to show up at everything."

"The public has a piece of you as long as you are in politics," McKinnon said. "You have a responsibility to them when they ask you to attend things.

"It's hard to find the balance so that you'll be fair to your family and your constituents."

(Reporter's comment: It would be fairly difficult to imagine a schedule worse than five nights a week plus weekends).

So how did a nice teacher like Alan McKinnon get into politics?

"I used to tell people that I wanted to be a state senator when I grew up," McKinnon said.

His first try for public office came while still in college. He ran and lost in a bid for a seat on the Weymouth Housing Authority.

Has he been on a winning streak ever since?

Not so, the senator replied. He had been elected years ago to an open seat on the Weymouth Board of Public Works. He was also an elected assessor in Weymouth. But he had lost in an attempt back in those days to become a Weymouth selectman and he'd also lost a bid as Norfolk County Commissioner.

The senator and his wife, Anne, have four children - 24, 19, 16 and 11.

How do they feel about his job?

"I think the children feel a sense of pride," he said. "They've met people they never would have if I weren't in the Senate. The governor's been to the house . . ."

Is that former Gov. Edward King or present Gov. Michael Dukakis? the reporter asked.

The senator smiled and explained he definitely meant the present governor.

He went on to say that on Legislators Day, Dukakis held a reception for members of the legislature and their families. Anne drove into Boston for the event with their youngest child, 11-year-old Megan.

During the reception Dukakis happened to talk with Megan and mention he was happy she was there.

"Well, I had an awful tight schedule, but I made sure I fit you in," Megan told the governor. The senator added that he thinks his children have developed an awareness of what public service is about.

Since Dukakis was elected governor, McKinnon has lost four of his staff members to jobs in the governor's administration.

They have not been replaced.

"We're getting by," he said.

After 14 years in the state senate, what does he think his main achievement has been?

"I don't think it was any one thing," McKinnon began. He went on to list a series of economic development initiatives.

"None of them are sexy issues," he said explaining that one of his achievements was to be part of the task force, put together by Gov. Michael Dukakis his first time in office, that drafted legislation to eliminate the payment of "voluntary quits" in the unemployment compensation program.

Before that legislation went through, people who quit their jobs were allowed to go on unemployment.

"That probably saved business $100 million. Maybe more. It was an abuse of the unemployment system which is a direct tax on employers. Workers don't pay a dime into the system.

"I don't know why business doesn't realize what Dukakis has done for them."

During the time he was on the Commerce and Labor Committee, McKinnon said he worked on creating several important agencies like the Massachusetts Industrial Finance Agency (MIFA), the Land Bank, Massachusetts Industrial Mortgage Agency, Community Development Finance Corporation, and others.

"There were a number of things which all taken together, worked to provide more jobs in Massachusetts, McKinnon said.

"Of course, I worked with many other people on all of them," McKinnon said. "But that's how the nuts and bolts work of the legislature goes."

In the past few years, as chairman of the Insurance Committee, McKinnon's main interest has been auto insurance.

"I represent the consumer's viewpoint in the system. I've never worked in insurance and never plan to work in insurance."

He explains that he came to the insurance chairmanship as somewhat of a fluke. The last time the Senate leadership changed he was moved to Insurance "because they didn't know where else to put me."

During the King administration, McKinnon worked to defeat legislation King backed that the senator termed pro-insurance industry. The King bill passed the House and was defeated in the Senate.

"But it's very hard to regulate economic interest groups. Everyone's (in the legislature) in favor of

Musings

By John H. Cutler

☐Some folks talk at Town Meeting because they have something to say — some because they have to say something.

☐I wonder if there are still signs on the tables in Bates Hall in the Boston Public Library that read: LOW CONVERSATION PERMITTED.

☐A gem from Casey Stengel: "There comes a time in a man's life —and I've had plenty of them."

☐A recent classified ad in the Boston Globe was headed: RECEPTIONAL EXCEPTIONIST. It read: "Our receptionist is pregnant, and though she's irreplaceable, we must. We are a Boston based NE search firm that is busy and growing. We seek someone with good people skills..."

☐I've never seen the ages of a bride and bridegroom mentioned in a wedding announcement until I read in a Plymouth County newspaper that a man, aged 55, married a woman who was 64.

A conversation with Sen. McKinnon . . .

helping widows and kids. Anything for them will go through but try to get through a reform that's opposed by an economic interest group . . ."

McKinnon said one vote he is proud of came during the days of the Francis Sargent administration. Sargent had vetoed the death penalty.

"If there hadn't been 14 of us who were willing to stand up and uphold his veto the death penalty would have been passed. It was not a politically popular vote," McKinnon said.

"Still, you have to do what you think is right."

Another act put through years ago was designed to encourage employers to hire people who had been injured in on-the-job accidents.

"Employers were reluctant to hire these people because of the prior injury. Actually those people are usually more safety conscious because they have been hurt," McKinnon said.

The legislation created a limited liability for employers who hire these injured workers.

Another of the achievements McKinnon would like to add to his list is passage of a bill he's been filing to change the way no-fault auto insurance works.

The way no-fault works now is that a person injured in an auto accident cannot sue for pain and suffering unless the medical bills exceed $500. McKinnon said the figure was reasonable when no-fault was enacted in the '70s but with rising medical costs he wants the figure increased.

His bill would make it $1,000 in medical bills before a person could sue for pain and suffering. It is opposed by the Massachusetts Bar Association and the senator doesn't think its chance of passage is good without some public support.

People in Massachusetts pay more than a billion dollars a year for auto insurance, he said. "You don't know how much more rates would go up if it weren't for reforms.

"The key is to make the system as fair and as responsible as possible."

vol. VI, no. 23 | thursday, march 22, 1984 | 30 cents

Ambulance report deliberations begin

It is likely Cohasset residents will see an emergency "911" number, and probably a civilian emergency dispatcher for the Police and Fire Depts.

But it is unlikely the Fire Dept. will go to an eight-hour shift.

These were the preliminary results of a meeting between selectmen, the Ambulance Study Committee and firefighters Monday night.

More meetings will be scheduled between the parties before any final recommendations are voted by selectmen.

Some of the firefighters and Fire Chief Martin Dooley agreed the committee was wrong to recommend changing the system which allows firefighters to sleep in the station after midnight.

They also agreed to a civilian dispatcher, a 911 number and that an eight-hour shift was not to the town's best advantage.

Regarding the eight-hour shift, the committee, chaired by Roy Fitzsimmons said they feel all the firefighters should be awake all the time.

The study committee recommended establishing three shifts per day with no sleep time.

Under the current system, there is one ten-hour day shift an a 14-hour night shift which includes sleep time.

But Dooley and some firefighters agreed sleeping in the firehouse isn't the same as sleeping at home.

Dooley said at least two officers pick up the phone at night and often time there are men in the kitchen at night.

"A lot of people think we get a great night's sleep down there," said Firefighter William Litchfield. "A night's sleep at the Fire Dept. is not the same as a night's sleep at home."

With an eight-hour shift, selectmen were told at least six new firefighters would have to be hired.

The committee also contended if civilian dispatchers are hired and police officers are trained as emergency medical technicians, the town could layoff some firefighters.

But that would require a change in negotiating a change in the firefighters' contract stipulating the minimum allowable number of men on duty per shift.

Still to be decided is how the town will implement hiring civilian dispatchers, how much they will be paid where they will be located and how the message will be relayed to the respective departments.

The major recommendation still to be studied is if selectmen will agree to establish an emergency medical service board to oversee the ambulance service.

Election time is nearing

Dick Conley, (left), Judy Volungis and George Marlette III (right) pondered the issues at last week's School Candidates Night.

Look what was found in the basement!

By Karen Brown

Imagine Cohasset in 1912 when the Social Service League questioned the morals of the town nurse; eventually leading her to resign.

Nurse Madeleine Howson, it appeared, preferred to ride with doctors in carriages when making house calls, rather than use the bicycle donated by the league for transportation purposes.

Her letter of resignation is filed in the recently discovered handwritten meeting notes of the League.

These notes chronicle not only the history of the organization, but that of Cohasset as well, from 1912 to 1923.

Dale Langford, Social Service League President, Mary Hartwell, Personnel Chairman, and Dana Komoski, League Secretary, painstakingly read, and at times interpreted, these documents found packed away in boxes in the basement of St. Stephen's Church.

The League moved its offices there nearly four years ago.

"We decided we should do something about them," said Langford.

"It's amazing to me," said Hartwell, "the number of names (mentioned in the meeting notes) still prominent in (Cohasset) politics - Bates, Gardner, Pratt, Nichols, Tower."

What else do the yellowed pages of these notes reveal about Cohasset in the early part of the 20th century?

In 1912 a School Lunch Committee, chaired by league member Mrs. St. John, provided 40 people with Thanksgiving dinners for a total cost of $12.36.

Nurse Howson, during her brief tenure charged from 5 to 50 cents per vist. Her yearly salary totalled $580.

The league also employed the services of a town dentist at 25 cents per visit; although patients with "teeth, tonsils, adenoids and heads (lice) problems" would consult with the nurse.

In 1913, the league created a Domestic Science class for students at the Beechwood School.

Boys studied basket-weaving and the girls, sewing. However, basket weaving proved somewhat unsuccessful for the more rambunctious young males.

The league then decided they be "taught self-control" instead.

At the league's quarterly meetings, various speakers lectured on a variety of subjects: "The Role of the Visiting Nurse in a Rural Community," "Conservation of the Home," "Progress in Social Work," and in 1914, "Women's Interest in the Housing Question."

At some point during 1914, Hingham, Braintree and Weymouth passed by-laws prohibiting the construction of triple decker tenements because "occupants of the third story do not make desirable citizens."

In his speech on housing to the Social Service League, Mr. John Moores reveals much about Cohasset's attitudes toward immigrants and social reform.

". . . the immigration today is very unlike that in times past. Today the ones who come to us are not so industrious and come from a different civilization, alien in customs and speech. Character and patriotism are taught in the home and as you can't get these in bad housing, we must Americanize the people that come to us or they will Italianize or Russianize or something else-us."

On the darker side of the town's history, the meeting notes vividly describe the influenza epi-

Two announce candidacy for selectmen

John DeBassio

Selectman John A. DeBassio of 6 Norfolk Road will seek re-election as a selectman.

DeBassio won a one-year seat on the Cohasset Board in 1983, directly after town meeting voted to expand the board from three to five members.

During the past year DeBassio has served as liaison to various town government boards and committees, including, but not limited to, the board of health; the government structure committee; the zoning board of appeals; and others.

One of the most controversial issues DeBassio negotiated over many months, was the differences between labor and management in the fire department.

"It became apparent in due course this issue would not be resolved through negotiation, but would be tested, issue by issue, before the board of selectmen," DeBassio said.

As a result of the fire department issue, DeBassio feels selectmen have clearly established the standard to be followed in resolving future issues: "the law, the integrity of contract, and a commitment to fairness

Mary Jane McArthur

Mary Jane E. McArthur of 37 Elm Street has announced her candidacy for re-election to a three-year term as a selectman. First elected in 1981, she was elected Chairman of the new five-member board last year.

Her opponents are John DeBassio and Doris Golden.

Mrs. McArthur said many of the goals that she set for herself three years ago have been accomplished with the help of her fellow selectmen.

Improved policies and procedures are evident in the conduct of meetings, in committee appointments, and in licensing.

Each selectman has been appointed to serve as a direct liaison with several boards and committees.

Rescheduling town hall hours has made government more accessible to those citizens with difficult time constraints.

Mrs. McArthur has outlined a number of future goals which include: fair and consistent enforcement of by-laws, rules and regulations; solving the problem of proper housing for the administrative offices and public

Cohasset's week . . .

Salt Storage Shed Land

Selectmen will accept state funds for a salt storage shed, but a question remains as to where the 40 by 60 foot facility will be constructed.

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield told selectmen last week the state will award the money to the town, but a decision must be made where to locate the shed.

He proposed a salt storage building be constructed next to the municipal garage near the village center.

The salt is currently stored outdoors where it frequently leaks onto roadways and into ground water. A protective shed would prohibit that, Litchfield explained.

No matter where the town decided to place the shed, Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said, all necessary permits would have to be applied for and reviewed by the appropriate town boards.

Litchfield noted the highway department has been attempting for the past three years to receive state funding for a shed. This year the state notified all communities that funding would be available to all applicants.

Overtime Fund Transfer

After explaining the need for a recording secretary for selectmen's weekly meetings, Executive Secretary Mark Lanza suggested the board approve a small transfer of funds for a part time clerk to transcribe the minutes of each meeting.

Lanza said the administrative secretary hired recently by selectmen needs at least six hours of undisturbed time to transcribe the lengthy minutes from each board meeting.

That task is becoming impossible, he said, because of her additional responsibilities. Selectmen suggested a transfer from the advisory committee be requested to pay the cost of a part time secretary. At the conclusion of this fiscal year, selectmen will decide whether this position should be funded in next year's budget.

Parking lot lease

Selectmen will invite owner Dan Leahy to discuss Hugo's Restaurant leasing the town owned Government Island for additional restaurant customer parking.

The issue is if the arrangement could interfere with recreational use of the land. Police Chief Joseph Kealey will also be asked to attend.

Little League registration

The Cohasset Little League registration will be held Saturday, March 24 at the Donkey Basketball game at the CHS gymnasium and Sunday, March 25 from 1 to 2 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Real estate abatement

Selectmen will support a warrant article submitted by assessors to allow real estate tax abatements to people 70 years old and older who have lived in the town ten years or more.

April Fool's issue

The April 5 issue of the Mariner will have a sassy two-page parody, which we blithely are calling our April Fool's Issue.

Those two pages shall be tucked into the week's honest-to-goodness news. But the tongue in cheek is intended to take the regular format of the Mariner and have a little fun with familiar flavoring of our hometown.

That is to say, those two pages shall contain sheer hogwash. People who don't want a good laugh ought to bypass it. We promise good taste, but we also promise a hearty parody of our own paper.

Those who believe they have a flair for fun parody are welcome to submit material to be included in those two pages. That which is submitted of course falls under the careful if gleeful eye of the editor.

College Handbook available

The Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in Massachusetts has published a "Handbook for College Admissions and Financial Aid".

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, has obtained copies of this book for her constituents.

Families and Juniors and Seniors in High Schools or who live in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull may contact Rep. Murray at 722-2400 or Room 134, State House, Boston, Mass. 02133.

"The handbook is most important this year due to the fact that the $15 million dollar increase in State Student aid enacted by the legislature last Spring is available to help Massachusetts Students and their families", said Murray.

Public school budget hearing

The Cohasset School Committee will hold a public hearing Monday evening, March 26, in the Home Economics Room of the West Wing of the Junior/Senior High School at 8 p.m. to present the Fiscal Year '85 budget to the citizens of Cohasset.

If the size of the assembly warrants, the meeting will move to the High School auditorium.

Last week's Mystery House location is 72 No. Main St., across from Sohier Street.

Cohasset's week . . .

It will be about a week before the state Department of Revenue decides whether to approve the $18.60 tax rate proposed by the Board of Assessors. Tax bills will be mailed soon after the anticipated state approval.

According to the board's calculations, there will be a single tax rate for all property. Residential land in Cohasset, which includes more than 86 percent of the total area in town, will pay a proportional tax burden of about $5,325,436 under the new proposed rate.

Commercial land, which equals about six percent of the town's tax base, will provide $364,913 under the new system, and $51,275 will be paid for the .83 percent of industrially-zoned property.

In a detailed explanation to selectmen last week, Executive Secretary Mark Lanza noted the $18.60 per $1,000 figure is a proposed rate, which will not be finalized until the state reviews and approves it.

The final rate may fluctuate 25 or 30 cents, he added.

And although the new proposed rate is decidely less than the current $55.50 figure, most taxpayers will be paying more due to this year's revaluations.

Under revaluation, most properties have been assessed higher than in previous years. Taxpayers will have to pay more despite the lower rate.

The proposed tax rate was calculated more definitively at this time, Lanza explained, because of the early notification of state cherry sheet revenues.

According to Lanza, Cohasset will actually be receiving $91,082 more in state appropriations in FY '85 than in the past year. A net increasé of $81,245 will actually be realized, he said, because state charges to the town increased $9,837 from the current fiscal year.

State charges to Cohasset, which includes county appropriations, MDC and MBTA costs, totaled $311,411 for FY '85, compared to $301,574 for the past fiscal year.

State revenues to the town will be $1,493,265 next year, compared to $1,402,183 during FY '84.

The largest savings is in the local aid account, where Gov. Michael Dukakis "kept his promise," according to Lanza, and will be sending $135,322 in additional appropriations.

As the executive secretary noted at the conclusion of his presentation, the fiscal picture in Cohasset for the next year "looks better."

demic of 1918. Cohasset lost 56 residents to the disease which began in mid-September.

It was not uncommon for the town nurse, then Miss Wein, to visit a home with an many as eight family members stricken with the illness.

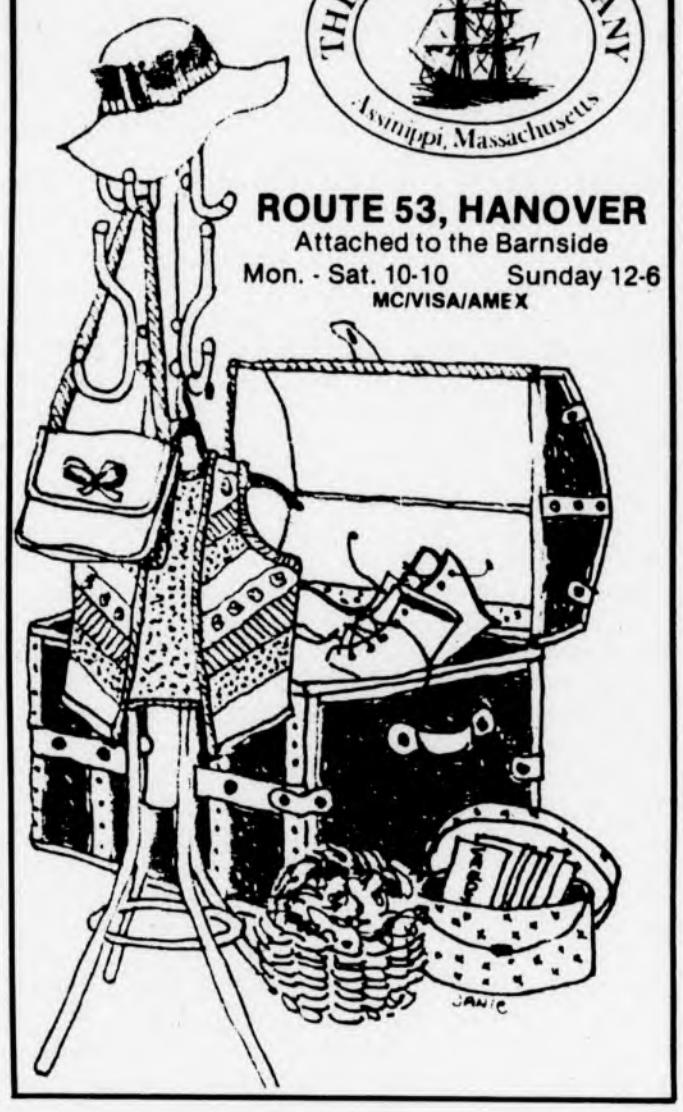
League member Mrs. Bartow opened a kitchen during the epidemic; serving broth and distributing milk, night clothing, bed clothing and clean towels to town residents in need.

Earlier in the year, the league agreed to purchase a "self-started" Ford Runabout for Nurse Wein; sparing her "the physical exertion of cranking up the car."

By July 1918, a measles prevention campaign began in the town with a decision to examine every child in Cohasset. These exams were given at the Beechwood School.

One rather frightened two year old, "without a stitch of clothing," ran from his examination, out the building and down the front steps.

The meeting notes, however, proudly conclude Cohasset childen were judged "perfect specimens" compared to national health standards.



With such a colorful history in its possession, the Social Service League must now decide what to do with these faded, worn "copybooks" in a special meeting of the Board of Directors.

"They were stored away and no one paid any attention to them," said Hartwell.

"The Historical Society doesn't even know we have them," she added.

School board candidates differ on the issues

By Theresa Sullivan

The three candidates for School Committee agree Cohasset students should be computer literate and they favor local control of the school system rather than state control.

At the third annual Candidates' Night last week sponsored by the Parent School Organization, the three candidates answered questions they had one day to prepare for.

These issues were: class size, the arts, resource sharing and the pros and cons of a longer school day were some of the issues discussed.

School Committee Chairman Dick Conley, Judy Volungis and George Marlette III, 23, favor computer literacy of all Cohasset High School graduates.

Volungis said she's like to form a committee to investigate possible state requirements concerning computer education. "They (students) don't have to come out of the schools being computer programmers. I think I would like to see everyone computer literate," she said.

The school day should be extended to accommodate proposed mandatory computer time, rather than take any time away from the other subjects, Volungis, a former teacher, said.

Getting children to overcome the fear of computers is important, Marlette said. He also favored purchasing hardware before establishing curricular goals. Marlette is a freshman at New England School of Law.

While Volungis and Marlette also agreed to support a school committee policy keeping class size down, Conley said their ideals are unrealistic.

Volungis said Kindergarten through Grade 7 should have classes no larger than 22 students and Grade 7 to 12 should have not more than 30 students.

All classes shold not exceed 20 students, Marlette said.

It would be simple to establish a policy limiting class, but it would be difficult to execute such a policy, Conley said.

"I'd love it. But it's not realistic. We do everything possible to keep the class sizes down as small as possible. If we can't make (a policy) work, it's just added to the books," Conley said.

Candidates were asked to comment on House Bill 5000, specifically: state versus local control of education; of longer teacher-student day; mandatory computer time; and state-mandated curriculum. The bill is in the discussion stages at the state level.

All the candidates agreed that Cohasset schools are probably above the curriculum level required by the state if the bill became law.

"In the town of Cohasset, we've done pretty good over the years," Conley said. He is a member of Cohasset High School Class of 1955.

Volungis and Marlette said they would like to see a longer school day. Marlette said a longer day would increase school spirit. A longer day would allow computers to be incorporated into the regular classroom and used as an educational tool, he said.

Conley said a longer day would mean a 10 percent salary increase for teachers, a matter he feels the schools cannot afford.

Candidates were asked to comment on the place for arts in the curriculum. Volungis was the Deer Hill School representative on the PSO Arts Enrichment Committee in 1983.

"Arts can be integrated into the curriculum. I worked in Attleboro (as a Grade 3 teacher). When you taught social studies, you taught through theatre, through music," she said. The humanities approach could be incorporated into all subjects, she said.

The arts are valuable as a form of expression and communication, Marlette said. He favored stressing the arts in communication within the classroom rather than art for arts' sake, "...not specifically bringing out the paint brush or the flute."

The arts need "strong parental support," Conley said, citing the health program as a model of program integration throughout the school system.

"Unfortunately, one of the biggest tragedies of Prop. 2½ was the arts program," Conley said. There is one art teacher for 678 students at the junior-senior High and one for the elementary grades, he said.

Conley said he is "committed' to the arts, saying, "I was one of the people that restored the music department."

The candidates agreed they would be opposed to busing students to other towns to study specialty subjects. Students would spend too much time on the bus, they said.

Conley feels cable TV is the solution and Volungis suggested sharing a teacher who would travel from town to town.

Marlette suggested sharing educational packages.

Responding to a question asking for ways of funding public education, Marlette and Volungis said they would seek corporate contributions.

"I think what we've got to do is be the best. People are going to be willing to help those who help themselves," Marlette said.

Conley said if the School Dept. didn't have to pay its water bill, school grounds maintenance costs and unemployment costs, it would have enough money.

"The bottom-line figure is your choice. If we're going to set a percentage of the available revenue for the School Department, 100 percent of that should go to the school system," he said.

Surrounding towns' school depts. do not pay maintenance, water and unemployment costs; those expenses are paid for by the town side of the budget, he said.

Deer Hill School Principal Ken Eckberg speaking as a resident, asked what their positions were on requesting a $125,000 override at town meeting.

All the candidates said they support the override.

The candidates oppose merit pay and users fees. Volungis said she worked in a school system where there was merit pay and the teachers did not share ideas. The students suffer in the long run, she said.

The School Dept. can't afford to fund merit pay, Conley said. He agreed with Volungis that students would suffer because of merit pay.

Cohasset's week . . .

Candidate's night

The League of Women Voters of Cohasset will hold its annual Candidate's Night Tuesday, April 3 at 7:30 p.m. at the Town Hall.

Each of the thirty-one candidates for local office will be invited to speak for five minutes. Questions from the floor will be accepted after all the candidates have spoken.

The League presents this evening with the candidates' concerns and their positions on issues.

The League is also compiling written responses from the candidates to questions posed by the League. These will be published in an upcoming issue of the Mariner.

At the Candidate's Night, refreshments will be served. Also applications to join the League will be available.

Kennedy moves to Cohasset

Although it was to be kept hush-hush, word leaked, as it always does, when the name Kennedy is involved, and it is widely known now that the Michael Kennedy family will be moving to our town.

Apparently, Michael, son of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy, was seeking to relocate to this state. He has taken a position with a law firm in Boston. He contacted the Jack Conway Co. real estate firm and stated he was interested in moving from Virginia to either a Western suburb such as Dover, or a South Shore community, preferably Cohasset.

An 11-acre wooded spread behind the police station, located on Stevens Lane, appealed to Kennedy and his wife, Vicki Gifford Kennedy.

The home, a secluded mansion now owned by Dr. Edward Douglas, was listed by a second real estate company.

The Cohasset office of the Conway Co. participated in the negotiation of the sale, which is expected to be completed soon.

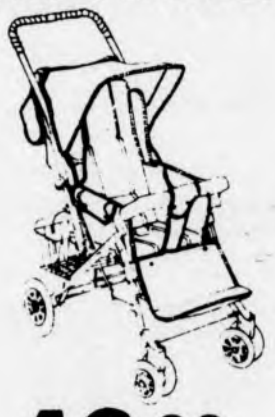
Water table readings

Water table readings are taken during March and April. Persons interested in developing a piece of land must provide water table readings with their plan submission. These readings should be scheduled as soon as possible. For appointments or information, call the Board of Health office at 383-1664.

Long term care bills

Bay State legislators are receiving puzzling mail from senior citizens. The actual puzzle pieces sent with letters of explanation request laws to assemble the state's fragmented long term care system.

According to Warren Dahlin, Executive Director of South Shore Elder Services, "When family members try to find community care for an elderly relative, they can end up dealing with several state agencies and a host of service providers. It is a bewildering jigsaw puzzle."



Seniors throughout the state are requesting their legislators to support bills S805 and H1764.

"These laws would authorize the state's Department of Elder Affairs to designate local community long term care agencies to oversee the entire service package for each elderly person," Dahlin said. Older people require a wide range of social and health services. Currently, no single agency exists that can do this.

For more information regarding this legislation, please call South Shore Elder Services, 383-9790.

Mystery House Week 3

Well, last week's Mystery House Tour must have baffled them in Cohasset. Only nine entries were submitted this week and only two were correct.

Congratulations to Bob Leonard Sr. of 39 Bancroft Road and the Galt Grant family, 258 South Main St. You correctly named the house as 72 North Main Street which was formerly the Major Jonathan Bates House.

The exact location is North Main Street, opposite the end of Sohier Street.

Historically, the Bates House is also known as the "Martin Bates House" for Maj. Jonathan's son who also lived there.

Built in 1789 as a Cape Cod cottage, the house has been enlarged and altered to its present federal style by subsequent owners, once in 1910-11 and again in 1919. The current owners are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Evans.

This week's house will also be difficult. The clue is don't let the open spaces behind the house fool you. There is little open space now.

After two weeks, Bob Leonard Sr. and the Grant family are vying for the top spot with a spotless 2-0 record.

Next week, the businesses which will offer the retail prizes will be announced.

Once you find the home, write down the address of the home (exact number and street) along with your name, address and phone number and send it to "Mystery House Tour," care of the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025 or drop off the answers in an envelope at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or Hennessey's News, both in Cohasset Village.

The deadline for weekly entries will be 9:30 a.m. sharp Tuesday.

The following week we will disclose the correct address with a picture of how the home looks today with a little history brief about each house.

Remember, only one guess per week.

This week's clue is this residence dates back to 1789 as a Cape Cod cottage.

How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two- and three-bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free St., one mile to our entrance. Call 740-1500.

☐Things sure were hopping last Saturday night at the Sons of Italy Hall on Rte. 3A in Hingham. Friends and relatives of Joey Laugelle gave him a huge send-off, as he is soon to join the Navy. Good friends, food and lots of love and best wishes were abundant, everyone had a super time.

☐Good news for Anne Curley...whoever kidnapped her leprechaun returned it unharmed in time for St. Patrick's Day. T'was the luck of the Irish that she got it back in time.

☐Congratulations to Don Beale of 31 Brewster Road, as he announces the opening of his new office on 122 Front Street in Scituate. Don is the Vice President of Mahoney and Wright Ins. Agency, may his new office bring much success.

☐Ruth and Harry Goodwin recently returned from a six week vacation in California, where they spent five weeks with their daughter and one week "on their own". Ruth didn't give up her walking though, in fact she got a group of gals out there to walk with her! The only disappointment they experienced was the return home...they expected spring!

☐Christopher Henderson and his mom Linda had a surprise a while back. It seems Christopher wanted to buy two mice, and bought two females. You guessed it, it was a male and a female and they are now looking for loving families for the offspring. They have six babies to give away (though I'll bet they won't guarantee the sex), call at 383-0289.

☐Norma Nathan's "Eye Say" had a nice story about Ellery Clark Jr. in last week's paper. After writing three books on the Red Sox, he is writing about the six Bostonians who brought home medals in the 1896 Olympics. One of them was Ellery's father, the others were Arthur Blake, Tom Burke, Jim Connolly, Tom Curtis and Welles Hoyt. Capt. Clark teaches at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and has been in touch with Mayor Flynn for an appropriate ceremony at the start of this Summer's Olympics.

☐The McArthur family had tons of great things to say after their recent trip. Bill, Becky and son Willy just returned from visiting Becky's sister Rachel in Kenner, Louisiana. Rachel, her husband Jack and their 3 sons had lots of things planned for the McArthurs, including a trip to New Orleans at Mardi Gras time. Becky reports that it was everything we read about and then some, they loved it! Rachel sends her best to all in Cohasset, and is looking forward to the possibility of moving back here someday.

State Rep. Raymond A. Jordan, Jr., is flanked at left by Cohasset resident Robert M. Ford, president of the New England Anti-Vivisection Society, and at right by Frederick Davis, president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

☐ Polly Doggett of Hugh Strain Rd. and Zella Turner of Forest Ave. attended a leadership meeting last week at the North Dartmouth Chapel of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Both women are board members of the Hingham Mormon Church's Relief Society—the women's organization. The meeting is directed by the greater South Shore area Relief Society President Mary Brundage Dresser of Duxbury and formerly of Cohasset.

☐ Eighteen players and two coaches from Belmont Hill School are spending a week of spring vacation at the Florida Professional Baseball School in Winter Haven. The week will be spent in intensive work on fundamentals including videotaping. At the end of the week the various schools attending compete in a tournament. Participating from Cohasset is Jeffrey C. O'Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. O'Neill. O'Neill attends Belmont Hill as a five-day boarder, a program which permits students to live at the school from Monday through Thursday and to be with their families on weekends.

☐ Diane Gunville of Cohasset has been named to the University of Southern Maine dean's list for the 1983 fall semester.

☐ J. Michael Snyder, 589 Jerusalem Rd., is enrolled in the Massachusetts Electrical Code Licensing Preparation course at the Coyne Electrical Department of Chamberlayne Junior College in Boston.

The 10-week course, which is conducted frequently during the year, consists of the study and application of the Massachusetts electrical code in preparation for the exams conducted by the state board. The next code class is scheduled for April 17.

☐Hats off to Joan Appel, who has been chosen as one of 18 women out of 2000 applicants nationwide, to show in the "Women's National Exhibit" in Washington, D.C. Each exhibit educates the viewer as to what is being executed across the country by women artists. This year's exhibition consists of paintings, prints sculpture and mixed media pieces. Joan has shown in galleries in New England, Florida and New York and is currently showing at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, and the Cape Cod Art Association in Barnstable. She has won prizes for her paintings in many competitions.

☐Everyone is anticipating "the event of the year", which will take place on Saturday, March 24. It's Donkey Basketball again, this year promises to be better than ever. There will be two games. First girls against boys varsity teams, then CHS faculty-administration against the Cohasset All-Stars (this team consists of Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and four selectmen.) Anyone who remembers the 1972 game knows it was a super event, but this year sounds like a true winner indeed. I hope they plan to have a doctor on duty. Tickets will be at the door and the raffle will be drawn at half-time, don't miss it.

☐ Ingrid Anderson is going to be a member of the State Senate during Student Government Day in Boston April 6. She will take the seat of Senator Allan R. McKinnon, representing the Norfolk and Plymouth Senatorial district. Ingrid was chosen by her fellow Junior classmates, and is sure to like government life, as she has had lots of workshops to prepare for the day.

DeSantis answers the business sewerage issue

By Bill Hayward

Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis recently spoke to the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce about possible solutions to the town's sewage disposal problems.

The sewer commissioners, Ward Engineering Co., and the citizen's sewer advisory committee have been studying alternative sewage disposal methods which could enable the town to avoid building a $15 million sewage treatment plant as ordered by the state.

DeSantis told commerce members the two main options are now being studied.

One option would be to upgrade and expand the capacity of the present town sewage treatment plant. This option might also include the construction of an outfall off the Cohasset coast.

The other option is to connect to the sewage treatment plant in Hull. Under this option the Cohasset treatment plant would be converted into a pumping station.

Under both options some problem areas, such as Lincoln Hillside, the Veterans Area, Smith Place, and Ripley Road would be sewered.

The remaining unsewered areas in town would continue using on-site sewage systems. However, on-site systems problems would be repaired, and a maintenance fund would be set up to keep them working in the future.

Joseph Quinn, Cushing Plaza manager, is concerned that the 3A business area would not be sewered under either option. Quinn said the future growth of the area could be adversely affected if left unsewered.

DeSantis replied the on-site work would be done on the Cushing Plaza sewerage system, such as the installation of curtain drains, which would increase its effectiveness.

Citizen's Sewer Advisory Committee Chairman Chartis Langmaid said the committee has been meeting with special interest groups to discuss the sewer issue. Last week they met with lobster men and neighbors of the treatment plant.

Langmaid suggested the citizen's committee meet with a group of commerce members in the near future.

At a recent citizen's sewer advisory committee meeting, Alfred Melien, town engineer for East Longmeadow, MA, spoke to the committee.

Like Cohasset, East Longmeadow had a sewage disposal problem. East Longmeadow had a choice of building their own treatment plant or connecting to the Springfield treatment plant. They chose to connect to Springfield.

Melien said the arrangement with Springfield has worked out very well. "We have never had a problem with our sewer contract with the city of Springfield since 1956," he said.

Melien stressed the importance of a good contract in a successful intermunicipal agreement. "I think you have to look at the bottom line; you have to have a good contract." He added, "If you want a contract like this you better have a good engineer to work with and some good legal advice."

When asked what he thought about Cohasset's situation, Melien said, "There is no way I would even think of building and maintaining a treatment plant in this community."

Coverlet location

The Library Board of Trustees recently voted not to house the Historical Society coverlet (an historical bed covering) in the library. Even though the society's Gown museum will close, the library does not have sufficient space to locate the historic needlework done by Mrs. Thomas Richardson in 1893.

Constructive meeting

Probably the most constructive and open public meeting between selectmen, firefighters and residents occurred Monday night at Town Hall and although tedious at times, more of these meetings should be held.

To begin with: we have heard the rumor around town that selectmen should get rid of either the entire Fire Dept. and begin again and that this thinking is behind the Ambulance Study Committee's thinking. In short it has been said the committee was formed to grind some axes.

We say nothing could be more absurd. Getting rid of the entire Fire Dept and its men is ridiculous. What a waste of money and staff.

Throwing away the Ambulance Study Committee report is also absurd. There has been a great deal of study and time put into the report.

No doubt there are inconsistencies and questions. But that's why selectmen should hold more meetings such as Monday night.

There has to be input from the firefighters, Chief Martin Dooley and from the Ambulance Study Committee. And although hostile at times, there has to be a point and counterpoint session.

Selectmen must sort out between the committee thoughts and the thoughts of the firefighters to determine what is the best system for residents. As long as everyone remembers the first and primary goal is to provide the best possible Fire Dept. service to all Cohasset residents, then the problems may start to be resolved.

In other words, everyone has to agree to a spirit of compromise and give and take and from what we saw of Selectmen Mary Jane McArthur, Rocky Laugelle and John DeBassio, their questions and spirit Monday night were praiseworthy.

And even though it may take 20 minutes to reach an agreement at a meeting night between all sides, remember all sides must be represented at this meeting.

Our only point of criticism is as we called before Emergency Medical Service Coordinator and Instructor Capt. James Lee Gurry should have been an ad hoc member to the committee and his input should have been included in the committee's report.

His answers to many of the committee's concerns could have saved a great deal of time.

And finally it is great to see Chief Dooley sit down with his men and come to some agreements. It's been long overdue.

Where are those notes?

By Claire McDonough

"Has anyone seen some notes I made for an article I'm going to write?" I asked. "I thought I left them on the kitchen table."

"What were they about?" the Dragon asked helpfully.

"If I knew what they were about," I told him crossly, "I wouldn't need the notes."

"Don't get mad. I'm just trying to help. Maybe it'll come back to you if you can remember where you were when you got your ideas. On the van? At work? Here at home?"

"I said I don't remember," I glared. "And anyway, who's mad?"

"If you aren't, you're doing a pretty good imitation," he told me. "And furthermore, you really ought to do something about that failing memory of yours."

"To hear you talk," I snarled, "you'd think I was getting senile. Well, my memory is as good as it ever was. And I certainly am not senile."

Patrick looked up. "Were you aware that denial is the first symptom?" he asked politely.

"That was uncalled for," his father told him. "Really, though, Claire, you should face it. Your memory isn't what it was. The fact that you signed up for a memory improvement course should indicate something. That and the fact that then you forgot to go."

"A mistake anyone could make. And anyway, whatshername was supposed to call and remind me."

"Whatshername," he told me gently, "has been your closest friend for 27 years."

"I know," I replied, "but everyone forgets a name now and then."

"Right. But you introduced Breida to Jeanne Mills as 'Brigetta.' And last night I heard you yelling, 'Pat, Skipper, whoever you are, turn down that radio'."

"I was excited at the time. And our boys all look alike."

"I know," he agreed. "They're all short, and they all have brown hair. But it was Jason Johnson who was playing the radio."

"So? He's around here so often I think of him as one of the family."

The Dragon sighed. "We all think of Jason as one of the family. But he's six feet tall and Black. You should be able to remember which one he is.

"And that's just one example. Last week you forgot to gas the van. You forgot to pay the electric bill. You forgot to return three phone calls. You forgot to pick Skipper up at the high school..."

"I'm sure you're exaggerating," I said primly. "I don't remember forgetting half those things."

The Dragon spread his hands. "I rest my case."

"Anyway," I added, "this isn't helping me find the notes I made for a column."

Breida walked into the living room. "I found a paper in Ma's handwriting in the refrigerator," she announced.

"It says 'write a funny piece about failing memory.'

"Is it something important?"

I snatched the paper from her hand and quickly crumpled it into a ball.

"I don't remember," I replied.

Letters

Fire Captain gives his side

(The following is a copy of a letter to Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur. Ed.)

Dear Madam Chairperson:

I would like to address the issues that were brought forth at the February 22, Selectmens Meeting.

I have not had the courtesy, as of this date, of receiving a copy of the Ambulance Study Committee Report from the Committee of selectmen.

I was informed, third hand, that my name was on the agenda for said Selectmens Meeting, I in turn called the Executive Secretary and he had no definite explanation why I was being called before the Board but was instructed by yourself to put my name on the agenda.

My appointment was 9:30 p.m. but I was not granted an audience until 10:50 p.m. and then had to wait for four or five items to be resolved.

I was questioned at length regarding certain criticism by the Study Committee, i.e. the weekly training sessions: these courses are approved by the Office of Emergency Medical Services and not the Ambulance Study Committee, these courses can be taught by non-EMTs contrary to what the Ambulance Study Committee would have you believe.

The revised rules & regulation: these rules and regulations were recommended to be updated and in no way affected the relicensure of the Ambulance.

There was the subject of "dirty air masks in June" that was brought up in Executive Session, to my knowledge there was never any "dirty air masks" brought to my attention since I have been EMT Coordinator and I would like to straighten this matter out.

It is my personal opinion that the Ambulance Study Committee was formed not by individuals interested in public vs. private service but by people with an axe to grind against the Fire Department.

In closing I wish to state that since the Fire Department has had the Ambulance I have never heard one single complaint against their services and believe that 98 percent of the residents of Cohasset are more than satisfied with the present service.

James Lee Gurry, Captain
EMT Coordinator

Tewksbury resigns from clerk's race

(The following is a copy of a letter to Selectman chairman Mary Jane McArthur.—Ed.)

Dear Mary Jane:

This letter is to withdraw My nomination for the Office of Town Clerk in Cohasset. I'm taking this course of action for the following reasons.

First and foremost. I feel that the present Assistant Town Clerk is the individual, at this time, to take over the duties of the Town Clerk. These duties are important and becoming more so as times change and become more complex. This individual had been active in the position for 13 years if My information is correct.

Second. Indications are that My business activities will increase within the next few months so that the time available for the Town Clerks duties would be lessened. If the job remains as a part time position then the effect of these business changes would not be as critical and I could handle it as I see it. If, however, it becomes a full time position then I would find it difficult to do both; that is handle My activities in the Industrial Weighing field as well as the Town Clerks position.

Third. I think that since this position is as important as it has become that better guide lines be set up for public notice of the vacancy. More lead time should be required for advertising the opening. This would allow potential candidates to evaluate the job—its requirements—its conditions—its ramifications—more thoroughly. And this is what We're after—the best person available for the position—nothing less.

Please do not interpret this letter as indicating a lack of desire to serve the Town. In fact My feeling is just the opposite—I love the Town—I want to serve the Town in a capacity/position that will benefit the Town.

I will be very willing to discuss this letter—these thoughts—with You at anytime if You feel that further discussion is pertinent.

Sincerely,
Hamilton T. Tewksbury

Wheelright Park problems answered

(The following is a copy of a letter to Jacqueline Wirth of 14 Red Gate Lane. Ed.)

Dear Mrs. Wirth:

With spring approaching Wheelwright Park and more specifically the horseback riding area will be getting more use from the public than in recent months. I feel the time is appropriate to remind you and the users of the riding area that it is the selectmen's policy to keep Wheelwright Park open and available for all to enjoy without compromising the peace and privacy of those who abut the park.

As you are aware, Wheelwright Park was conveyed to the Town for the purposes of establishing a public park. As such, the selectmen do not feel that horseback riding, concentrated into a riding area or throughout the entire park, is inconsistent with the purposes of a public park.

In response to your request concerning the existence of formal rules and regulations governing the use of Wheelwright Park, there are none per se. Activities such as driving motor vehicles (mopeds, snowmobiles, etc.) hunting and cutting or marking trees, however, are expressly prohibited as per the sign posted at the North Main Street entrance to Wheelwright Park. Additionally, the Tree and Park Superintendent is charged with the day to day supervision of the park.

Letter

In a letter of November 22, 1983, and during telephone conversations this past fall, you stated that you felt that a riding area creates a public health hazard. The area has been inspected by the health agent on more than one occasion and no health hazard has been found.

In response to other points raised in your letter on November 22, selectmen, as you are aware, addressed them during their December 7, 1983, meeting at which representatives of the Cohasset Riding Club were present. In summary the following observations and comments were made:

STAGNANT WATER ACCUMULATION

Without trying to determine why the water pools there or for how long, it was noted that the area will be carefully monitored by the pest superintendent to determine whether mosquito breeding is present. If mosquito breeding is present, appropriate action will be taken.

DUST

The dust problem has been addressed by depositing mulch chips and applying water to the dry surfaces. Most users have noted a marked improvement in the dust problem.

NOISE AND NUMBER OF HORSES

The Cohasset Riding Club has been asked not to create a level of noise that would disturb the peace of the abutters to the park. The Riding Club has informed selectmen that there have never been 60 horses in the park on any given day.

MESS

All horseback riders are requested to remove the horse manure left by their horses. Small amounts of manure are acceptable and provide fertilization to the grassy areas.

Shortly after the selectmen's meeting of December 7, you came to my office to ascertain what occurred at the meeting. When I informed you of the discussion that took place, you stated that you did not want a written explanation of what had transpired. Later both Riding Club representatives and you requested a written response. Please consider this letter the response you requested.

Please be assured selectmen remain sensitive to any activity in Wheelwright Park that is either offensive to the abutters or is inconsistent with the purposes of the park. Selectmen urge all users of the park to be sensitive to the abutters' concerns and make every effort to peacefully coexist with them.

Just when I was congratulating myself on being able to spot a Preppie by his wagonnaire, Brooks Bros. loafers and L.L. Bean chinos, along came their clones, the Yuppies. From what I read in the Yuppie Handbook, these Young Urban Professionals are usually just passing through when spotted here on the South Shore. Dedicated to making lots and lots of money, physical fitness and therapy, their fashionable habitat is expensive condos in the city. The Yuppies' handbook says: "Yuppies will live anywhere in the big city, as long as the floors are genuine parquet and there's another Yuppie on the block." An article I was reading the other snowy afternoon concerned a market research finding which resulted from asking consumers to record what they really eat. Among the delicious findings: "People who say they eat only a healthy natural diet sit down to French toast with syrup every other day and are partial to chocolate chips, pretzels and jello. Sophisticated eaters, such as the Yuppies consider themselves to be, are as likely to down prepackaged cakes, olives, doughnuts and frozen dinners as any junk-food devotee. So, let's all sneak a helping of this dessert which my family has enjoyed over the years and is called simply

BROWNIE PUDDING

1 c. flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
3/4 c. sugar
3 T cocoa
1/2 c. milk
1 tsp. vanilla
2 T melted shortening
3/4 c. each chopped walnuts and brown sugar
1/4 c. cocoa
1¾ c. hot water

Sift flour, baking powder, salt, sugar and 3 T cocoa into a bowl. Add milk, vanilla and shortening and mix. Add nuts. Pour into greased 8" pan. Mix brown sugar and 1/4 c. cocoa and sprinkle over surface of the batter. Then pour hot water evenly over the batter—do not stir it in! Bake at 350 degrees for 40-45 min. Serve with whipped cream.

Yuppies eat tortellini, tuna sashimi and chef's salad—so they say. No instant food ever passes Yuppie lips. Their kitchens feature scores of exotic appliances, window herb gardens and a double sink for draining pasta. Those of us who do not classify as Yuppies can certainly make chef salads to go with this recipe from Mrs. James Mandeville called

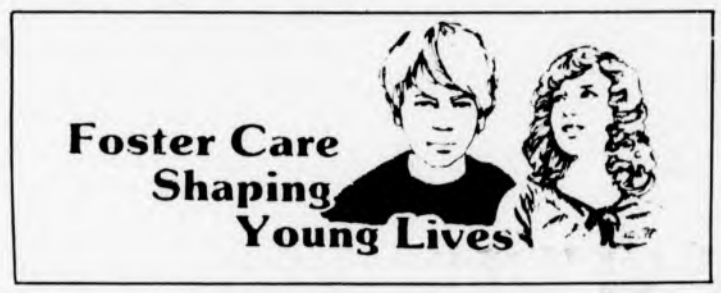
CRABMEAT "DELICIOUS"

1 lb. fresh or frozen crabmeat, or 2 cans crabmeat
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1/2 c. each mayonnaise, fine bread crumbs and parmesan cheese
2 T chives or dried onion
1 T each mustard and Worcestershire Sauce
Salt and pepper to taste

Mix all ingredients together. Use either a casserole dish, or individual ramekins. Sprinkle with paprika and bake at 350 degrees approx. 20 min. or until bubbly. NOTE: Fresh or drained canned mushrooms may be added, if desired.

* * *

Yuppie meals are served on plain white plates, set down on straw place mats. The dining table, preferably butcher block, glass or marble, must never match the dining chairs. Young professionals who don't want to appear provincial and aim to make an income in six figures in the big city, never take naps, never have anything plastic in their condo and vacation in some far-away, undiscovered inn. If you're a Yuppie, you can skip the recipe below. It's one I came across while searching for the Brownie Pudding recipe and one I couldn't resist including in this column about Yuppies, because this is called



YUMMIES

14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
2¼ c. graham cracker crumbs
1/2 c. each chocolate chips, coconut, chopped walnuts

Combine all ingredients. Drop by teaspoons onto greased cookie sheet. Bake about 8 to 10 min. at 350 degrees. Cool on rack. Makes 3 dozen. Place in cookie tin while still slightly warm.

Get ready all you mares for some hoop action

The players, two-footed and four-footed, will be warming up for the premiere event of the sporting season as the Cohasset Basketball Boosters host Donkey Basketball Saturday night at the CHS gym.

The two donkey basketball games, the CHS varsity girls against the varsity boys, and the school administration/faculty versus a select group of Cohasset town all-stars, will get underway at 8 p.m.

The four-footed players, imported at great expense by the management from faraway Ohio, will be ready to go, complete with their hoof-covering rubber boots. Whether they will go in the direction their riders want them to is another matter, but it's what Donkey Basketball is all about.

The CHS girls' varsity "challengers" include Lisa Shumaker, Janet DiGirolomo, Carla Lucas, Tracy Fitzpatrick, Jill Nedrow, Kerry O'Brien, Ann O'Leary, Trina Moore, Maura Corkery, Vicki Spooner, and Sarah Seavey.

Squaring off against them will be the boys' varsity "champs," David Barcomb, Peter Caruso, James Creed, David McDonald, Philip Bernstein, Chris Kuhn, Tony Bogarty, Floyd Hardwick, Bobby Shultz, Brian Edwards, and John O'Connell.

Then it's on to the School System Skippers against the Cohasset Town All-Stars. Going one on one for the Skippers will be Jack Creamer, Osgood principal; Margie Murphy, Deer Hill librarian; Eugene Crowell, schools superintendent; Bill Fallon, girls' varsity basketball coach; Clark Chatterton, athletic director; Matt Salerno, boys' JV basketball coach; Joan Wool, business teacher; Jon Anderson, girls' JV basketball coach, and Clare Brady, girls' junior high basketball coach.

The All-Stars are an illustrious crew, including Dick Conley, school committee chairman; Jim Gallagher, recreation department; Mary Jeanette Murray, state representative; Jan Figuerirdo, student transportation engineer; Rocco Laugelle,selectman; John DeBassio, selectman; Joe Nedrow, school committee; Cliff Mitman, selectman, and Charlie DeSantis, sewer commission (and also the Mariner's Person of the Year).

But don't wait until 8 p.m. to come! Cohasset's basketball stars of tomorrow will be on deck earlier in a variety of contests to test their skills in getting the ball in the hoop. These annual events are scheduled as follows:

You can see this kind of sporting fun Saturday night at 8 p.m. at Cohasset High School.

6:30 p.m, second and third grade clinic and lay-up contest;

6:40 p.m., fourth and fifth grade girls' lay-up contest;

6:50 pm., fourth and fifth grade boys' lay-up contest;

7 p.m., sixth and seventh grade girls' foul shot and lay-up relay;

7:15 p.m., sixth and seventh grade boys' foul shot and lay-up relay;

7:30 p.m., eighth and ninth grade girls' foul shot and lay-up relay;

7:45 p.m., eighth and ninth grade boys' foul shot and lay-up relay.

And at 8 pm. it's onto the donkeys and away.

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club hopes for a capacity crowd for this truly townwide event. Tickets are available at the door, $4 for adults, $2.50 for students under 14. All proceeds from the evening are pledged back into the Cohasset community to support basketball programs at all levels of play.

And if anyone's interested in serving on the clean-up committee, volunteers are welcome.

Water company projects

David Kanke, manager of the Hingham Water Company has announced the construction projects that the water company will be undertaking for 1984. At a cost of more than $500,000. The company's budget includes $157,300 to do the normal replacement program such as meters, services, operating tools and equipment. Pipeline replacement this year will take place on New Bridge Street in Hingham and "V" Street in Hull.

Kanke cited a number of major projects that will have an impact on the overall performance of the company's operations. One such project, at a cost of $207,000 is the completion of designs for the new treatment plant. Kanke said, "This design work will complete the project started last year, and, when funds are available, it will allow the company to proceed with construction of a new treatment facility."

The water company also plans in 1984 to replace Free Street No. 2 well pump at a cost of $21,000. This well was constructed in 1951 and is rated at two million gallons a day. While the well is out of service, maintenance work will also be performed.

The dance will be held Friday evening, April 6 from 7:30 to 10:30 in the Town Hall. Admission will cost $3 per student. Disc jockeys Peter Folger and Son will provide the music.

Junior High dances have been planned and have been well attended by the students. The dances are not meant to be fund raisers. However, the PSO's Valentine Dance earned $300. The profit was donated to the computer department for the Junior High.

Securing chaperones has been the biggest problem in planning dances. Parent chaperones are always needed. Parents are encouraged to take their turn when asked. Anyone who wishes to chaperone the April 6 dance may volunteer by calling Karen Kirkendall, 383-1464, or Robin Suhrbier, 383-0349.

It's dog-licensing time

It's the time of the year to license your dog! In order to do so, first show proof of his rabies vaccination!

Bring the proof to the city or town hall when you apply at the clerk's office.

Dogs are required to be licensed at three months of age. The rabies shot cannot be given until he or she is six months old.

In any case, a lost dog with a license tag around his neck, stands a good chance of being returned to his home because he or she can be identified readily and his owners notified.

Insurance Companies Compete to Win Homeowners with Lower Rates.

"Now, homeowners can generally get increased coverage and pay less for it," according to Mary Porter of Whitman's Doran & Mason Insurance Agency.

Interviewed at her Bridgewater home, Ms. Porter said, "My job is to see that my clients have all the facts they need to buy insurance wisely. Right now, the fact is that you can probably duplicate your present homeowner's coverage at a lower cost — or — increase your coverage without increasing your cost."

"You can still get good, personal service with your low rates, too," Ms. Porter added. Doran & Mason has a team system. "Each of my clients can phone my office teammate any time a question arises or a problem occurs. We have enough people for that, and our size makes us important to the companies we represent. Even difficult claims can be handled more easily."

"I'll take the time to explain the details to you and I'll get to know you well enough to understand what insurance you need. I don't press;" she concluded, "if you have all the information you need, you'll make the right decisions." As an insurance professional in the Doran & Mason Agency, Mary Porter writes automobile, life, medical, business, boat and other forms of insurance as well as homeowner's.

"The Troupe," a musical comedy directed by Avi Nesher, is about life in an entertainment unit of the Israeli Army . Set in 1968, just after the Six-Day War, "The Troupe," tells of the growing pains of the 14 young male and female troupe members as they struggle with the day-to-day stresses of performing amidst rivalries and romances and finally compete for a chance to be chosen to appear on a national telecast for Israel's Independence Day.

Hilarious, sad, provocative—the film captures the spirit of Israel's youth transcending all conventions of musical comedy.

Wildlife find skilled care at center

By Theresa Sullivan

In a room about the size of a one-car garage, the South Shore Wildlife Center has treated everything from seagulls and snakes to hawks and loons.

The facility can receive and care for an injured or sick animal, perform surgery, rehabilitate and release the animal back into the wild.

The center, located on Route 3A in Hingham near the Cohasset line, has treated animals from the South Shore, Rhode island, Cape Cod and the North Shore.

Fifty one percent of the animals treated by Vaughan Pratt, DVM, the center's director, are released back into the wild.

A Merganser which was shot in the wing was released into a sheltered pond after treatment at the Wildlife Center.

The center is currently housing an American Kestered Hawk which was brought in as a baby. The hawk lost his mother before being brought to the center, Pratt said.

While at the center, the hawk has been housed in a large outdoor cage, similar to the type seen at zoos. Tree branches provide perches.

The hawk was taught how to hunt by putting a live mouse in a cardboard box inside the cage.

At first, there were no leaves in the box. After the hawk had mastered this, leaves were added to make finding the prey more difficult.

Hawks hunt at night; so naturally this was done after dark. More leaves were gradually added, and now the hawk can find the mouse and catch it even when it's buried in leaves.

When spring is here for good, the hawk will be released into the wild, Pratt said. The hawk will have a better chance of finding food in good weather than in the snow. By the time winter comes again, the hawk will have honed its hunting skills

In most cases, the center does its best to return the animal to the area it was found in. If a sheltered environment is necessary for the animal's survival, one is found, Pratt said.

The South Shore Wildlife Center is able to do anything from treating broken wings to internal diseases, he said. The center is located at the Hingham Animal Clinic and has access to surgical and exam rooms, X-ray, intensive care units and exercise wards.

Ninety percent of the center's patients are birds, but any wild animal can be treated there.

Last Wednesday the staff at the center was busy. "That's how we like it," Pratt said with obvious enthusiasm. (He says the reason he talks fast is to get done everything he has to do.)

In one day, they received three injured raccoons and a screech owl and falcon hawk which were found in two different homes.

Hingham Dog Officer Paul Murphy rescued two of the injured raccoons and the screech owl. The Whitman dog officer rescued the other raccoon and the hawk.

Pratt said he's not sure what happened to the raccoons but thinks they may have been in fights.

Two of the coons suffered multiple lacerations. Pratt ran blood tests and will keep the animals until their wounds heal.

The other coon has a ruptured eyeball which Pratt will keep closed for a few weeks. The medication and the natural healing process will save the eye, although vision may be impaired, he said.

The center is staffed by Pratt and veterinary technicians, all of whom have wildlife medicine and surgery training.

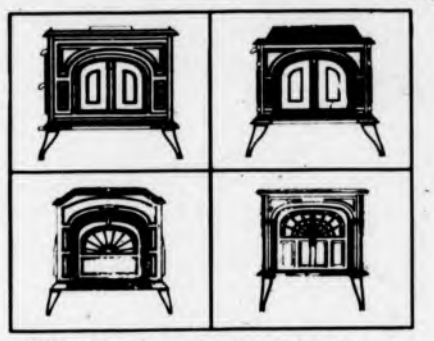
Volunteers help in a variety of ways, including cleaning the cages, he said.

In 1983, the center treated 175 animals of 47 different species. The South Shore Wildlife Center is a non-profit organization and does not charge for its services.

Funding comes from contributions, grants and membership dues, which are $10 annually.

Pratt says they're hoping to expand to a larger facility. "This place is too small," he said. They started expanding the building last week and hope to have it completed in two or three months.

The South Shore Wildlife Center is the one of the few wildlife centers in New England which takes and treats animals from the general public.



So how did it happen to form in Hingham?

Pratt grew up in Cohasset and was president of the CHS class of 1972. He started working at the Hingham Animal Clinic while a freshman.

S.S. Wildlife Center . . .

After studying veterinary medicine in the Philippines, he wanted to return to this area. "I just liked it here."

Pratt, his wife Daliles and their children Dustin, 4 and Justin, 1, live on the Cohasset-Hull line on Black Rock Beach.

While in the Philippines, Pratt worked in a zoo where he dealt primarily with wildlife.

So after graduating, he got a job at the Hingham Animal Clinic. Like any other veterinary clinic, the Hingham Animal Clinic was asked if it would treat wounded animals. "We said yes."

Pratt found that after awhile, "I was spending most of my time working with wildlife. It snow-balled. We got so big we were treating hundreds of animals."

This was when they decided to become their own facility. In adddition to treatment, the center performs autopsies on dead animals to try to detect and document disease problems of wildlife populations.

"A lot of birds end up on the beach because they're sick," Pratt said. When an animal dies, the autopsy reveals the cause of death, frequently an indication of something wrong in the environment.

The center keeps complete records of all patients and the information learned is published in veterinary journals.

"Animals are your first sign of environmental problems. It goes up the food chain," Pratt said.

The South Shore Wildlife Medical Center has an education component, as well. Sharon Young brings the animals who are permanently injured to visit local schools.

In addition to the lifetime residents, a hawk and a robin, Young brings snakes and rabbits for her classroom demonstrations.

The center holds state and federal permits and works in cooperation with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the State Dept. of Wildlife and Natural Resources and the Mass. Society for Protection and Cruelty to Animals.

The South Shore Natural Science Center and the Mass. Audubon Society, which has an office in Marshfield, have referred the public to the center and have also worked with the center.

The center holds memberships in 10 local, state and national wildlife-related organizations.

Pratt says the center is happy to help any injured animal but asks people not to be too quick to bring in an animal who seems motherless.

In the spring, people tend to bring in what they think are orphaned birds, he said. "The best thing to do is put the bird back in the nest and let nature take its course." The same is true for bunnies and other newborn animals.

The mother could just be off getting food. Pratt says the misconception that a mother will not have anything to do with a bird once a human has touched it is not true.

Pratt also suggested that people with picture windows put a decal on it. "Forty percent of injuries are from birds smashing into windows or high tension wires."

When a bird is flying at night and sees the reflection of trees in a window, he thinks it's a clearing and flies right into it, Pratt said. Birds who do this either die or suffer concussions, he said.

Questions concerning wildlife can be answered by calling 749-1248. The South Shore Wildlife Medical Center's mailing address is 146A Justice Cushing Highway, Hingham, 02043.

McNabb is a member and Secretary of the Committee to Survey Structure and Functrions of Town Government. While at Cohasset High School, he served as a non-voting Student Representative to the Cohasset School Committee.

LANDSCAPE DESIGN

This eight week course on landscape design and planting materials is personalized for each student's needs.

Each participant prepares his or her own landscape plan for her own property.

Problem areas are identified, and low maintenance plantings are stressed. Betsy Hoopes teaches this course, beginning Wednesday, March 14, from 9 to 11 a.m.

The course concludes in time for implementing some aspect of the new landscaping plan this summer.

"SAT PREPARATION"

Gino DiGirolamo and Ron Emmons teach five week session reviews of basic skills in English Wednesday and Math, Thursday in order to prepare for the college boards. Small classes allow the instructors to identify and review each student's weaknesses.

CPR
(CARDIO-PULMONARY RESUSCITATION)

Dr. Michael Equi and Linda Farraf, RN, lead this certified eight hour course on Wednesdays, April 4 and 11, 7 to 11 p.m.

Emergency resuscitation techniques for cardiac and/or respiratory arrest are covered in this course as well as procedures to alleviate airway obstructions (choking).

WASTE BASKET

Donna Kelly teaches this basket-weaving course Wednesdays, April 17 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Students will make a utilitarian basket featuring an ash wood base, with round and flat reeds.

Historical Society Survives storm

An unseasonable late winter snowstorm failed to deter nearly 80 hardy antiques enthusiasts from attending the Cohasset Historical Society's dinner meeting Tuesday, March 13.

The featured speaker was Milton Babcock, whose subject was "Antiques In Original Settings".

Mr. Babcock, long a leading figure in New England antiques circles, presented a program of colored slides showing authentic and recreated colonial rooms and discussed each item of antique furniture shown.

His talk was directed primarily to those interested in buying or collecting the various styles of antique furnishings.

A special feature of the evening was the presentation by Cohasset's State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of a citation from the Massachusetts House of Representatives to Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Weeks of Cohasset. They celebrated their 64th Wedding Anniversary.

For many years leading members of the Community, Alice and Arnold Weeks were married March 13, 1920 in Calcutta, India.

Arnold Weeks has served as a member of the Board of Directors of the Cohasset Historical Society for over 15 years and is a member of the Trustees of the Caleb Lothrop House, the Society's headquarters building.

On behalf of the Society, President Constance Parker presented a lovely red rose to each of the Weeks, and conveyed the best wishes of all present at the meeting.

The next scheduled Historical Society dinner meeting will be held in the fall, and will be announced at a later date.

Department of Public works Commissioner Robert T. Tierney announced recently the Southeast Expressway will begin as scheduled in the outer two inbound lanes of the roadway (travel and breakdown) from the Quincy-Braintree interchange to Granite Avenue in Milton.

However, at Granite Avenue, construction will begin in the two inner lanes, continuing there to the end of the project

A Guide For Trendies

By John Kuntz

Today's society is full of trendies, even in Cohasset, the proverbial preppitorium. Hard to understand? Of course it is. Trends are always complicated: involving their own language, dress, attitude, music, food, and dance. This Guide might help you identify some of the latest trends.

Bugs-"Bugs", as they are called, can be found anywhere. The typical bug-about-town usually wears a denim or leather jacket, corduroy pants, boots, and a plaid shirt. Bugs usually are devoted to some loud heavy metal group such as Quiet Riot or Def Leppard, and carry around a box with this music blaring wherever they go. They always seem to have an unfortunate case of acne and a cigarette in their mouth. A red bandana tied around the forehead completes the "official" bug attire, though it is optional.

Punks-"Punks", although scarce in Cohasset, can be found all over the Boston area, especially the Combat Zone and at any Newbury Comix. The word "punk" is very misleading. To most people, punk is merely a fashion (and anyone out there who thinks Boy George is punk needs a lobotomy). Here is a list of clothing articles considered "punk": fingerless gloves (one or two); a mohawk haircut (in any color); safety pins; dog collars; liquid belts; Kamikaze anything (not the kind from Jordan Marsh); spiked hair and anything black or puke yellow.

Punk has many more assets than its fashion, which lives on in middle-class trendies. Punk leads mainly into punk rock, with such groups as The Dead Kennedys, The Meat Men, Black Flag, Discharge and the Angry Samoans. These groups are known for such obscure songs as "Mr. Tapeworm," "Let's Lynch the Landlord," and a song about the Beatles, "One Down and Three to Go."

The punk way of dancing is also quite different. There is "slam dancing," in which people just slam into each other, and "shanking," in which the lower part of the body is bent forward to ram people with both arms rotating like a buzz saw. The punk ideal rejects society in favor on non-conformity. Today, however, this meaning is lost and replaced by conforming to non-conformity.

The Candy Punker-A person who dresses punk solely for the fashion and nothing else is called a "Candy-Punker". These are generally valley girls and dudes who dress too "punk" to be "val" and talk and act too "val" to be "punk".

The Val-This trend, brought on by one song by Frank and Moon Zappa, was probably the biggest yet shortest-lived trend ever. All of a sudden, vals were everywhere. Mini-skirts, books, songs, and special vocabulary were selling like crazy. Then, just like that, Phtttt! the Val just disappeared (or bit the yellow ice with dentures).For many, this was good riddance, but to others, it was just "gnarley to the max, fer sure".

The Nu Waver-The Nu Wave trend is sometimes mistaken for Punk. Though similar, they have a few differences. For one, the Nu Waver is much less violent than the punk. Where the punk chews on razor blades. the Nu Waver "chills out." There is always a glib expression in the mouth of a Nu Waver:

."Can't you fee all this irrelevant material flowing through your brain like so much loosened granola?"

."The KKK took my baby away!"

."Oi."

."Can you relate?

."Your mom's on fire."

."Boy George will die young."

The Nu Waver prefers "break dancing" over "slam dancing," and more synthesized groups like Depeche Mode, Yaz, and Mini-Stry to the Punk rock of the Dead Kennedys, etc.

Preppies-The Preppy trend remains the most active trend in Cohasset. Preppies are noted for Docksiders, L.L. Bean sweaters, and turned-up collars. This trend, which is universally accepted across the nation, seems to represent the prosperity of America.

And now, a quick test: 1. Which name do you consider "punk"? (a) Boy; (b) Jello; (c) Marvin or (d) Shannon. 2. Which trends said what: (a) "Barf out!", (b) "Your Mom's on fire!" and (c) I kill children!". 3. What's a Bug's favorite pasttime? (a) Eating raw cookie batter; (b) Playing with dental floss or (c) applying Oxy-10.

Answers-1.(b), 2.(a) Val; (b) Nu Wave; and (c) Punk. 3. (c).

All T.M.L.'s Repeat After Me: "No-No-No..."

"I love you all . . . really . . . really . . . really . . ."

By Glen Hochkeppel

Something has to be said. In print. Something to show posterity that we, in the 1980's, are not a herd of sniveling, idolatrous groupies hanging on every word a pre-pubescent 26-year-old man lets fall, pleading and begging him to grace us with a peek at his eyes from under dark sunglasses. I am talking, of course, about Michael Jackson, the sweeper of the Grammies, hailed as 1983's "Best New Performer".

I realized something had to be said when, last night, I came across "Eat It," the amusing and deserving parody of "Beat It," by Weird Al Yankovic (creator of such memorable spoofs as "Yoda," "Ricky," and "My Balogna") on the radio. At the end of the song, the deejay practically apologized for the Yankovic version, astounded that "people actually request that song." (Let that be a lesson to the rest of you True Music Lovers; these lackeys get a little ornery when their patron deity is slandered so.) That deejay's views are a bit too widespread for my (or for that matter, any True Music Lover's) liking.

The Jackson phenomenon has nothing to do with his talent as a performer. His talent as a song-writer is passable, though quite thoroughly over-rated. His songs, though they would have been much easier to swallow if sung by a more competent vocalist, still would not merit world wide adulation (record contention). There is an obvious contradiction when the character in the song is some tough-guy lady-killing type, but it is sung by a scrawny guy, who's having trouble growing facial hair and has to screech and shreik to get any volume out of his nasal singing voice, throwing in an occasional "hooo" and "heee" whenever he can't quite get a note.

How then did the soloing Jackson make it? For one thing, he has been mysteriously surrounded by and connected with a menagerie of superstarts and popular personalities, such as Diana Ross, Paul McCartney, Eddy van Halen, Vincent Price, and Steven Spielberg. Also, it has been said that Jackson made some videos. It is more apt to say some videos made Michael Jackson. After making those flashy tapes featuring him doing the steps born in the Jackson Five, how could America do anything but welcome back an old "prodigy"? The main reasons the Jackson Five survived were the cuteness, the innocence and the novelty of having a 10-year-old boy become a superstar. As far as I can tell, the only similarity between the old and the new Jackson is his limited voice range.

Michael Jackson would have us believe he is a modest, God-fearing, unspoiled performer. However, his recent Globe interview smacks of good old Hollywoodish, showbizzy B.S. "I love people who are phenomenally talented," he says. "I just love Liza Minelli to death...I love Steven Spielberg so much...I just love James Brown...I love Sammy Davis Jr...". And, of course, he "loves the girls in the balcony". Somebody give me my insulin shot! And, of course, there's his Michael Jackson Story, and his posters and other paraphernalia. I, for one, am anxiously awaiting the arrival of the Michael Jackson Diet and Exercise Videotape for Unwed Mothers (set to the background of "Billie Jean," of course).

I don't know about you, but I've had it with this guy. You literally cannot flip the radio dial without coming across one of his monuments to society's gullibility. There are those in the reading public who may disagree with me. Those who have ten spare white sparkly gloves.Those who mourned the sudden loss of his hair. Those who actually bought "Thriller." But I tell you this; if good music is to survive, we as the listening public must treat this person as what he is: a fad. All True Music Lovers must. We can't let Eddie Murphy and Weird Al handle the whole work load. We should take heart, though. True, whenever a Jackson song comes on the radio, there are always cheering and break-dancing, but remember, similar excitement used to surround Rubik's Cube, the yo-yo before it, and the hula-hoop before that.

Sorry to burst your bubble, kids, but someone had to say it.

Take A Byte Out Of Your Apple

Evanston, IL--You have only a 3-gallon bucket, a 5-gallon bucket and all the water you want. How can you measure exactly one gallon of water?

If you enjoy solving problems like this one, you may have a basic aptitude for a career in computers, according to Philip Clement, President of DeVRY INC. "This problem requires math ability, logical thinking, and an interest in problem-solving--some of the same skills necessary to work with computers," he explains.

DeVRY INC. is a network of postsecondary technical institutes offering degrees and diplomas in Electronics Technology and Computer Science for Business. Eleven campuses are located across North America.

"There are many types of positions involving computers, including computer operators, service technicians, computer programmers, systems analysts and computer designers. Most of these jobs require abilities that people can identify in themselves," Mr. Clement says. "Of course, actually entering one of these careers usually requires a diploma or degree after high school, and sometimes, several years of experience as well."

Still, Mr. Clement points out that the following skills inventory can help an individual determine if he or she might be suited for a computer career.

1. Do you enjoy analyzing situations?
2. Do you learn new concepts quickly?
3. Can you perform numerical computations quickly and accurately?
4. Can you follow instructions?
5. Do you have patience?
6. Can you visualize objects in your mind?
7. Are you organized?
8. Can you easily grasp the meaning of words?
9. Do you handle financial transactions easily?
10. Do you enjoy gathering facts and making predictions?
11. Do you enjoy working with a calculator?
12. Do you enjoy making important decisions?
13. Do you have musical ability?
14. Can you work under pressure?
15. Do you like to work jigsaw puzzles?
16. Are you good at video games?
17. Do you think logically?
18. Can you easily spot errors in writing materials?
19. Are you curious about how things work?

To assess your interest and possible aptitude, multiply the number of "yes" answers by 5.

"If you score a 70 or above, you might be the right person for a computer job," says the President of DeVRY INC. "And, if so, you are fortunate because job prospects are good."

Mr. Clements adds, "More and more industries are beginning to depend on computer services, so the demand for qualified computer professionals can only go up. The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts that computer jobs will increase throughout the next decade."

DeVRY INC. campuses are located in Atlanta, Chicago and Lombard (IL), City of Industry (Los Angeles), Columbus (OH), Irving (Dallas), Kansas City, Phoenix, Woodbridge (NJ); and Toronto and Calgary, Canada.

Answer to problem: Fill the 3-gallon bucket; pour it all in the 5-gallon bucket. Fill the 3-gallon bucket again; pour it into the 5-gallon bucket until the 5-gallon bucket is filled. What is left in the 3-gallon bucket is one gallon.

The Double-Speak Awards

The National Council of Teachers of English has honored President Reagan with its 10th annual Double-speak Award for describing the MX missile as the "peacekeeper."

Included in the runners-up category was an Air Force colonel who referred to another missile, the Titan II, as a "very large, potentially disruptive re-entry system."

Another runner-up, a Cleveland-based accounting firm, described a fire alarm bell as a "combustion enunciator."

Not satisfied with that, the company called doors "movable partitions" and described 32 tons of gravel and 92 cubic yards of topsoil as a "planter." That should hold lots of petunias.

Beechwood: Friend Or Foe?

By Lisa Brown

As a tradition, many Cohasset residents denounce Beechwood Street as a home for the town's misfits. Some believe that if there is an exception to Cohasset's sophisticated reputation, it exists only in Beechwood. Do these critics have justifiable reasons for labeling the street with such captious characteristics?

Even the more probable reasons raise curious questions. Jerusalem Road, Linden Drive, Atlantic Avenue all have prestigious reputations. Despite their association with wealth, however, the street does not make the people; the people make the street. At this point in time, it is often forgotten that Beechwood was one of the first streets in Cohasset to be inhabited. We must remember that many of Cohasset's forefathers lived in Beechwood and summered along Atlantic Ave., more commonly known Sandy Cove.

Because they don't know Cohasset history, many citizens see Beechwood residents as the town's own group of barbarians. This view must, and most certainly, can be changed. After all, Beechwood has been here the longest and will remain the oldest and most historic part of this town.

"Hang On For Your Life"

By Lisa Morse

"Shooting Star," a hot-five member band consists of two guitarists, two keyboardists, a drummer, and a violinist. Their debut album, "Hang On For Your Life," was released in 1981. Although 1981 sounds like an older album, this music cannot be overlooked.

You may recall hearing the title cut, "Hang On For Your Life" and the ever popular "Hollywood". But beneath those chartbusters lie such unique rock ballards as "You've Got Love" and "Sweet Elatia".

Upon listening to this album, you become aware of the overwhelming talent displayed by these musicians. They've got luck, money, a good beat and Ludwig drums!! Give a listen; you won't regret it.

If you have a poem, short-story or art work — submit it to the SCROLL: Cohasset High School's Literary Magazine.

What Would It Be?

CHS Lamplight

By Lisa Morse

The question asked was, "If you could change one thing in your department, what would it be?" The answer given by CHS faculty may surprise you, just as they surprised me.

The most popular answer was to double the class time every other day. This would enable more time to work. For example, there would be two periods of Science: one for class teaching and the other for laboratory work. The same answer was given for English: one class for mechanics and the other for independent reading and writing. These double classes would appear back to back. Industrial Arts requested the same type of set-up. Apparently, many teachers feel that there is not enough time to finish the required work. As for Creative Arts, another teacher would be needed to expand the program.

Among other replies were a better understanding of the Alternative School and a personal counselor to help students in the Special Needs department. Another request was for specialized courses pertaining to student career expectations.

Many of these wishes were once a normal part of the curriculum. Now, times have changed greatly due to the financial situation. Maybe someday we can return to the times of greater high school possibilities and higher student ambition.

Which Road?

By Kate Bishop

After attending a private school, I have come to realize that I am much better off at a public school. Granted, a private school provides a great deal of opportunity to a large number of people. However, an individual who has learning disabilities and who attends a private school which has academic priorities, may not receive the help needed to excel in education.

A private school is excellent for the individual who demonstrates academic excellence or who is capable of handling the work. The education provided at a private school may be superior to that of most public schools, especially for preparing a student for college. However, one must take into consideration the problems for anyone who has a learning disability. Private schools are not preprared to teach those with different needs; that is not their aim.

On the other hand, a public school is capable of having students of all kinds, with little or no limitations. The public school provides openings for those with special needs, as well as for those with academic excellence. The students can use these opportunities to their advantage or disadvantage. The opportunities are available to all.

I'm not trying to downgrade a private school or a public school. Depending on the individuals and their capabilities, each school has options open in a specific kind of education that is best for the students' needs.

Up With People

Up With People is two unforgettable hours of non-stop entertainment featuring dazzling choreography, spectacular costumes, and a contagious energy that will leave you feeling great.

The energy, the excitement, the entertainment of the all new 1983-84 Up With People show is coming to Marshfield on Thursday and Friday, April 5 and 6 at 7:30 p.m. at the high school.

Marshfield High School is sponsoring this highly acclaimed two hour musical experience performed by a cast of 100 young men and women from 16 countries.

Ticket prices are: students and senior citizens, $4.00, adults, $5.00, and are now on sale at Marshfield High School.

Up With People's music is a dynamic combination of popular medleys and original compositions, energetically performed by the talented cast and band. The choreography is non-stop and finds its way from the stage into the aisles.

Throughout the show, the cast takes the audience on a musical journey of the world. Whether swinging arm in arm at a Belgian beer garden enjoying a Swedish Ox Dance or being pulled into a Brazilian samba line, the Up With People show offers all the excitement of a global tour without the jet lag.

There's music for almost every taste and age, from Renaissance and Modern Classic to the Duran Duran and Lionel Richey.

In a medley from the 1950's, the stage is transformed into a huge high school gymnasium for the junior/senior prom when girls in their ball gowns and guys in their tuxes hop and swing to the music of Tony Bennett, the Cordettes and Bill Haley and the Comets.

Some of the old Up With People favorites are there too, including the group's theme song "Up With People!" and the poignant ballad of a little boy's curiosity about equality, "What Color Is God's Skin?"

High-tech society meets its musical future when "Robbie Robot" and his back-up trio, the Transisters, make their escape from a factory assembly line to the Up With People stage.

Up With People has been seen live in concert by over 8 million people in 47 countries. They have performed at three Super Bowl halftimes, with the Boston Pops and 10 other symphonies, at the 1982 World's Fair and in world settings from Peking, China to Warsaw, Poland.

"Up With People smothers the cares and frets of the day with a shower of light and color and music," wrote one reviewer. "It's an evening of entertainment little short of sheer magic."

Draw your own drive-in design

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

Born ahead of my time, again.

Had I withheld my stint on earth by about 20 years, I'm certain that a pending boon to society would be securely in place.

Drive-in everythings.

At first I scoffed at the notion of never wanting to get out of the car. I wasn't certain if that was a safety precaution for making sure the kids never got their hands on the keys or simply a convenient time-saver. Now I understand. It's a way of life.

I can foresee a drive-in vet. I'll just boost Lilly through the car window for her annual checkup, rabies shot and all.

But so far as my drive-in dentist goes, I'd expect not to have to leave the driver's seat. He may have a tangle of a time. But there's no reason he can't lean out the window to do whatever needs to be done. Car seats already go back in some models.

A drive-in supermarket is long overdue. Let them rotate the shelves or move them past us on an escalator kind of affair. We sit there, listening to piped-in music and pluck the groceries from the passing aisles. The price will be bleeped the moment it's lifted. We pay the tally, no standing in long lines and eating a banana in front of everybody when you're starving. Do it in the privacy of your own car. Drive home with the passenger side stacked with groceries.

. . . To unload them, and this is the best part, in your own drive-in window.

Every house will have one. Mine, I figure, swings around from front to the back, skirting my flower garden, missing the bulkhead and has its little stop line right by my back kitchen window.

It's astounding that a progressive society has been blind to the need of a drive-in window in every home. We know perfectly well kids would like supper served like McDonald's. They will pause out front when they get home, you know they've got the car anyway, they speak into the mailbox microphone, giving their order for a snack/supper, the basketball or movie money. Then they drive round and you hand it to them through the window.

One of the heartening aspects is that gym clothes, particularly sneakers, can be shot directly into the wash chutes from outside, with a spray of bleach triggered at the incipient footwear as it enters the washer. There's an argument for installing drive-in showers in sophisticated models. One ought to be careful about using that though, if the car's interior isn't covered in shower curtain fabric.

But you see the possibilities here, the reduction in mud tracks through the house, the elimination of heat loss through constantly opened kitchen doors. There'll be adjustment time involved for those who are denied opening the refrigerator door every seven minutes. And we'll have to start posting intra-family messages on the drive-in window.

Not for a moment do I see anything but a hassle in a drive-in landscaping service, all those tire tracks on the loam. And drive-in furniture stores could be awkward. There are clearly bugs to be worked out of the concept before it is fully acceptable. For my part I think I'll continue to visit the doctor in his office for the time being. One can be only so contemporary.

Candidates' corner . . .

Doris Golden

A meeting was held at 109 Nichols Road to plan the Golden for Selectman campaign. She expressed her desire that the campaign be issue oriented and kept on a high level in order that the voters may make positive evaluations.

Mrs. Golden reaffirmed her stand that confrontation politics is counter-productive and regressive. In her six years on the Cohasset School Committee, five of which its elected Chairman, she never denied anyone the opportunity to appear before the board and be treated with the respect that they deserved.

She sees her role as a selectman to be a conscientious overseer of the business of the Town and in particular the welfare and safety of its residents.

Under no circumstances would she sacrifice her moral standards and principles for the sake of political expedience.

While serving in public office, residents will remember when the tough decisions had to be made, she made them on their behalf based on sound judgment and without fear of reprisal.

She is proud of her campaign committee as they reflect a balanced representation of the town. Each of them will contribute valuable input and direction.

Those people who are interested in participating in a residents movement for sound and responsible Government, please contact any of the above individuals or call Doris Golden at 383-1031 or 383 9319.

George Marlette

George L. Marlette, III, candidate for the Cohasset School Committee will announce his four point Plan for the Cohasset Public Schools March 24, 1984, at a Wine and Cheese Reception to be held from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Cushing Room, Rockland Trust, Cushing Plaza Rte 3A Cohasset.

Marlette, who has been an outspoken critic of the short term "crisis management" approach taken by incumbent Richard Conley sees his four point Plan as the only program which provides alternatives rather than stop gap measures.

Marlette said, "New ideas and viable alternatives must be introduced into the Cohasset Public Schools if we are to continue to provide a relevant educational program in the face of contemporary problems.

"My four point program, which I will introduce on March 24 will enable us to live within budget constraints, honor our responsibilities to current students, while updating our educational longe range plans to provide "state of the art" education for students currently in elementary school...or soon to be."

A donation of $1 is requested. Senior citizens and students are free. For ticket information, please call: 383-1239.

In a move to attract Cohasset's younger and newly registered voters, School Committee Candidate George Marlette announced the formation of the "YVM" Group (Young Voters for Marlette).

To date some 17 young voters from 18 to 25 years old have expressed an interest in the "YVM's."

Marlette said, "This group is being formed not only to help me in my first bid for elective office, but also to provide a vehicle for Cohasset's younger voters to become acquainted with and involved in local politics, and in particular the school system, which all too often is considered "off limits" to the younger voter without children in the school system.

"I believe that if we are to encourage our young people to remain in Cohasset and raise families, while contributing to the economic health and quality of life in our community, we must encourage their input early on.

"In the course of my campaign, as I have gone door to door in Cohasset, I have found the viewpoint and information volunteered by younger voters to be of enormous help to me in gaining insight into our school system."

The Marlette Campaign Committee needs volunteers. Registered voters from 18 to 25 are invited to join the "YVM" Group meeting April 6, 31 Rustic Drive, Cohasset, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

For information, call 383-1239.

Joan Appel chosen as outstanding artist

Joan Appel, an artist living in Cohasset has been chosen as one of eighteen women out of 2000 applicants nationwide, to show in the "Women's National Exhibit" in Washington, D.C.

This is an annual exhibition sponsored by Galerie Triangle, a prestigious gallery in the Capital which is devoted to women's art. It will run during March.

Each exhibit educates the average viewer as to what is being executed across the country by women artists, with the intent to show the general public that women artists are serious, avant-garde, and as important in the world of art as men.

This year's exhibition consists of paintings, prints, sculpture and mixed media pieces.

Appel is the only artist selected from Massachusetts. Her two monotypes which were selected are entitled "And it almost contained her..." and "Solo Illusion." She has been working in this medium for some time.

The technique involves painting on a glass plate, then pressing a sheet of paper onto it, applying pressure, and then "pulling" one print. (The technique is also called monoprinting).

All of her subjects are personal, some abstract, others interpretative representational pieces. She has shown in galleries in New England, Florida and New York, and is a current gallery artist showing at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, The Cape Cod Art Association in Barnstable, and two galleries in New Haven, The Frame Shop Gallery and Signature Gallery.

Currently a full-time student at Lesley College, Appel s working for a Master's Degree in Art Administration.

A musician and actress as well, her many current projects include the design and construction of special costumes (soft sculpture) for the Hingham Ballet production of "Alice in Wonderland", and assistant directorship, as well as performing in the up-coming opera "The Masque of Angels" which will be performed April 8 by the Unicorn Singers at St. Luke's church in Scituate.

School Comm continues $ push

By Mike Berger

School Committee members are waiting for the Advisory Committee to decide if the committee's request for $126,000 additional spending will be approved.

However, initial comments from the Advisory Board chairman seem to indicate the full amount will not be approved.

Advisory Board Chairman Jim Lagrotteria said the town has less than half of the money needed to fund some 44 town meeting articles.

"You are not the only department thas has been cut," Lagrotteria said. "We have not hired personnel in the Fire and Police Depts."

Again, committee members and School Supt. Eugene Crowell repeated there is no more to cut in the school budget without hurting the quality of education.

Salaries and staff increases comprise nearly 80 percent of the budget. Next year's staff is projected to be cut back 3½ positions including a part-time Kindergarten teacher, an English and Social Studies teacher at the jr-senior high school and an assistant bookkeeper.

Although a Grade 5 teacher will be lost, the committee will restore a Grade 3 teacher to offset the cut.

Staff raises amount to nearly $179,000. The other increases are $2,000 for textbooks, $3,800 for the library, $2,000 for audio visual supplies, $27,500 for special needs costs, $9,000 athletics, $13,000 utilities, $1,500 grounds maintenance and $8,000 building maintenance.

Other increases are $5,000 for unemployment compensation, $3,000 equipment replacement, $20,000 equipment purchasing, $4,000 vocational tuition and $23,000 for Osgood School painting, a vocational guidance information program, cable television and arts.

The advisory board granted the school committee an additional $96,000 and the committee feels it needs an additional $126,097 to maintain a quality education. Of the $222,176 total increase in school spending, $179,000 is earmarked for staffing costs and raises and $43, 176 for an increase in operating expenses.

The two major questions asked at the budget public hearing Monday night concerned principal and administrative salaries and how many classes at the high school had ten or fewer students.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said a comparision was done among the area schools and the six percent across the board increase to school principals was "not

Riverview Drive status questioned

By Karen Brown

Is Riverview Drive a town road or a private way?

Residents from this 'cul de sac,' Dorothy Bates, and a representative from the Water Dept. met with the Selectmen recently to discuss this complicated legal matter.

The issue is if Riverview Drive is town-owned property or an easement granting only limited access to town residents.

Riverview Drive residents have complained about trespassing, public drinking and even the use of firearms in this section of town.

One resident said: "I asked the Chief of Police if a car drives through 65 miles per hour, will you come?"

"'Not unless there was a disturbance,'" the resident quoted the Police Chief as saying. Residents claim the police in the past refused to respond to their calls saying the matter was out of their jurisdiction.

"It was always a right of way with the Bates family," said Dorothy Bates who owns the landlocked property bordered by the other residents of the cul de sac.

The Water Dept. "uses it twice a year," said a

An inside look at school therapy session

By Jane Lane

The school department expends about $3000 per year for an independent consultant to evaluate students whom teachers or parents believe possess emotional or behavioral problems. Many of the students who are evaluated, are referred to outside therapists, frequently to area psychologists.

There are no available statistics, but many of the families referred to private counseling have become dissatisfied with the experience, and the school system which recommended the action.

There are arguments on both sides of this issue. Many parents say therapy was a waste of time and money, and the school and consultant failed to diagnose the real problem.

Consultant Laurence Lieberman, a Ph.D. in Special Education, thinks the increase in the number of stud-

Dick Conley announces candidacy

School Committee Chairman Richard Conley formally announced his candidacy for re-election to the committee.

His opponents are Judy Volungis and George Marlette III.

Here are his comments.

"In running for re-election to the Cohasset School Committee, I pledge to continue my dedication to quality education. I believe as strongly as ever that our boys and girls are the Town's most valuable resource and that the support of excellence in our schools will pay high dividends for all of us.

"I am proud of our school system and its fine record of scholastic and extra-curricular achievement. I am proud of my role in its management. I believe my 100 percent attendance record speaks to the fact that I have done my homework and continue to be accessible to my constituency.

"My goals are in keeping with sound educational practice and I have worked harmoniously with our staff, students and parent groups for quality education within the strict fiscal constraints of Proposition 2½.

"We have come a long way in the past three years and by working together we will continue to educate young men and women who will be a credit to themselves, their parents and the town.

"I have been a resident of Cohasset for over thirty years and have witnessed first hand the many changes in our Town. By knowing the past, I feel that I have the knowledge to be part of the Committee that will set the educational standards for our children in the future.

Hull man to run for Congress

Attorney George Donovan of Hull announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination as Congressman for the 10th District Monday, March 26, at 7:30 p.m., at Cohasset-By-The-Sea, Cohasset Harbor.

Sewer public hearing notice

The Board of Sewer Commissioners, in accordance with the applicable provision of Title 40 CFR Chapter 25, announces a Public Hearing on the Draft Report of the Ward Engineering Associates Supplemental Facilities Plan for Cohasset, Monday, May 15, at 8 p.m. at the Town Hall.

The purpose of the hearing will be to discuss the waste water disposal program developed for the town and to discuss the environmental considerations.

Copies of the draft plan, together with a summary of the plan's findings and recommendations, will be available for public review by April 15, at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Town Hall and the Sewer Commission office at 43 Elm Street.

Dormant spraying

The Tree and Park Department will start dormant ground spraying, with the use of Methoxychlor, in a week to 10 days, weather permitting. The spraying will be done in the early morning hours.

The department will honor the requests "not to be sprayed" from the residents who are listed in the Town Clerk's office, unless a heavy infestation occurs in those areas. In that case those residents will be notified.

Cohasset beekeepers are requested to submit their names to the Town Clerk's office so that their yards will not be sprayed.

Trees of "no-spray" residents can be marked with white paper plates using tacks, not nails, to attach them.

CEMETERIES

The Tree and Park Department is requesting all artificial flowers and leaves be removed from the graves at Woodside, Beechwood and Green Gate Cemeteries, so that spring clean-up can begin.

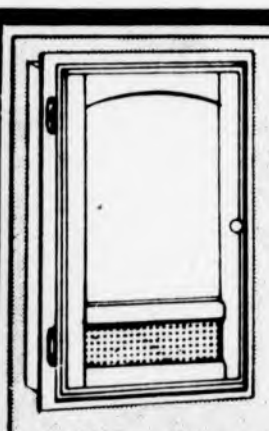
Leash dogs for road race

Dog Officer Richard Yocum warns dog-owners he and his assistants will be impounding any dog found unleashed Saturday, March 31 in the vacinity of a Rotary Club sponsored road race.

The race begins at 10 a.m. at Cohasset Common and continues down Elm Street, to Atlantic Ave., to Jerusalem Road, to Forest Street, to North Main Street and back to the common.

The town has a bylaw which prohibits any dog from being on public or private property without a leash, Yocum said.

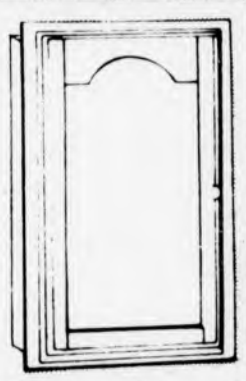
Yocum will be following the runners and intends to impound any unleashed dog, he said.



Some 1,000 runners are expected to run in the road race.

Low income housing

Selectmen were due to discuss Wednesday night a state application which will provide low and moderate income family housing. Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said although no site has been specifically selected, there is a possibility selectmen may recommend to buy or lease a two-family house on Government Island. The state threatened to withhold state aid and grant money to the town if something was not done about the shortage of subsidized housing for low and moderate income families.



Last week's Mystery House is now the 'Cards & Shards' building, 45 South Main St.

An introduction to ambulance report

(The Marinerwill be publishing excerpts from the Ambulance Study Committee final report to selctmen. Here is the report's introduction. Ed.)*

On Sept. 21, 1983, Cohasset selectmen adopted "The Charge of Ambulance Study Committee". In that "Charge" this Commitee "...shall generally be to research, evaluate, and survey all methods of ambulance service delivery ..." with final recommendations "...in written report form addressed to the selectmen by Feb. 15, 1984".

"The final report recommendation shall include a plan for implementing the most effective method of ambulance service delivery."

With this "charge" in mind the "Committee" proceeded to formulate a procedure to gather data. Many hours were spent gathering data from the Fire Department logs and incident reports.

The firemen gave the Committee a tour of the ambulance and the five town back-up ambulance. We received copies of the current Rules and Regulations. We received input from four doctors who live in Cohasset.

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray supplied the Committee with all proposed bills regarding Ambulance service.

A representative from Cape and Islands Emergency Medical Services System came before the Committee and discussed the Cape Cod Regional program.

The Committee was "charged" with supplying an interim report by December 15, 1983, which we did, and a copy is attached.

A representative from the New England Telephone Company came before the Committee to discuss "911" Emergency Telephone Service.

The Committee devised a "request for quote" and mailed it to six outside ambulance service companies, three responded.

The Commitee sent letters to 25 surrounding cities and towns and area hospitals regarding regionalized and/or co-operative services.

On January 23, 1984, the Committee had a Public Meeting specifically to gain input from the community, about forty residents attended. The Committee met weekly in open meeting and as the final report came together, we met more often in open session. The Commitee did not conduct any executive sessions.

We received assistance from the following Town Departments and we thank them: Office of Selectmen, Town Accountant and Fire Department.

Road race sunday

The registration for the eighth annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea is fast approaching the 800 runner limit.

Entrants from all New England States plus New York, New Jersey, Illinois, Montana, Pennsylvania and California are ready for the 1 p.m. gun Sunday.

Nearly half the runners are from Cohasset ranging in age from a nine year-old boy to a spry 61 year-old lady.

Nationally ranked runner Sara Linsley will be returning to her hometown from Chicago to defend her title as first woman to finish. This is a title she has held since the inception of the race.

This year special awards will be given to Cohasset residents finishing first in each category of runners, thus continuing the local excitement of the race.

Refreshments will be served after the race in the Town Hall parking lot, followed by video films of the race and the awards in the Town Hall.

In order to assure the safety of all the runners, residents are urged to keep dogs in during the race along the route and particularly away from the common.

Access road study again proposed for state park

By Cyndee Moore

Main and Free Street residents in Hingham will bear the brunt of traffic into Wompatuck State Park for yet another summer.

This was the message at the Wompatuck Advisory Council meeting March 14.

Although the Department of Environmental Management was awarded $100,000 in bond money to perform an access road study to determine if and where an additional route into the park should go, Lendrum Lee, assistant regional supervisor of the DEM, said such a study would not begin before next fall.

"Levels of bureaucracy" in the DEM, said Lee, have slowed down the writing of the contract for the access study and the bidding for the job.

ADVISORY COUNCIL'S INPUT

However, Lee said the director is ready to receive the advisory council's input on the study by summer.

Norwell representative Arlene Lucid said the study should be over four seasons.

Hingham representative and planning board chairman Dick Cook stressed the need for a seasonal study.

"It's a five-month problem . . . from May to September there's a combinatin of traffic into the park, to the beach, etc. on Rte. 228," Cook explained.

Cook, a traffic engineer, has volunteered to examine the traffic problem for the council's input report.

Myles Cassidy, also a Norwell representative, clearly said, "People in Norwell don't want an access road into the park.

"Grove Street is incapable of taking the traffic. The road isn't wide enough or strong enough. Presently, I know the feelings of people on Grove Street. I have had calls saying people are against it," Cassidy said.

While Lucid is concerned that the council would rely on Cook's opinion for its input since he is also a Hingham resident, Council Chairman Robert Garvin, as well as John Richardson of Hingham, stressed the study was not an attempt to shift the traffic problem from Hingham to Norwell.

"We're all going to be talking in ignorance until we lay some facts on the table," Cook said, adding his input is "not some Machiavellian attempt to come up solving Hingham's problems."

Council members agreed to view Cook's opinions as those of a professional rather than those of a Hingham resident.

ARMY BASE

Lee said the application regarding the transfer of the adjacent army base to the park has gone to the Philadelphia Park Services and must now go to Washington and the Department of Interior.

At this time, it is not known how long it will take for the application to be approved, but Lee said the federal General Services Administration (GSA) is still having appraisals made to see whether DEM should receive the property for a 100 percent discount.

GSA is also having appraisals submitted for the price of a demolition of all structures, Lee said, and M.P.'s are now guarding the property's 757 acres.

Plans call for demolishing the catwalk a youth fell from earlier this year, and for the destruction of a water tower and two open wells.

Lee told the council the time is ripe for applying any political pressure to the U.S. Senator and Representatives for awarding the base to Wompatuck.

FISHERMAN'S LANDING SITE(S)

The council's next meeting, Saturday, April 7, at 9 a.m., will combine the monthly business meeting with a tour of the proposed fisherman's landing site(s).

School Comm continues push

out of line with other schools."

School Business officer Stephen Hart said Cohasset is significantly below the state average for supervisory costs and above the state average for teaching costs.

Regarding the high school classes, High School Principal Dick Streeter said there were 19 classes with ten or fewer students for non-academic subjects and eight such classes for academics.

Crowell said these classes were needed to maintain the course offerings for vocational subjects and advanced courses. The implemenation of a regional cable network could replace the cost of an instructor for some of these courses, he said.

Since Fiscal Year 1982, the School Dept. has declined 208 students, 47 positions including 20 teachers have been cutback, saving $522,441.

If the approval is not granted by town meeting, Crowell said Cohasset will have the smallest budget increase among area towns.

School roof

The advisory board does agree with the committee to bond $550,000 to replace leaking roofs at the high school and the Deer Hill Elementary School.

Crowell said there is a strong possibility the state would reimburse 50 percent of the $550,000 needed to repair these roofs.

School counselling sessions examined . . .

ents with emotional problems is indicative of the expanding number of traumas and poor relationships in the home. Not pointing his finger at Cohasset alone, he noted that more and more children are being exposed to "horrendous relationships within their homes," often leading to a lasting separation between parents.

The emotional trauma caused by a deteriorating home life can manifest itself in severe emotional distress, he added.

One Cohasset parent whose son participated in a negative therapy situation, feels there was no serious attempt by the school or the consultant to locate the reason for the boy's poor school attitude. Complaints of stomach aches, continual crying in the classroom, and extreme nervousness were symptoms of an underlying problem no one correctly identified, the mother explained.

After four sessions with a therapist at $50 per hour, it was concluded that the second grade boy strongly disliked and feared his teacher.

"I don't think a genuine effort was made at the school to look at themselves as the root of his problem," she added."It was just a personality problem that corrected itself once he was promoted, but the school felt it was easier to refer him somewhere else, than have to deal with the problem themselves."

Dr. Lieberman has been functioning as psychologist for the Deer Hill and Osgood Schools for ten years. He works with principals, teachers and the special education staff in assisting children with learning or behavioral problems.

Dr. Lieberman is called in by the school principal, and later meets with the individual teacher who gives a history of the child to the consultant. Sometimes the child is observed in the classroom, sometimes informal testing is completed with the student, and once in a while, the psychologist talks with the child.

"If we feel there's more (wrong) than the specific difficulty the child is having in class, which manifests itself in a particular behavior - if it is more than a momentary type of problem, we may set up a core evaluation," he explained.

"If there is a perceived problem with the child that goes beyond his relationship with his environment or a specific learning situation - he may be depressed in all his classes, not playing with his peers on the playground. Then we think about how to solve the problem," Dr. Lieberman added. "Counseling may be a good idea because we have determined the problem is beyond a simple school-related issue."

One Cohasset family who were satisfied with their counseling experience continued the sessions for two years. Their child was dyslexic, but was suffering from additional adjustment problems, with school and life. With the help of a psychologist, the child now possesses a better self image and is "doing as well as can be expected" in school, where total comprehension is not an easy task, his mother explained.

Another positive aspect of their continued therapy was the inclusion of the entire family. Once or twice a year, the family members joined in a session to discuss their feelings - a helpful situation for everyone, she added.

Some families are undecided about the benefits of therapy, and wonder why they were referred.

"I am asking myself if this therapy is worth it," one mother stated. "I often wonder if anything is being accomplished by it."

Her daughter was referred by Dr. Lieberman to seek outside counseling. The specific problem was that the youngster was "failing to live up to her potential" in school. The consultant explained to her it was the girl's underlying depression that stalled her academic motivation.

"I wasn't aware of any depression. I'm at a loss to explain what and if there is any real problem," she added. "Counseling has not yet provided us with any answers, although her school work is picking up a bit. But it really hasn't had any great effect. I'm questioning more, the reason why the school thought it was so necessary she receive counseling."

Dr. Lieberman defends his position by explaining that he may refer a family to outside counseling, but it is that particular therapist who would determine whether the individual child is in need of continued assistance.

Underachievement in class is not a reason Dr. Lieberman would refer anyone to counseling. "Strictly emotional problems," are the causes of his concern.

One Cohasset family says they were referred by the consultant to a psychologist, and are still unsure whether the entire experience was necessary. No other alternatives were discusses or researched by the Deer Hill school staff other than referral to a therapist. Later that same year, it was detected during a physical examination that the youngster was iron-deficient. That was the root of many of his behavioral problems, they believe.

"We were referred to therapy before any other avenues were explored: core evaluation, vitamin deficiency, study habits, basic abilities," the mother noted.

Another mother whose child participated in counseling years ago, wonders today "why did it take so long to find out what the problem was. I feel it was premature to say the child feels bad and may be counseling. They were way off track with the real problem," she added.

Her daughter was referred after a teacher suggested "something is not right". After meeting with Dr. Lieberman and a teacher, the school officials determined that the child was not achieving her potential and "at some point she was going to get so frustrated with her inabilities, maybe she would just pull herself up."

In the meantime, they told her, she was going to realize her disparity between ability and achievement, and suggested counseling might help her adjust.

The child was referred to counseling and at the same

Cohasset to Hull sewer connection debated

By Bill Hayward

Hull Sewer Treatment Plant Manager Edward Kendrick recently spoke to the Sewer Advisory Committee about the possibility of Cohasset connecting to Hull's sewer system.

Kendrick said the Hull operation has over 30 miles of sewer pipe and a capacity of 3 million gallons per day.

The current flow to the Hull plant after recent wet weather is approxiamtely 2 million gallons per day. Kendrick said this flow is much higher than it should because of infiltration of run off water into the system. Some of the sewer pipes are over 100 years old.

An engineering study is underway in Hull to locate leaking pipes and to decide on the best method to repair them. Once the leaks are fixed, the flow rate should be considerably reduced, Kendrick said.

If the entire town of Hull was fully developed and sewered, Kendrick estimated a daily flow rate of 2 and 2½ million gallons, with a tight system.

Kendrick spoke in terms of a client and supplier relationship for Cohasset and Hull.

Advisory Committee Chairman Chartis Langmaid disagreed with that approach to the possible agreement. "I think some people feel that Cohasset just doesn't want to be a client," she said.

Sewer commissioner Ted Guild said, "As far as I am concerned if we went ahead with this, we would buy a certain percentage of the sunk cost of that plant. We wouldn't be a client, we would own it."

Kendrick said, "As to what type of agreement could be reached, the possibilities are unlimited."

Kendrick said, "Unlike you, we have nothing to discuss (among ourselves) yet. When your study is completed, and if you make an offer, then we will take the bull by the horns and give an answer."

Joe Ward of Ward Engineering said he met recently with state officials. He said the state has given Cohasset the go ahead for an on site sewer repair progam, which would be part of any sewage disposal plan the town chooses.

"We did get verbal confirmation from them (the state) that there would be funding for an on site program," he said.

Ward also said state officials responded favorably to the possibility of Cohasset connecting to Hull's sewer plant. However, he added that no decision or agreement has been made with the state.

League annual meeting

The Social Service League of Cohasset invites the residents of Cohasset to their annual meeting Tuesday, April 10, 1984, at 12:30 p.m., at St. Stephen's Parish Hall, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset.

The guest speaker will be Warren Dahlin, Executive Director of South Shore Edler Services.

His topic will be "The Challenge of Longevity."

Counselling sessions reveiwed . . .

time, an auditory problem was detected by a medical specialist. The parent feels the quick recommendation for counseling was "premature and inappropriate."

Other families believe they had some relatively minor benefits, but deem the entire experience worthless.

One parent says his child, who has some severe learning disabilities and is involved in Chapter 766 programs, suffered emotional problems because of the stigma attached to participation in that program. Since six sessions with a psychologist were completed, the parents have spent more time in school, attempting to "fit his classroom activities to his abilities. We have received some cooperation from the school, but not always. And any solutions arrived at, have been solutions we came up with - not with a therapist or the school," he added.

For many families, therapy is economically unfeasible. And although the schools may pay partial cost if the child is entitled under Chapter 766, many parents refuse, citing financial difficulties. Some insurance plans cover a partial payment, and families are forced to stop when funds are dry.

Dr. Lieberman says this is the single greatest reason for the decline in the number of children actually undergoing therapy. Since Proposition 2 1/2 and the limited school funding, there are not as many students seeking outside professional therapy, he noted.

Although he admits there were some abuses under the previous system in which the schools paid the costs of the session, limited funding has caused many children to be shut off from a necessary service.

The issue, he added, is whether the schools should be responsible for services provided the student outside the classroom, somewhat removed from related traditional education.

In Cohasset, as in most other communities, Dr. Lieberman finds "the school committee in their machinations sometimes only think of the cost - not that the child is in great need of help."

An indepth look at South Shore Collaborative

(This is the first of a multi-story series on the South Shore Collaborative. —Ed.)

By Theresa Sullivan

The South Shore Collaborative means many things to many people.

It can be a speech class, a sheltered workshop or a group of students, as the Community Program at East School in Hingham is, for multiply-handicapped children. The goal, in each program scattered through the member towns of the collaborative, is education. But "education" has a variety of meanings for the collaborative staff.

The Community Program serves students between 3 and 22 who are severely and profoundly handicapped, director Pat Linari said.

These children are visually, hearing- or speech-impaired or are unable to walk. Most have a combination of these handicaps, in addition to retardation.

Each student in the program has an Individual Education Plan (IEP), which sets goals and objectives for the student.

For example, a goal for a child might be to learn to eat solid food. "You introduce him to textured foods. You add apple sauce to the apple juice.

"You hope they build up a tolerance for chunky food," Linari said. What if that doesn't work? "You keep trying new ways."

Linari said some of the children cannot feel their mouths. Sometimes teachers and aides use a vibrator around the child's mouth to try to increase his sensitivity, she said.

Another way of trying to get children to accept solid food is adding yoghurt to milk. With these students, the teachers and aides have to keep trying new methods.

For many of the Community Program children, "Their central nervous system is so severely damaged, the sensitivity is either heightened or reduced," Linari said, making touch to the lips either unbearable or a process the student isn't even aware of.

Community Program, and the other South Shore Collaborative programs, serve children in the collaborative towns (Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth) and some students from surrounding towns who need the very specialized programs the South Shore Collaborative offers. Hanover, Abington and Brockton currently have students enrolled in the collaborative's programs.

The 34 students in the Community Program require one-to-one attention, Linari said.

Depending on the child's need, he could work with an occupational therapist, a speech therapist and/or a physical therapist about an hour a week each.

"In teaching the severely handicapped, it's not a normal person who has slowed down. You have to develop totally unique ways" of teaching, Linari said.

"Progress here is not counted in leaps and bounds, but by minute steps," Dr. Michael Savage, the collaborative's director said in a recent interview.

"There are some kids who will never attain their goal," Linari said. But the teachers, aids and therapists are persistent.

Next week: the views of the social workers and the parents of the Community Program students.

☐ Cohasset Undergraduates of Westfield State College have achieved Dean's List honors for academic excellence in the fall semester, 1983.

To qualify for the Dean's List, students must maintain a grade point average of 3.3 based on a 4.0 system. Cohasset students are:

Linda Curley, senior, of 229 S. Main St., a Special Education major; Elizabeth Hobson, junior, of 31 Deep Run, an Economics major; and David Sullivan, senior, of 11 Ledge Way, a Computer Science major.

☐ Burke Ketchum of Fern Way was recently appointed Vice President Marketing-Public Relations of Anderson-Nichols, a Boston based engineering and architectural firm. In making the announcement, the President of Anderson-Nichols, Charles Dudinski said that "Mr. Ketchum will be responsible for acquainting business, industry and governmental agencies with the total range of services offered by Anderson-Nichols."

Prior to assuming his present position, Ketchum was vice president in charge of the Planning division.

☐ All over town you see 'em . . . running, panting, jogging as fast as they can. It's Roadrace time, be sure to get a good seat to watch the runners next Sunday, April Fool's Day. Give a cheer for your favorite runner, they sure work hard to get their applause. The Mulcahy clan will be representing our Red Gate Lane district, good luck to one and all.

☐ Bob Fiori and a gang had a super time last weekend. They were part of a group that chartered a plane that went to Canada where they spent the time sightseeing, and as part of the deal, managed to take in a Bruins game. The Bruins won, too. Perhaps the Bruins should consider making them part of the team package, having fans there must have helped them in their win . . .

Boosters Club 'Spirit' award winners for winter sports were Lisa Ferreira, hockey cheering, Peter Caruso, basketball, David Ormiston, hockey, Barbara Meers, hockey cheering, Tina Moore, basketball, Katee Duffy, gymnastics (all back row), and Ingrid Anderson, basketball cheering, and Lee Reid, wrestling.

☐ Eirik Anderson, a Junior at Lawrence Academy in Groton, Mass. has made the Honor Roll for the Second Term. Another feather in his cap for the semester was that he went undefeated in wrestling this season. Eirik is the son of Barbara and Daniel Anderson of Stockbridge Street. His sister, Ingrid, attends CHS and his brother, Danny, attends New Hampshire College.

☐ Would like to extend a special thank you to Ozzie Ingram, a "star reporter" who always has a "tidbit" of news that is enjoyed by all.

☐ Don't forget that the Boosters are holding their Spring Dance Friday, March 30, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Hugo's Lighthouse. Tickets are $12 a couple and can be purchased at the door or from any Boosters Club member. This is a fun event and it is a major fund raiser for the Boosters ongoing support of all of the CHS athletic teams.

☐ Ran into Sarah Frioio last week, who reports having an outstanding time in Florida, where she worked as part of her Johnson and Wales training. She learned a lot and stayed warm while she did it, an unbeatable combination.

☐ Michael J. Casey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Casey, 225 Fairoaks Lane, Cohasset, was awarded a varsity letter in hockey at the annual winter sports banquet held at Vermont Academy, an independent school in Saxtons River, VT.

☐ Carol Walls of 137 Fairoaks Lane, is in the executive secretary program at Chamberlayne Junior College in Boston. She is serving as an intern at Fegreus and Fubini attorneys at 4 Liberty Plaza, Water St., Boston during the Spring semester. She will be performing secretarial duties.

Carol, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walls, graduated from Cohasset High School in 1981.

The fourth-semester internship, which awards academic credit, provides students with the opportunity to apply the skills they have learned to actual situations in business.

☐ Lots of gals can claim to have been there, and they are telling the truth. During the recent house tour, the Dr. Douglases house was shown, and it is now to be a residence for Michael Kennedy and his wife.

☐ Happy Birthday to Brett Wetzel, who turned 18 last week, and to Bernie Mulcahy, who turned 39 years old (again)!

☐ Dave Rourke and Torin Sweeney are "on the road again," this time heading for Florida. They are hoping to find good fishing jobs down there, while they soak up the rays of course, and here's hoping all goes well for them.

☐ According to a reliable source, Joe McVay really cooks up a great breakfast—the proof was in the eggs last Sunday, they were delicious.

☐ There was 600 people or so on hand to watch the Donkey Basketball game last Saturday night. One wonders if all the riders were sure to pay up on their insurance before playing, it sure can be a rough game! John Anderson gets the award for best all-round rider, scorer . . . he had it down to a science!

☐ That's the news for this week. Keep it coming in. We all love to hear your news.

Alternatives

There are thought-provoking suggestions burgeoning forth, that are intended to help people who live on the South Shore find their way to Boston.

We appreciate the thoughts, we surely do. It has been a number of years since the South Shore has risen so readily to the minds and the lips of people who drive to Boston from the innards of the city or from its west or north.

We particularly are fond of the savvy recommendation that is blasted on a brilliant orange sign as one approaches that project on the Expressway: "Seek Alternative Routes."

Unfortunately at the moment one sees the sign, he has about as many options as he would if he read it while pulling in the driveway to his house.

That smartmouth adage: "You can't get there from here" was ahead of its time. Its creation was in anticipation of this project.

Another idea, which residents are weighing heavily, is the prospect of bicyciing to Boston.

That has the inherent benefits of fresh air and good health. There are a couple drawbacks however. No one in his right mind ought to be riding the Expressway on anything other than a lead-lined tank while the dispositions of motorists are sorely tested.

Secondly, though we're certain there are peddlars with strong thigh muscles in Cohasset, a cyclist ought to leave town by 5 a.m. to get to his office by 8. That trip might be slowed somewhat for some executives whose business suits have skirts. Decorum costs time for the skirted cyclist.

In a brochure put out by the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC), one comment from a bicycle commuter was: "Now I get to see the Charles River as I pedal by, instead of somebody's bumper when I drove to work."

That would be encouraging if it didn't mean our cyclists would have to circle around Rte. 128 and enter from the north to catch the Charles instead of the gas tanks.

Beyond the challenge of getting in town, we now have new words for our language and we're not referring to those devised by Cohasset drivers. . . . Jersey barriers. We are, down here in the residually rural South Shore, familiar with Jersey cows. We suspect, however, our expertise with Jersey barriers will be far more proficient than it ever was with the cows of that breed.

Give us a few months of this Expressway project and we will have found alternatives that no agency has thought of yet.

Shopping for the right doctor

By Claire McDonough

"I just read that a U.S. District Court judge ruled that Blue Cross/Blue Shield violated the Sherman Antitrust Act," I told the Dragon, "but I'm not sure what it means."

"It's fairly simple," he explained. "Once a month we used to get a statement from the Blues telling how much a doctor or hospital had charged for a given service, and how much the insurer had paid.

"Then, even though the payment might be significantly less than the doctor wanted, the patient couldn't be charged for the balance.

"Now Judge Caffrey ruled that it isn't legal for an insurance company to tell a doctor how much he can charge for his work."

"I don't call that very simple," I told him. "And I'm not sure I'm going to like it, either. No matter how you look at it, the bottom line will be that health care will cost us more."

"Not necessarily," the Dragon replied. "The Massachusetts Medical Society says that people can comparison shop for their doctors. For example, if one vendor will give you a barium enema for $32, and another charges $40, you just go to the cheaper one.

"It's all going to come down to what the market will bear. And supply and demand will have a lot to do with it, too. If inguinal hernia repair becomes a popular procedure, doctors will probably be able to charge more than they do for, say, a hemorrhoidectomy. As with everything else, the market will find its own level."

"I don't know," I said doubtfully. "It's kind of hard to picture someone doubled over with an inguinal hernia putting the job out for bid. And do you suppose we're going to be treated to a lot of T.V. commercials for cut-rate medical care?

"Somehow it's hard to conceive of a white coated individual with a stethescope around his neck,standing outside an ivy covered building saying,

" 'Hi! I'm Ernie Dock. This month the Dock Medical Center is featuring gall bladder removal at 30 percent off. If you can find anyone — I mean anyone who'll do it for less, bring me a copy of his ad, and I'll take your gall bladder out without charge. That's right, folks — zippo. But these prices won't last forever. May 1 we go back to our regular rates. So don't wait — come on down!' "

The Dragon nodded. "It could happen. There might even be a little snob appeal. You know — a well known actor or actress, dressed with exquisite taste, looks at the camera and says,

" 'I vacation on the Riviera. My jewelry is by Cartier. I drink Chivas Regal and I drive a Benz. Do you think I'm going to trust my splenectomy to the doctor who advertises that he's cheaper than anyone else?' "

"Right," I agreed. "The prescription pads could even have a discreet little 'You Get What You Pay For' on the bottom.

"We'll have to discuss this more when I get back from the hospital."

The Dragon looked startled. "You're going to the hospital?" he gasped.

"I wasn't going to. But there was a coupon in this week's Mariner for an appendectomy at half price and it expires at the end of the month. You know I couldn't pass up a bargain like that."

Letter

Public records supervisor answers Mrs Gjesteby

Here is a copy of a letter to school committee member Martha Gjesteby.

Dear Ms. Gjesteby:

Pursuant to 950 C.M.R. 32.07 I am responding to your request for an advisory opinion concerning the issues raised in your correspondence to this office.

You have asked whether a school committee may adopt mandatory procecures requiring its members to file prescribed forms in order to request and receive records from the Superintendent of Schools.

You have also indicated that a majority of the committee must agree to permit the records to be disclosed.

Your question consists of two issues.

First, whether one's status as a public official is a determinative factor affecting one's rights of access to public records; and secondly, whether an individual's official status affects one's ability to obtain access to non-public records which are exempt from disclosure under G.L.c.4,s.7(26).

As you may know, public records are broadly defined to include all documentary materials or data made or received by any officer or employee of any agency or department of any political subdivision of the Commonwealth, unless they fall within one of the narrowly construed exemptions found within G.L.c.4,s.7(26).

Records which do not fall within the confines of an exemption are subject to the mandatory disclosure provisions of G.L.c.66,s.10.

An individual's right of access to public records is granted by G.L.c.66,s.10(a). The statute provides that public records may be inspected and a copy furnished to "any person." Id. This access right is not contingent upon a showing of need or one's particular status, official or otherwise.

Accordingly, a person's status as a public official or a public employee is irrelevant in determining whether a person is entitled to have access to public records. Bougas v. Chief of Police of Lexington, 371 Mass. 59 (1976) (one's status as litigant neither adds nor detracts from one's access rights.) Moreover, in Torres v. Attorney General, 391 Mass. 1 (1984). The court noted that "(it) may be that the public records law was intended only to make properly maintained information available to members of the public treated collectively and intended to differentiate among the purpose for which information is requested." Id. at 10.

Accordingly, your status as a member of the school committee neither adds to nor detracts from your ability to obtain access to public records as an ordinary person under G.L.c.66,s.10.

G.L.c.66,s.10 and the implementing Public Records Access Regulations, 950 C.M.R.32.00 et seq., establish procedures for an individual to obtain access to public records. The provision of 950 C.M.R. 32.05, in particular, provides the basic framework under which the record requester and record custodian must operate.

This section provides the record requester with minimum rights of access which a record custodian must observe.

As a result, a record custodian may not establish procedures which infringe upon these rights. Record custodians however, are encouraged to provide expedited procedures for obtaining access to public records.

Therefore, I conclude that in terms of providing access to public records, the school committee may not impose any public records access procedures which are in excess of that permitted by 950 C.M.R. 32.05.

The remaining issue is whether one's official status is a factor in obtaining access to records that are not public records as they fall within the confines of one of the exemptions under G.L.c.4,s.7(26). Exempt records are not subject to the mandatory disclosure provisions of G.L.c.66,s.10.

It should be noted that the public records law only governs public access to public records.

Accordingly, the issue of whether a public official may obtain access to non-public records in the course of his or her official duties, is not a legitimate subject of discussion under the public records law.

In summary, it is my opinion that a public official, as an ordinary citizen, may not be compelled to follow any prescribed procedures which are in excess of that permitted by G.L.c.66, or 950 C.M.R. 32.00 in order to gain access to public records.

Therefore, I recommend that you follow the procedures noted in section 32.05(3) of regulations when requesting records. (A copy of the regulations are enclosed for your convenience).

If your request is denied or you receive no response within 10 days, you may appeal to this office for a determination of the public record status of the specific identifiable records requested.

I hope this opinion has been of assistance to you. If you have any further, questions, please feel free to contact this office.

Very truly yours,
James W. Igoe
Supervisor of Public Records

Recreation Dept urges support for play area

To the Editor:

This year the Recreation Commission will pursue, at Town Meeting, approval for an Article to raise or appropriate from available funds, $5,000 to be used for constructing a multi-purpose, active recreational play area on the site of the now removed Beechwood Fire Station.

An additional sum of about $1,200 will be employed from interest gain, on a principal of money that was set aside by the Beechwood Improvement Association in 1978.

The principal money, $4,000 can never be used, only the accrued interest may be utilized, and only if specific criteria are met, and permission is granted by the Town Treasurer.

Town Treasurer, Gordon Fling, has granted permission for the use of the interest as this project meets the established guidelines set by the donators in 1978.

The basic criteria is: Expenditures must be used for recreational, physical and or emotional advancement of the young people, (14 years of age and under), for only the "Beechwood area" of Cohasset, and the money may not be employed for usual and normal maintenance of town properties.

There presently exists in Beechwood, ballfield and playground area at the corner of Doane and Beechwood Streets.

Letters

The proposed play lot would be located at the same facility, however, it would be, for safety purposes fenced in from Beechwood Street and the ballfield area.

The sum of $5,000 is needed for two items of importance. First, the area must be graded and prepared for surfacing. Both the Town Highway and Tree and Park departments have been instrumental regarding this initial task at no additional costs to the town.

The area, which will be approximately 3,500 square feet, will be surfaced to provide a functional, safe, playing surface.

The second essential project will be fencing of the area. Height of fencing will vary from side to side but must not only keep children away from traffic, but must also keep balls from the adjacent ball field from entering the play area, or traveling over the play area, and hitting either homes, property, or individuals.

It is estimated that the surfacing and fencing will cost $5,000. Hence, the article request from Town Meeting.

Both projects, fencing and surfacing, must be considered essential to the development of the play area, as both should be considered as primary and basic safety features of the project.

The sum of $1,200 accrued interest will be utlized for basketball standards, backboards, hoops, and tennis bangboards-wind screen, painting of game areas on the surface standards for other court games, etc., etc.

By design, the area will include as many types of activity options as possible, all geared for active types of recreation and sports, with safety, of course, as the most basic element of the design.

A facility of this nature is important to the Beechwood area for a number of reasons. First, there are no schools located in the Beechwood area, hence, other then the Beechwood Ballfield-playground, there is a distinct lack of recreations facilities.

Also, Beechwood has a fairly high density, and a large number of children who may, or may not be able to travel to school sites for recreation.

The cost to the town vs. the product gained is very low, the impact of $5,000 on the tax rate would barely be noticable, but most importantly the $5,000 would provide a tangable, functional, and much needed facility capable of year round use by all aged youngsters and probably some adults as well.

One of the main reasons the cost factor remains so low is through interdepartmental cooperation of town departments. Specifically the Highway and Tree and Park departments who will prepare the site for construction.

Another factor is the employment of $1,200 some odd dollars from the Beechwood Improvement Association Fund, which has no reflection on the tax rate.

Further, upkeep and maintenance costs for this type of facility are minimal and, under normal circumstances can be handled through the Recreation Department operating budget.

The Recreation Commission would like your support for this Article and is proceeding with it as a service to the community and residents.

While it is not a project we wish to ram down anyones throat it is the unanimous feeling of the board that the play lot is much needed by the community, and will be well utilized by the residents.

The long term benefits, we feel, greatly out-weigh the low costs of construction.

Should you have any questions or imput regarding this proposed facility, please contact the Recreation office at anytime.

School roofing needs are critical

The following is a letter distributed to the press at Monday's School Committee hearing.

To The Citizens of Cohasset:

On March 10, a roofing failure occurred at the Deer Hill Elementary School causing a section of ceiling in a classroom to collapse. Fortunately, this happened during non-school hours. The classroom is now out of service and a section of corridor has been cordoned off.

This event highlights the fact that makeshift roofing repairs and patches, the bandaid approach if you will, are no longer sufficient to ensure the structural integrity of our buildings; to protect walls, floors, and equipment; and more importantly, to safeguard the well-being of our children.

Despite the yeoman work of our custodial staff and the vigilance and warnings of our administrators, the roofs are failing, the water is leaking, and the ceilings are falling.

Years of deferred maintenance due to budgetary constraints have caught up with us. It is clear that we are now beyond the stage of even catchup maintenance. We must begin immediately to act to correct a dangerous situation

The March 10 failure is not an isolated incident. Last year a portion of the roof over the Deer Hill kitchen had to be replaced after massive cracks appeared which threatened the collapse of that ceiling. When exposed, the insulation was found to be soaked and wood rotted.

Our architects advise that the roof on the original Deer Hill School is now 30 years old and some ten years past its normal useful life. The Cohasset High School was built in 1950 and that roof is now 34 years old - 14 years past its normal life. The high school addition is now 26 years old; this, too, is well past its years of expected service.

Further delay is no longer possible and in the face of escalating replacement costs, financially imprudent. We must act now before further deterioration and other failures jeopardize our children.

Please attend the April 7 Town Meeting and give your support to Warrant Article No. XI providing for the roofing replacement and repairs to the Deer Hill Elementary School and the Cohasset High School.

Thank You.

Week Four for the Mystery House

Those open spaces mentioned in last week's clue are now part of a crowded Cohasset Center. The correct answer for last week's Mystery House was the Colonel Newcomb Bates House, 45 South Main St, known today as the "Cards and Shards" shop which occupies the lower floor.

This house is also frequently known as the "Dr. Bridgham House" for Dr. Charles Burr Bridgham lived there for many years after the Civil War.

Extensively and frequently altered over the last several decades, historians find it difficult to pick out the "one-half Colonial" design behind the numerous additions.

Three people picked this house correctly. They are Warren Pratt of 56 Red Gate Lane, Jean Rosano, 223 Chief Justice Cushing Way and Carolyn Vaughan of 3 North Main St.

Nine other people submitted entries. The most common guesses were 285 South Main St. and 31 Elm St.

With this week's answers, Jean Rosano and Warren Pratt each have two correct answers as does Bob Leonard Sr. and the Galt Grant family.

These people are vying for the retail prizes which will be a $100 gift certificate at the Linen Chest, $50 gift certificate at Hugo's and a $25 gift certificate at Fleming Hardware.

This is Week 4 of the ten-week Mystery House Tour. If need be, two houses will be provided for playoffs.

Once you find the home, write down the address of the homes, exact number and street along with your name, address and phone number and send it to the "Mystery House Tour", care of the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025 or drop of the answers in an envelope at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or at Hennessey's News, both in Cohasset Village.

The deadline for weekly entries will be 9:30 a.m. sharp Tuesday.

The following week we will disclose the correct address with a picture of how the home looks today with a little history brief about each house.

Remember, only one guess per week.

This week's clue is this house was the home of one of the residents of Cohasset's fashionable "Actors Row."

Water rate hike opposed

(The following is a copy of a letter to the State Dept. of Public Utilities Chairman. Ed.)

Dear Chairman Levy,

Once again, I am writing to strongly object to the granting of incresed rates to the Hingham Water Department.

My constituents in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull object to this increase as well.

Hingham Water Company rates presently are higher than most water rates and it would be a hardwhip, (in many cases, severe hardship) to allow an increase at this time.

I urge your Department to deny this increase request.

Sincerely,
Mary Jeanette Murray
State Representative

PSO supports full funding

To The Editor:

The Executive Board of the Cohasset Parent School Organization voted unanimously to support the full funding of the School Committee's budget request for 1984-85.

Since January, members of the PSO Board have attended all School Committee meetings when principals and department chairmen presented their programs and budgets.

We believe the School Committee's budget represents fundamental educational needs as well as conscientious fiscal responsibility.

The Advisory Committee's preliminary guidelines called for expenditures of $126,000 less than the School Committee's request.

The Advisory Committee's final recommendation may not be known until Town Meeting. The ultimate decision to spend town monies to support the schools at the level requested by the School Committee rests with the voters.

The PSO Executive Board asks Cohasset citizens for their support and affirmative vote on the School Budget, Article 4, at the Town Meeting April 7th.

Thank you,
Sue McNamara
PSO President 1983-84

Medic alert could save your life

(The following report was supplied by Cohasset EMT Coordinator Capt. James Lee Curry. Local Firefighters No. 2804 will be distributing display canisters around town this week.- Ed.)

For almost 27 years this emergency medical identification service has been speaking for people with hidden medical conditions when they can't speak for themselves.

But people with conditions such as diabetes, heart problems, epilepsy, or allergies weren't always so lucky. Before Medic Alert began in 1956, there was no one to speak for them.

Back in the summer of 1953, a high school sophomore, in Turlock, California, named Linda Collins cut herself slightly while playing with an air rifle. Her father, a physician, and mother were away from home attending a medical meeting so a neighbor took Linda to a doctor who treated the wound.

The doctor gave Linda a sensitivity test to tetanus antitoxin in case she was allergic to the injection. Unfortunately, Linda was highly allergic to the drug --the scratch test almost killed her. Linda was in a coma for three days.

Her father, Dr. Marion C. Collins, was determined to prevent this from ever happening again. He designed a slender silver bracelet for his daughter bearing the insignia of the medical profession on the front in red along with the words "Medic Alert". On the back was engraved this warning: "Allergic to Horse Serum," the liquid vehicle used at that time for tetanus antitoxin.

Convinced that bracelets like Linda's, or necklace emblems, with vital messages could save coutless lives, Dr. Collins investigated the feasibility of establishing a nonprofit, charitable organization to provide a lifeline to those who might be unable to ask for help in critical situations. He surmised that not only persons suffering from drug allergies, but diabetics, epileptics, hemophiliacs, and myriad others with hidden medical problems could find themselves in situations where improper diagnosis and treatment might cost them their lives.

After years of planning and consulting with fellow physicians, nurses, law enforcement agencies, and national leaders, he established the Medic Alert Foundation International in April, 1956. Unlike many nonprofit, charitable organizations though, Medic Alert has not received any federal or state funds. It is maintained by enrollment of new members and by grants and contributions from individuals, corporations and other foundations.

Since its birth in 1956, Medic Alert has experienced phenomenal growth - over 1.6 million members in the 15 affiliated foundations internationally. More than 7,000 new members join Medic Alert in the U.S. each month. It is no wonder: The Medic Alert Foundation estimates that one out of five Americans has a hidden medical condition.

Medic Alert Foundation International is a total 24-hour emergency medical identification system. The emblem is backed up with an annually issued wallet card that carries additional medical and personal information.

Both emblem and card carry the emergency telephone number of Medic Alert's central file which contains all the information the member and physician believe necessary in an emergency. This information is available within seconds to emergency personnel via a collect telephone call. To keep information current, each member receives a print-out of his total file each year and is asked to make any necessary changes.

The lifetime membership fee is $15. When, and if, additional information is needed to update a member's file, there is a $4 charge. In cases of financial need, no charge is made.

Ironically, the tetanus sensitivity test that almost killed Linda Collins in 1953 has led to the best emergency medical identification in the world, one that can protect many millions internationally, 24-hours a day.

The week is being sponsored by Medic Alert Foundation International, Turlock, California, a nonprofit, charitable organization.

The history of the conflict dates back to 1949 when apparently Cohasset seized the property under eminent domain.

A 1980 town meeting vote modified the land taking although it is not clear to Town Counsel Richard Henderson, or others what was changed and how.

The board finally agreed to take the matter under advisement.

The board also voted to "instruct the Chief of Police to answer calls" from Riverview Drive residents.

"It is town property, the police should go there, said Selectman Rocco Laugelle. "The residents have all the right in the world to peace and quiet."

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, the board met with Domenic Baccari representing the Cohasset Sailing Club.

The Sailing Club is applying to the Army Corps of Engineers for a permit to allow additional floats for club members' boats in Cohasset Harbor.

Such a permit, once granted, "is grandfathered" allowing the Sailing Club to put additional floats in the water without being subject to the approval of the Harbormaster.

As part of the requirements for such a permit, the Sailing Club met with Selectmen to get "a sense of the town fathers" for the Army Corps of Engineers.

The board raised no objection to the Sailing Club filing for the application for the permit and agreed to "grant as much as we're allowed."

However, Cohasset resident Bill Figuirado said: "It's discrimination! I've had floats in the water for years, approval from the DEQE and the Conservation Commission, but the Harbormaster made me take them out. He said they would be in navigable waters."

How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two- and three-bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free St., one mile to our entrance. Call 740-1500.

Saturday's Donkeyball had quite a few laughs

By Sallyanne Chatterton

All 600 spectators were more than ready for the Donkey Basketball game to begin, while upstairs the riders were signing releases just in case an accident should befall the player.

After signing the releases and getting rules down pat (Mary Jeannette Murray tried to change a few, but to no avail), the game was ready to begin.

Brian Schultz and Lincoln Marsac had the unfortunate cleanup jobs at the Donkeyball basketball game.

The first game was the boys' varsity against the girls' varsity. Picture if you will James Creed of Phil Bernstein (heights are well over six feet) trying to mount a donkey who is 4 feet tall at most.

Try David MacDonald, telling his mount that there was no way he could ride.

Kerry O'Brien kept falling right over her donkey's head, as he bucked and kicked his way down the gym floor.

Carla Lucas got a donkey that wouldn't move, but she soon had that under control...well, after two eight-minute periods the girls won it by 8-6. Jill Nedrow was the high-scorer for that event.

The second game was one that the cable television boys could sell for big bucks! It was the School System Skippers against the Cohasset Town All-Stars. The outfits on some were dazzling.

Cliff Mitman had on his plaid knickers, Rocky Laugelle his orange shirt and huge cowboy hat, and Janet Figueirdo was resplendent with her garter with a ten dollar bill in it.

The Skippers came to win, all in their sweats, and win they did, 10-6.

One was tempted to make a few phone calls Sunday morning to inquire as to the health status of several players.

Cliff Mitman, horseman that he is, did not know that polyester on a donkey's back just doesn't work (he could not stay on).

Frank England took a real header, but he was spotted Around Town Sunday so all is well.

Janet Figueirdo wore one elbow pad, and landed on the other elbow, hope she's okay today.

Mary Jeannette Murray spent a lot of time doing what she does best--she kept talking to the mule, telling it to move (probably got it confused with one of the constituents that she talks to).

There was one warning, when Rocco Laugelle and Clark Chatterton began fist-a-cuffs, but that was brought under control.

John Anderson was the star of the evening, he certainly knew how to control the donkey under that hoop! With some great passes, he was high scorer and responsible for making the School System Skippers Champs of the year.

The third and final game was the girls' varsity against the Skippers, which the Skippers won, 10-4. It wasn't that the Skippers had a better shot, it was just that they knew how to handle the donkeys (think about that one!).

Hats off to the fellas and gals that were brave enough to play the game, they did an excellent job. Wonder if it will be held next year. Certainly will be interesting to see how many don the crash helmets again!

Chamber of Commerce has a logo

The general membership of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce selected the design for the Chamber's Logo Contest at the monthly meeting Wednesday March 14 at Cohasset-by-the-Sea.

Phillip Rose of Highland Court, Cohasset submitted a design depicting Minot's Lighthouse, a seagull, and a lobster boat silhouetted against the outline of the town's geographic border. Rose's artistic talents were apparent in the design.

A professional artist in his late 20's, he is employed by Goodwin Graphics of Cohasset.

Rose won a $100 certificate to be spent of merchandise at the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce business establishments.

The chamber thanked Mr. Rose as well as the over 50 other artists who submitted designs to this contest.

For more information on the Logo Contest, please call John Hagerty directly

Conservatory ready for telethon

The Board of Trustees of the South Shore Conservatory will conduct its annual fund raising Telethon during the weeks of March 26 and April 2. Frances Westerbeke of Milton, chairperson of the Annual Giving Drive, reports this year's campaign has been very successful and the Board hopes to reach its goal of $40,000 with the support of the South Shore community.

These funds help to provide the quality of instruction known. Three branches of the school in Hingham, Duxbury and Brockton, serve a large area of the South Shore.

Annual donations also provide scholarship aid to students who could not otherwise afford the type of education available at the Conservatory.

Established as a non profit community school of the arts 14 years ago, the SSCM offers instruction in music, dance and drama to all ages and levels of ability. It operates a regular preschool and a summer music day camp for high school students.

Explorers design their own programs

This is the second in a three-part series. --Ed.

By Judy Gilman

"These kids don't understand 'can't'," John Cahill of Hingham said recently. "It's amazing to learn, with all the headlines you read about how terrible teenagers are, of the good things, the challenging things teenagers are capable of doing."

What Cahill was describing is the Explorer program of the Boy Scouts of America, a co-educational program for teenagers 14 through 19.

'Co-educational program,' though, hardly begins to explain or enlarge upon the Explorers. For the concept behind this innovative approach to keep teenagers interested in scouting during years when there are so many other activities and distractions competing for their attention is to let the teens do what they want to do, rather than follow a program set out in a manual.

That's why the Hingham Post 4 is a high adventure post, experiencing winter camping and canoeing in the Maine woods. Cohasset Post 28 specializes in search and rescue techniques. The Hanover post is an equestrian post, based at Briggs' Stables. In each case, what the group does is decided by that group, depending on its interests.

Talking with Cahill and Art Leary of Cohasset is to approach scouting from opposite viewpoints. Leary has been in scouting since 1932, when he was a scout in Cohasset. "I just never quit," is the way he puts it. He's served the Old Colony Council for 25 years as a scoutmaster and the last 14 as Cohasset's Explorer post advisc:.

He's seen the changes in the Boy Scout programs through the years and maintains his enthusiasm. Enthusiasm is putting it mildly, as he dedicates between 15 and 20 hours a week to scout work, between the post and district and council meetings.

Cahill, on the other hand, is a self-confessed "late bloomer." "I'd never been in scouts and got involved in it through my five kids. I'd never heard of the Explorer program until my daughter Mary (now a freshman at Georgetown University) started talking about it. And I thought, 'Co-ed camping? What is this?' But what it is is a great opportunity for kids to grow and learn."

Cahill figures the 15 hours a week he puts in, mostly in administrative functions at the post, district and council level, are well worth the effort. "You get such positive reinforcement from the kids. You take a 14-year-old coming in who's really never done anything. Three years later that same kid is taking a leadership role in the post. That's what makes it all worthwhile."

Leary is very proud of the Explorer post he advises, one of the most venerable around. The post's focus on search and rescue was touched off by a study the group conducted of the ambulance and emergency care facilities available in Cohasset 14 years ago. "We told the selectmen we could do better," Leary recalls. "Some of those post members were among the first EMTs (emergency medical technicians) in Massachusetts."

These days, the Cohasset Explorers are not called out to accident scenes. But they do lend an important hand in search operations for young and old.

And that feeling of doing something worthwhile for the community is one of the reasons Cahill and Leary feel the program is growing. Another may well be that "you don't have to walk around town in silly uniforms." Unlike other sections of the Boy Scouts, there is no emphasis on uniforms, badges or insignia. It's all in the doing.

March is traditionally the birthday month for Boy Scouts and also the time of the annual sustaining membership drive by the Old Mills District. Individual troops and posts have their own fundraisers, but higher-level activities must be funded, as well. The Boy Scouts, as a United Way agency, receive about 25 percent of their budget from that charity. But the Old Mills District is looking to raise $18,000 from the 10 towns it serves for the coming year.

Sustaining memberships are aimed at businessmen and professionals who want to support all the facets of Boy Scouting in their communities. Robert Magner of Cohasset Savings Bank is the district campaign chairman. Town chairmen include Russell Sears in Hingham, Glenn Pratt in Cohasset, and Bob Tilden and Bob Montague in Scituate. At this writing, the district is at 20 percent of its $18,000 goal.

And the district is looking not just for money. Land contributions, insurance policies on camp sites, equipment and memorials, all are welcome gifts.

Old Mills Executive Director William Roberts quotes some eye-opening figures that demonstrate the impact scouting has on the South Shore. One of every two boys of Cub Scout age is involved in Cubs. One of every four boys of Boy Scout age is in that program. And six percent of the teenage population is served, a number that is growing. Proof of that growth is the number of new posts being formed, "and there are always more towns to be served," Roberts said.

The cold economic facts are these, the three agreed. Supporting the various aspects of the scouting program gives youth a chance to be involved in something worthwhile. "Let's face it. It keeps kids off the streets and keeps police costs down. It's a very worthwhile investment," Roberts said.

For more information on the Explorer program or the sustaining membership drive, call the district office at 828-8360.

CHS GRAD. VISITS

Scott Miur of 29 Highland Ave. in Cohasset returned to Cohasset High School this past week to tell students of his experiences at Waseda University in Tokyo, Japan. The graduate of Cohasset High School, who attended Ohio Wesleyan University, talked to the students in Edward MacDermott's Modern World History classes.

A history major, who speaks the Japanese language, Scott told the Cohasset juniors about Japanese society in the 1980's. He said that he hopes to return to Waseda University in the near future to continue his graduate studies in history there.

"I knew that American students know very little about Japanese culture and I wanted to share my experiences in Japan with them," he said.

"I know they were interested because I was asked to return to school for a second discussion session."

Scott's sister Sarah is a member of MacDermott's Modern World History class.

SPECIAL EDUCATION WORKSHOP

The Individual Educational Plan (IEP): Development, Process and Implementation will be Monday, April 2, 7:30-9:30, at Hingham Town Hall. All parents of children receiving special education services under Chap. 766 are encouraged to attend. Call: Taffy Nothnagle, 383-0895 for more details.

Improvisational Theatre

When Ron Emmons presented a performance of his State Drama Festival entry "Chinamen" last week at CHS, he shared the billing with two theatre pieces by junior high students.

English teacher Mrs. Wood, with assistance from junior Sarah Muir, prepared 16 eighth graders in the restaging of a one-act play, "The In Group." Two other students, Michael Casselero and Sarah Hamilton, performed one of the 'small object problem' improvisations from the drama workshops.

Before "Chinamen" was performed, Emmons showed the audience the behind stage work that goes on by many unseen students.

Dance is a new way of moving at Osgood School

"I wish Glenda could stay at Osgood and be a teacher."

Osgood student

"I'm movement."

Glenda Medeiros

"When I dance like a goat I float. When I dance like a deer I feel sincere. When I dance like a duck I cluck."

Penelope Dane

A small boy enters the Osgood gym/dance studio and asks, "When do we start dancing?"

His query is typical of the quick acceptance by the students of Glenda Medeiros, dancer and choreographer in-residence at the Joseph Osgood School.

Medeiros smiles. The students are thinking about dance. They want to be with her and move in her classes.

She discusses the athletic and artistic needs of a dancer. A dancer needs first his or her body, then space, and music.

The class begins with warm-ups, deep breathing (with encouragement to make a noisy exhale) and relaxing. Warm-ups are done to lively music, but Medeiros introduces waltzes, jazz, percussion, and folk as well to break the stereotypes of music.

During the two workshops each class has with her, and during "studio time," Meideiros shows the kids how she warms-up, relaxes, works out, moves and creates new choreography (all the same things the students are taught to do).

The children are asked to listen to some music and let their bodies tell them how to move to it. Medeiros tells them, "Move however you feel your body wants to move to (the music). Be honest with yourself."

They catch on. Medeiros explains, "All the kids in the school understand dance is a new way of moving. They've learned that lots of other movements that they already have are part of dance. The focus is more on themselves and they're much freer."

Medeiros may ask two or three students to demonstrate their interpretation of the music. "When I pick someone to demonstrate it is to show how unique each one can be through movement. I explain to them they're all terriffic dancers." She tells them how she learns from them and they can learn from watching each other. "When I dance for you later in the program, be watching because I will use some of the steps you've created."

"I value their individual movements," Medeiros says. Once the children understand that, and they readily do, a confidence level is built. The children are not afraid to move and they are ready to create and contribute.

"The kids are receptive. They're really soaking it up," says Helen Pratt, physical education teacher at Osgood, who is coordinating the program. She says that the students feel as though Medeiros knows them individually. "She reaches each individual child in a group situation."

"Every kid in the school feels involved because they can all contribute," Medeiros says. "I let the children know that all moves are valuable. That is part of feeling individually important."

The children are learning to see that all movements are 'dance,' such as a walk backwards, a wiggle, twirling, running, leaping, jumping, sliding, or crouching down and sneaking.

One of the small group projects Medeiros is working on this week and next involves seven children who will show that "lines can dance." The same theme has carried over into the art room which adjoins the gym. Syma, the substitute art teacher, has her students interpreting the concept that artists use lines that dance. The students sometimes get up and "move" their lines and then go back to draw them.

A third grade class, the kindergarten classes, and many others from all the classes will be involved in several dance demonstrations which will occur during the week of April 9.

A Dance Demonstration for parents will be presented Friday, April 13 from 10:30-11 a.m. in the school's "dance studio."

Brian Duffy has a lot to smile about in Glenda Medeiros's Osgood School dance class.

Candidates' corner . . .

Deborah Cook

Deborah Cook has announced her candidacy for a five-year term on the Planning Board.

A former urban planner for the City of Houston, Cook is currently a June, 1984 MBA candidate at Northeastern University.

With this background, she believes she can offer Cohasset both a planning and management perspective on planning issues.

After moving to Cohasset eight years ago, Cook covered Cohasset Planning Board meetings for two years for the former Mirror Newspapers. She said, "This experience was invaluable in learning how the Planning Board functions."

Cook is concerned about protecting Cohasset's unique character while providing for controlled growth. "I believe that with careful planning and adherence to the Zoning By-Law, Cohasset can be as special a place for our children as it is for us today."

As a consultant, Cook also worked as an urban renewal planner and grantwriter for Hull's Redevelopment Agency. She obtained grants from four federal and state agencies to determine the feasibility of building a 500-slip marina.

A 1971 graduate of the University of Vermont, Cook has been a board member and land use chairman for the League of Women Voters. She was also appointed by the selectmen to the Tri-Town Committee on Solid Waste in 1983.

Cook lives at 281 King St. with her husband and two children.

George Marlette

George Lane Marlette III, candidate for the Cohasset School Committee announced that Dr. William Raskin, Cohasset resident and plysician/owner of the Raskin Walk-In Medical Treatment facility, Cushing Plaza Rte 3A in Cohasset, has accepted the chairmanship of the Marlette Campaign Committee.

In announcing the appointment of Dr. Raskin, a graduate of Colgate University and Tulane University School of Medicine Marlette said, "My campaign is based upon a committment to professional excellence. I can think of no one in the Cohasset community who better exemplifies professionalism and a dedication to hard work than Dr. Bill Raskin." Dr. Raskin is married to the former Joanne O'Brien of Cohasset.

In other campaign news, Marlette distributed copies of his four point plan for the schools at a Meet the Candidate Reception held Saturday.

Highlights of the four point recommendation included a recommendation that the town purchase a computer main frame.

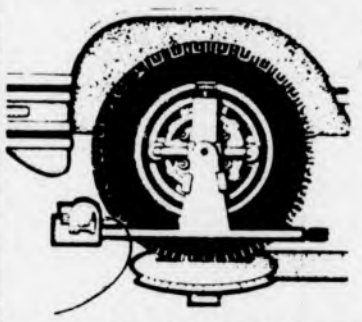
Marlette said, "The speed, versatility and expansion capabilities would provide for time sharing, and would address the needs of the entire community, including the schools, in a way micro computers could not."

He added his background as a non-career computer programmer would enable him to work with the schools and other interested departments on the customization of a data base to serve computer needs across the board.

Marlette once again criticized the crisis management approach of incumbent Richard Conley, and cited the recent collapse of the roof at Deer Hill School as an example.

Marlette said "I feel certain that parents and non-parents alike, had they been informed of the potential safety hazard posed by aging and dilapidated roofs, would have responded to a plea for funds to provide preventative, rather than costly "clean up" maintenance.

"The solid property values of Cohasset Real Estate are due at least in part to the widespread perception that ours is a top flight school system -- well managed, efficient and above all effective.



Front page stories in a major South Shore daily newspaper and the accompanying photos of custodian with bailing bucket are an insult to Cohasset taxpayers and students.

If elected, I would work with the school superintendent and those School Committee members who, like my advocate carefully researched, non-reactive planned action for the Cohasset Public Schools."

Other highlights of the Marlette four point plan include a recommendation for curriculum overhaul, creative corporate contact, particularly in the area of loaned executive time and talent, and a general plea for more dialogue between the School Committee and all Cohasset residents -- including the elderly, and younger residents and non-parents.

Judy Volungis

At several coffee hours over the past week, Judy Volungis spoke with parents of both elementary and high school students.

In response to a question from the parent of a Deer Hill student, Volungis said she felt various textbooks utilized at this level of instruction were outdated, and in some cases, nonexistent.

"Students in grades 4 to 6 are given SAT tests in both social studies and science areas," Mrs. Volungis said, "and yet the Deer Hill School does not utilitize a major textbook for science. Students' science and social studies scores on the SAT tests are significantly lower than math and reading scores, in which the Deer Hill School does an excellent job.

A working mother, with two children in high school, complained that she was told to take time off from her job in order to attend an afternoon conference.

The mother said: "Ironically, I teach in another school system...a system in which evening conferences are scheduled specifically for working parents."

Mrs. Volungis said: "In this era of two working parents, and single working parents, it is critical that the school system be encouraged to provide evening conference hours, in order to keep the avenues of communication open."

She also noted throughout her own professional teaching career, she has made evening conference hours available for the working parent.

"In many respects I feel Cohasset Public Schools have been doing an excellent job with their various programs. I do, however, have some concerns about the lack of direction the School Committee and the administration have provided with respect to curriculum and the arts.

"I feel the arts should be an integral part of the basic educational program. I also feel a curriculum review is long overdue. New and old programs should be evaluated and updated, or dropped. I would like to approach a curriculum update via a parent-teacher advisory committee vehicle, and concentrate on one program each year. This should be a continuing effort."

Mrs. Volungis also stated that textbook updating is "desperately" needed. "The lack of library books has been sorely noticed by teachers, parents, students and the administration alike."

COFFEES

Judy Volungis will be discussing her viewpoints and answering questions at several coffees this week. If interested in attending please call 383-0939 or the hostess.

Wednesday, March 28: Mrs. Karin Bartow, 48 Sohier Street, 9:30 a.m., 383-0572.

Thursday, March 29: Mrs. Edward Dillon, 217 Jerusalem Rd., 9:30 a.m., 383-0025.

Thursday, April 12: Mrs. Robert Bowman, 18 Little Harbor Rd., 10 a.m., 383-1521.

Jeff Bettinger

Jeff Bettinger, candidate for the Board of Water Commissioners, spoke at a coffee held Sunday, March 25, at the home of Bill and Sherry Becker on North Main Street.

Jeff stressed the need for new energy on the Water Commission. "Everyone wants to protect our water supply, improve the distribution system, and reduce the Water Department's deficits. To accomplish these goals will take hard work and a true commitment to these issues."

While discussing his experiences as chairman of the Hazardous Material Advisory Committee, Jeff discussed neighboring communities who have developed and implemented water protection bylaws.

He added more than 30 Massachusetts communities have water protection bylaws, and feel it's time for Cohasset to take control of its future by insuring the quality of our water supply.

Doris Golden

A large and enthusiastic gathering assembled at the reception held at Hugo's Lighthouse for Doris Golden, a selectman, Sunday March 25.

Speechs were presented by the candidate and Dr. John Maloney, Sharon School Supt.

Mrs. Golden stressed her basic premise of the campaign that she can provide sensible harmonious leadership to a dissension ridden board.

Dr. Maloney's speech reinforced this concept by repeating the fine work she had done while serving as Cohasset School Committee Chairman.

Mrs. Golden also discussed the many problems both present and future that the Board of Selectmen will confront in the next term of office.

She discussed these issues in a positive fashion saying decent workable solutions will be attained through the cooperation of all the interested parties, particulary selectmen, members of other boards and most important of all, the voters.

Democrats to reorganize

On the heels of the election of new members at the March 13th Presidential Primary, the Cohasset Committee wil hold its organizational meeting on Friday, April 13, at 8 p.m. at the Cushing Room, Cushing Plaza.

Donna J. McGee, Chairman has called the meeting to elect new officers for the Committte and to elect representatives to the April 15th Senate District Caucus.

The number of representatives from Cohasset will be four, equally divided between men and women. This is the same number as those elected on February, 11 to attend the 1984 Massachusetts Democratic State Convention June 9, 1984.

The representatives elected at the April 13th organizational meeting, along with the delegates elected on February 11th, will atend and pariticipate in the election of one Democratic State Committee man and one state Committee woman from this Senate district at a Senate District Caucus on April 15th.

This election is in compliance with an amendment to the Charter of the Democratic Party of the Commonwealth approved at the 1983 Massachusetts Democratic State Convention. The amendment provided for the expansion of the State's committee membership.

The meeting is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible (children or non-citizen), and media representatives.

There will be no admission or expense charge at the meeting, though donations may be solicited.

Candidates for representative must be present and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present.

Each candidate will be allowed a two-minute speech and one sheet of paper listing ideas and qualifications.

Discrimination on any basis is strictly prohibited.

Eligible participants must be registered Democrats in their ward or town by December 29, 1983.

Candidate's Night

The annual Candidate's Night, sponsored by the League of Women Voters, will be held Tuesday, April 3, 7:30 p.m., at the Town Hall.

Each of the 31 candidates for local office will be invited to speak for three minutes. Questions from the floor will be accepted after all the candidates have spoken.

The League presents this evening with the candidates each year as a voter information service. The candidates are able to inform the voters about their concerns and positions on issues.

The League is also compiling written responses from the candidates to questions posed by the League. These will be published in an upcoming issue of the Mariner.

Refreshments will be served at the Candidates' Night.

Tax rate approved

The state has approved the town's new tax rate of $18.60 per $1,000 valuation. Tax bills should be arriving soon. The town had to borrow $2 million last month to meet expenses while awaiting the final certification of the new tax rate.

When asking a knowledgeable travel agent to recommend a ship or ships that offer excellent comfort, style and service, invariably the names Vistafjord and Sagafjord are mentioned. These two top-rated ships offer plenty of leisurely time at sea and lots of pampering. Each is capable of carrying twice the number of passengers that it actually does, which allows each passenger the largest space ratio per passenger in the industry. There are two knowledgeable European crew members for every three passengers. Service is superior. The itineraries are also excellent. If you are at a point in your life when you want something special, we have just the ship for you.

See You At Game Point!

from the kitchen

by Joan Pinkham

Breathlessly, we all waited through dinner that April Fool's night when someone who shall remain nameless had substituted salt for sugar and all eyes were on Dad as he reached for the bowl to sweeten his evening cup of tea. When growing up, every chance meeting and every hour of April Fool's Day seemed perilous as practical jokes were occasions for hilarity and mortification when on the receiving end. Obviously, Peggy Beals remembers, for she thought a perfect April Fool's recipe would be this one for

ELEPHANT STEW

1 medium size elephant
1 ton salt and pepper
500 bushels potatoes
200 bushels carrots
4000 sprigs parsley
5 small rabbits (optional)

Cut elephant into bite size pieces--a job that will take about two months. Cut vegetables into cubes--another two months. Place meat in pan and cover with 1000 gallons of brown gravy. Simmer four weeks. Shovel in salt and pepper to taste. When meat is tender, add vegetables--steam shovel would be useful. Simmer four weeks more. Garnish with parsley. Serves three thousand. If more are expected, add rabbits, but this is not recommended as very few people like hare in their stew.

Now we'll fool Ellen Kempton by finally printing her mother's recipe she had thoughtfully planned to share with us for St. Patrick's Day. The U.S. mails had other ideas, but there's no reason to wait until next March, when the very idea of a slice of this bread makes our mouths water now. Helen Malaguti, or "Nanny" as she's known to all, has been making this family favorite for years and sometimes makes up to 25 loaves for her family of six children and 11 grandchildren.

NANNY'S IRISH BREAD

4 c. all-purpose flour
1 c. sugar
4 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
2 T butter, softened
2 c. milk
2 unbeaten eggs
½ pkg. raisins
4 T caraway seeds

Mix dry ingredients. Add butter, milk and eggs. Beat together and add raisins and caraway. Pour in two greased loaf pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 55-60 min. If desired, after bread is removed from the oven, brush melted butter over top. Makes two loaves.

Tying knots in a brother's p.j.'s was good for at least a solid half hour's laughter on April Fool's Day in our Wellesley home. It takes a lot more than that to generate a smile sometimes in this age of instant gratification as I realized when I read about a New York travel agency's popular vacations in the sun. It seems bleary-eyed travelers line up near dawn for a two and a half hour flight to Nassau's pearly white beaches. They are dropped at the airport and driven by bus for four hours of sunning on the warm sands. Rushed back to the airport after toasting themselves, they return home late that same evening. Perhaps a late evening snack is a pleasant way to top off a fun day, or lazy Sunday, so here is Diane Outland's

MUSHROOM-TOPPED MUFFIN STACK

8 slices Canadian bacon
4 T butter or margarine
1/2 c. chopped onion
6 c. (16 oz.) fresh mushrooms, sliced
1½ c. dairy sour cream
1/3 c. milk
1 tsp. paprika
1 tsp. lemon juice
4 English muffins, split, toasted and buttered

In skillet, brown bacon in butter or margarine; remove and keep warm. Cook onion in skillet drippings until tender but not brown. Add mushrooms. Cook, covered, over low heat, stirring occasionally until mushrooms are tender, approx. 5 min. Stir in sour cream, paprika, juice and season to taste and heat. Place one slice bacon on top of each muffin half. Spoon mushrooms over.

Generic black and white packaging is starting to look chic

Used to be I was a snob about it. Now I'm becoming an advocate if not a devotee of a new name brand, called "Generic."

And while I now rely more on the black and white products, I found and find, actually, generic packaging is unscintillating. Black and white in an outfit is great. On the grocery store shelves it's boring. That goes for the dog food, the paper towels, the cigarettes.

Used to be I'd bypass that section because grocery shopping is tedious enough without making the aisles look like an old movie.

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

I love innovative hot shot packaging, I want to see the fat round tomatoes on the can and the smiling child with freckles on the cereal. I think Knorr soup should get an award for the lifelike vegetables they have on their soups. And Frank Purdue has single-handedly justified my persuasion to chicken with his advertising.

Notice there are no generic ads in the newspaper or on TV. Their s is a take it or leave it promotion. And for a long time I left it.

The cat food in some cases was no less expensive than the kind I was buying with the picture of the cute kitten on it. The paper towels were practical but now and then I want to look at my paper towel holder and see a blue swirl of some sort. Doesn't seem like too much to ask but technically it's about 17 cents more for the swirl.

And spaghetti sauce has become a personal matter. What good can Generic be once you've had your brain soaked with the commercial about people who stand over the pot of sauce and taste and "Ummmmm."

But one day when I was interviewing a nutrition expert, I watched her parade up and down the generic front and make a choice. She says the stuff is just as good. That was a connoisseur that precipitated my personal investigation.

Now I know beauty is only skin deep. Further, some of the finer homes in town, in addition to saving used panty hose and bread crumbs, routinely stock generic goods. Some even do so without hiding the truth from friends by ripping off the colorless packaging.

Take your aspirin. The kind that is featured by a woman with a pained expression on her face in a 'before' television ad, then with a relaxed shot of her golf game after her name brand, costs a heck of a lot more than the black and white. That goes for the aspirin-free variety as well as the kind that routinely upsets your stomach.

But for me vitamins was the kicker. A couple of years ago I went to the drug store and asked the pharmacist for a vitamin that would insure I'd be skipping the next time she saw me. She gave me the type, Centrum, which comes in an earnest fat bottle with huge multiples in it and of course a pretty wrapping on the bottle. And it costs significant money to skip with that brand.

When I last ran out I found that same size bottle, with the same looking pills and the generic-nothing wrapping. It costs at least $5 less than the vivid vitamins. And I can still skip, cheaper.

That's only the beginning of my awakening. They're coming out with generic twinkies, generic crabmeat, generic bedspreads. There's no end.

What I really want is a generic car, a generic glass coffee table, a generic spring suit, things like that.

Meanwhile, I'd like a description of the cow before I buy generic beef, same with the pig from which my bacon will come in plain packaging.

I don't feel there's a threat to society in creating a generic person. We're all too colorful and individual for that. Just try those vitamins and watch your bloom put spring in your step.

I couldn't stand generic friends or people or fellow workers. But the generic buys are starting to look more chic all the time.

Musings

By John H. Cutler

☐ Winston Churchill summed up the position of politicians when he said: "The most essential qualification for a politician is the ability to foretell what will happen tomorrow, next month and next year -- and to explain afterward why it did not happen."

☐ True it is, that love makes time pass, and time makes love pass.

☐ He had a pat answer when I asked why he never became a father: "Because I am fond of children."

☐ From the Portland Oregonian: Tomorrow we may expect strong northwest winds reaching a gal in exposed places.

☐ In grandmother's day a woman who saved her wedding dress for her daughter now has a daughter who saves her own wedding dress for her next wedding.

☐ John Glenn and Fritz Mondale remind me of an old saying: A political candidate can either stand on his own record or jump on his opponent's record.

☐ In connection with the controversy raging over prayer in schools, I might note that a nation without God is a nation without hope.

☐ Have you heard of the hostess who never invited an equal number of men and women to her dinner parties? Her reason was that she invited them for conversation, not mating.

▫I can't help noticing that many of today's economic problems are yesterday's solutions.

Advisory Board agrees with School Dept. spending

Four days before Town Meeting, the advisory board unanimously approved the School Committee's request for an additional $126,000 for the School Dept. budget.

This brings the total school budget to $4,065,335.

The advisory board met Tuesday to determine how the board is going to vote on some 44 articles and to determine which members were going to address which articles.

Selectman Frank England and former School Committee member said he felt current administrative salaries were already in line with area schools.

The Osgood School principal earns $37,000, supervising 292 children and the Deer Hill School principal earns $38,160, supervising 248 children.

These figures are comparable to the earnings of a principal in Marshfield. This principal earns $39,000, supervising 400 children and a Duxbury principal earns $34,000, supervising 520 children.

England said in 1980 there was the same current concern that "the school system was getting very small and we were paying administrators too much."

England said it was suggesetd in 1980 to combine the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools but the school committee then wanted "to keep the Osgood School because of its warm atmosphere for children starting out," England said.

In order to maintain both schools the committee considered placing an assistant principal at Osgood who had part-time teaching duties which would relieve one principal position.

Advisory Board member Paul Neelon said the advisory board must recognize the greatest budget cuts took place around Prop. 2½ and now "we are at the bottom of the barrel" and there is nothing left to cut without harming quality education."

"If we want the breadth of programs and we want to keep three buildings going, we will continue to see costs per pupil increase until the number of pupils increases," Neelon said.

The advisory board will meet tonight to determine how the town meeting articles will be funded.

Now the school question is apparently solved, Saturday's Town Meeting at 1 p.m. will be sparked by a rising tide of opposition to the proposed rebuilding of the Government Island town wharf.

Recreation officials fear the expanded pier will exclude pleasure boaters and fishermen say it will overcrowd the harbor.

Fishermen are also concerned they will be charged an annual fee from $200 to $400 to help pay for the expansion project.

Town Meeting will decide whether to spend $6,000 to apply for a state grant to help pay for the $500,000 expansion project.

Selectmen will support a $6,000 harbor committee request to write a grant application for $250,000 in state funds to extend the Government Island fishing pier. If approved by the state, this construction project would make the pier accessible to larger boats at high tide.

If the state funds $250,000, the town must come up with matching funds. Nearly $125,000 might be obtained through the Small Cities Program of Small Business Association and another $125,000 could be in the form of a long term loan to be paid off by user fees by commerical fishermen.

Selectmen feel the commerical fishermen should be polled to see if the fishermen are satisfied with the current pier.

Another issue is if there is enough recreational provision for the pier.

At last week's session selectmen discussed several issues pertaining to Town Meeting. Moderator William Weeks joined the discussion, along with League of Women Voters representatives Barbara Bliss and Chartis Langmaid.

Town meeting is experiencing problems in every community, they agreed, but solutions must be forthcoming to maintain this form of government.

Securing a quorum, and maintaining a large audience. are two of the more vital issues confronting the future of town meeting.

Many local communities, including Hull and Pembroke, utilize a lottery system for the warrant articles, according to League members. This system allows for continued attendance, since no one is sure when their "favored" article will be selected for debate.

Selectmen chairman Mary Jane McArthur said she Selectmen's decision ires Housing Authority

By Jane Lane

Housing Authority members are "flabbergasted" by selectmen's decision last week to reject the Government Island property for low-income housing .

Last week, selectmen unanimously defeated a proposal suggested by the Housing Authority, to sell or lease the two-family house to the state for low income housing. In a desperate effort to conform to the state's requirement to provide housing for the poor, the Housing Authority has surveyed the town, attempting to locate suitable property.

According to authority members, three selectmen, Mary Jane McArthur, Rocco Laugelle, and John DeBassio, attended a combined meeting March 26. At that time, selectmen were in "complete agreement" with the authority membership to seek state approval of the Government Island site.

Authority chairman Lloyd Prescott noted, "they (selectmen) were completely in favor of the idea last week. Then two nights later, they reject the entire idea. We were all thinking in the same vein. I am utterly amazed and flabbergasted at their decision Wednesday night."

The chairman added, "I'm at a loss for words. I don't know what the other Housing Authority members feel, but I really thought the three selectmen were completely in favor of our proposal."

Town Counsel Richard Henderson told selectmen Wednesday night that the assessed value of the property alone was about $70,000, and the real value of the structure might exceed what the state would be willing to pay for low income housing. He suggested the building be appraised before a proposal is submitted to the state.

The board agreed that Government Island is one of the more valuable pieces of property within the town.

Old Mill Bridge rails draw resistance

Plans to build a replica of an expressway overpass on the Old Mill Bridge have met with some strong resistance.

"A South Boston fence just doesn't belong in Cohasset," argued Connie Parker, president of the Cohasset Historical Society.

Members of the Board of Directors of the Society met last week. They were unanimous in their opposition to plans approved by selectmen to apply for state funding for the construction of a 10-foot fence and guardrail on the bridge.

Selectmen decided last week, that despite the obvious lack of esthetics, the guardrails and fencing are probably the most appropriate deterrent to youths jumping off the bridge into the tidal waters below.

"There are other ways to control the children who jump off that bridge," Parker stated. "Yes, there is a definite problem with the kids jumping off there, and jumping in front of cars driving over the bridge - but this fence will be horrible looking."

A lifelong Cohasset resident, Parker noted that youths have jumped off the bridge since it was built in the early 1900's. To her knowledge, no one has ever been injured at the site.

During last week's selectmen's meeting, it was mentioned that if someone was injured in an accident, the town might be held liable. Selectmen also argued that residents along Border Street for many years have complained about the unruly youths who gather during the summer to jump from the concrete bridge. Rocco Laugelle said most of these rowdy teens are from towns other than Cohasset.

Border Street resident Louis Watson stated he has never summoned the police about the summer bridge diving. In fact, he is hoping a petition will be formulated by neighbors, denouncing the proposed fencing.

"It's a terrible-looking thing. It's going to ruin the view

Arts lottery applications

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Council distributed three grants totalling $678. in the funding which was awarded in January 1984.

The following applications were approved by the council and certified by the state council: The South Shore Art Center, Folio, and the Cohasset Parent School Organization.

The next distribution of funds, which are derived from the proceeds of the Megabucks lottery game, will be July 1984. Cohasset's share of this distribution will be $1,120.

Applications for the next funding cycle are currently available at the Selectmen's office in the Cohasset Town Hall.

Major criteria used as guidelines in evaluating grant applications include financial need, quality, community involvement and benefit to the community.

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Council invites and encourages all artists and arts organizations in the community to apply for this unique local arts and humanities funding opportunity.

Deadline for submitting applications is April 18.

All applications to the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council must be sent to the Cohasset Town Hall, in care of the selectmen's office.

Available money for warrant

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza told selectmen last week $266,657 is available through taxation for 1984 town meeting articles. If the school roofing project, and the school budget as proposed by the school committee is approved, most of the available tax money will be depleted.

According to Lanza, this total was computed after estimating the town's total recommended appropriations for the 1984 Town Meeting, and subtracting the estimated charges to the town. He said if the roofing project is approved, along with the school budget proposed by the school committee, a large chunk of the available tax money will be eliminated.

Coin cannister campaign

The Mass Bay Chapter March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation held its annual Coin Cannister Campaign this spring in Cohasset. Fire President of I.F.A.F. Local 2804, William Protu lis headed the March of Dimes benefit in Cohasset.

Members of the local Fire Department recently distributed March of Dimes coin cannisters to local businesses and companies and will help collect the cannisters.

This annual drive takes place in 48 greater Boston communities. Proceeds from the campaign will fund birth defects research and educational programs in eastern Massachusetts.

The Mass Bay Chapter wishes to express its appreciation to William Protulis and the department for their support of the March of Dimes in its fight against birth defects.

Persons wishing free information on birth defects and how they may be prevented should call the March of Dimes at 329-1360 in Dedham, or write the March of Dimes, 865 Providence Hwy., Dedham, 02026.

Total assessment

The South Shore Regional School Committee voted the total assessment at $1,155,770 for Fiscal Year 1985 last week.

The budget must be approved by town meeting in six of the eight member towns. The proposed budget reflects a 7.7 percent increase over the FY '84 budget.

Last week's Mystery House was 76 Howard Gleason Road.

Sewer plan includes Deer Hill

By Karen Brown

The Cohasset School Committee voted Monday night to ask the Sewer Commission to include the Deer Hill School in the Wade Engineering plan for the town's sewer system.

The Wade plan was described as "an alternative plan to Metcalf and Eddy" and "a cheaper way to sewer the town."

According to Vice Chairman Jack Langmaid, there are presently "no sewers running near to the Deer Hill School...in order to be eligible for state funds, the school has to be on the town's sewer system."

Langmaid also mentioned the possibility of closing the Osgood School and building a small addition to the Deer Hill School; increasing the necessity for a sewer system for the school.

"We wouldn't be managing correctly if we didn't tell the Sewer Commission to put us on the sewer line," said Langmaid.

In other business, the Committee:

—heard from student member John Replogle who read aloud a notice distributed to all high school seniors urging them to attend town meeting on April 7.

The notice specifically mentioned the effect of Proposition 2½ on this year's school committee budget.

—scheduled a budget hearing with the Adv. Bd. for Saturday, April 7, at 10 a.m. in the West Wing of the Jr./Sr. High School.

"Here's a budget representing 50 percent of the town's budget," said Dr. Joe Nedrow, "They're doing us a disservice by putting it off until the last minute."

—received a draft of the Computer Action Plan from Supt. Crowell.

The plan includes: formation of a planning and advisory committee, integrating computers in curriculum, staff training and development, hardware and software acquisition and management procedures.

Supt. Crowell also announced a joint meeting will be held Thursday night at 7 p.m. at Hanover Junior School tends to favor this method, although all spokesmen for various warrant articles would have to be notified the warrant would not be reviewed in correct numerical sequence.

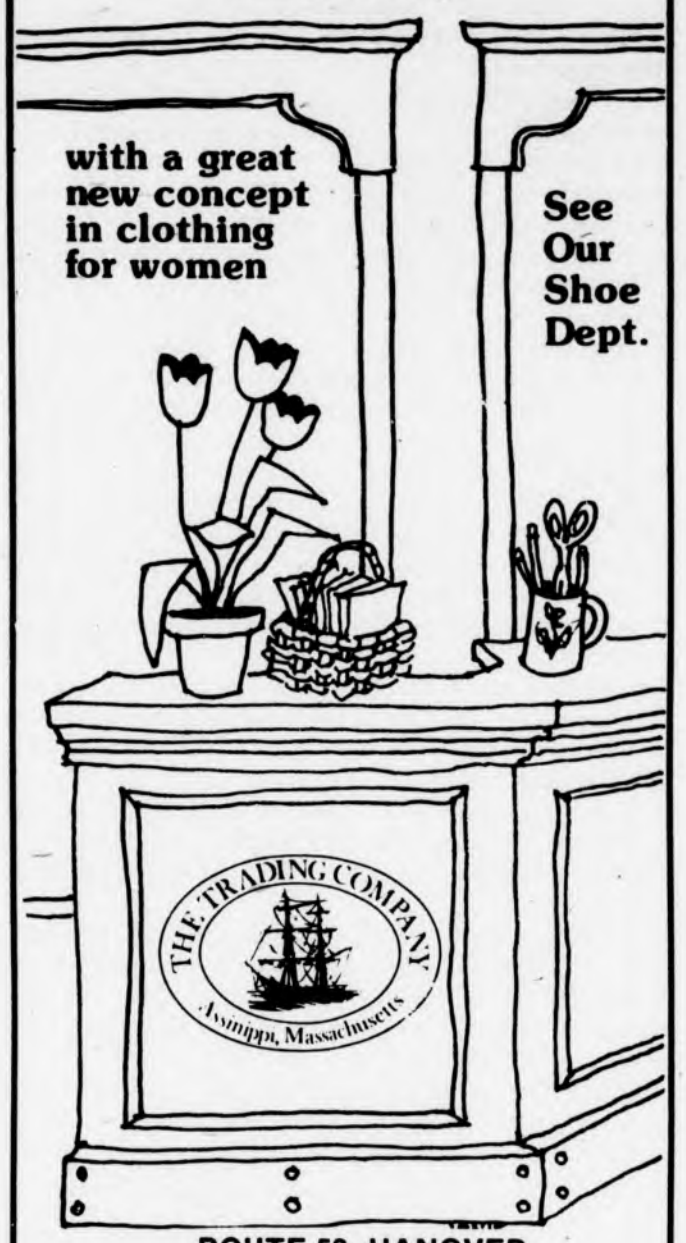
Although Weeks said this is an option which should be investigated, it is too soon to implement it at this annual meeting.

Discussion also centered on whether there is a need for the standard 200-member quorum. Langmaid suggested that 200 "isn't very many people. And I question whether a quorum is fair to those who have come, and then have to wait for the others (to show)."



Weeks opposed the elimination of a quorum regulation, stating, "it's everyone's right to question whether a quorum is present. It is one of my most important jobs to get the business of the town completed as efficiently as possible. It is counter-productive if there is no quorum."

McArthur noted that various methods must be devised to encourage people to attend Town Meeting, and to remain.

Selectmen, league members, and the moderator agreed that at least four checkers are necessary to admit the residents into Town Meeting. At previous meetings, an inadequate number of checkers have impeded the start of Town Meeting, and increased the confusion and noise from that area of the auditorium.

Gerald McNabb earns scouting's highest honor

By Cyndee Moore

Most accomplishments never earn the recognition they deserve.

For Gerald McNabb, however, Monday night's presentation of the Eagle Scout award was recognized not only by local Troop 28 and the Rotary Cub, but also through letters or certificates from Ronald Reagan, Michael Dukakis, Ted Kennedy, Allan McKinnon, Gerry Studds, and a personal presentation by Mary Jeanette Murray.

McNabb, senior at Xavier Brothers High School in Westwood has lived in Cohasset all his life and joined Troop 28 in June 1976, at 11 years old.

Each summer since joining Troop 28, McNabb has attended Camp Child in Plymouth, to earn a total 31 merit badges, although only 21 merit badges are the Eagle Scout requirement.

Such excellence in surpassing the normal requirements for Eagle Scout is only one example of McNabb's complete involvement in whatever he undertakes.

And "involvement" epitomizes McNabb's character, for while a full-time student active in school dramatics, the school newspaper, and member of the National Honor Society, McNabb works two part-time jobs—weekends at the Pratt Memorial Library, and two weeknights at the Mariner office in Marshfield as a proofreader and layout staff member.

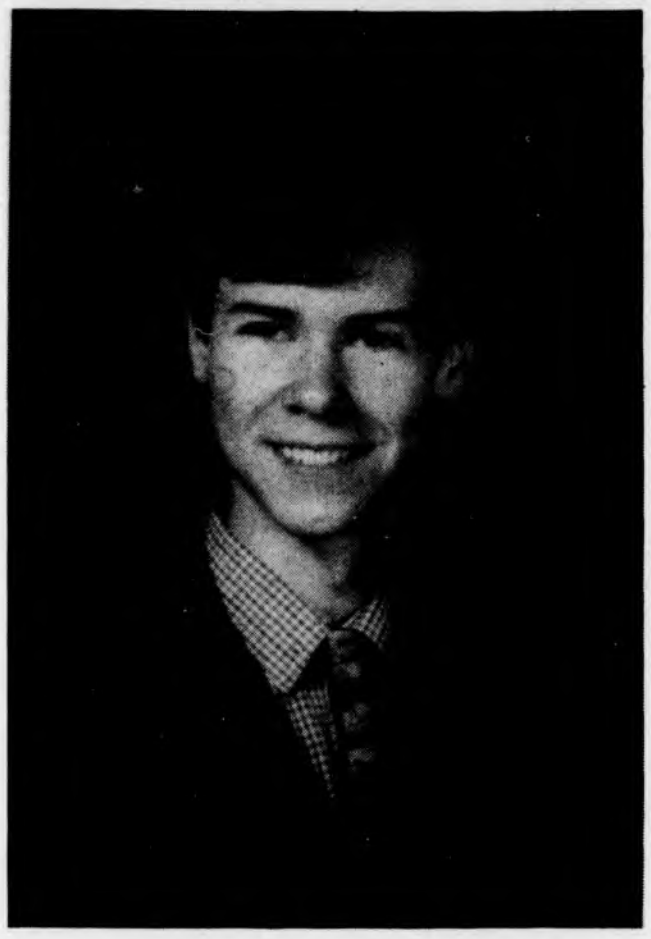
This list goes on to include participation in the Cohasset Dramatics Club (Many may recall his most recent performance as Young Scrooge in "A Christmas Carol.").

Presently waiting for acceptance letters from St. John's College in Annapolis, Md. and Vasser College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., McNabb plans to continue his dramatic arts and literature interests throughout his college years.

While McNabb thrives on a taste for the theatrical, it is scouting that has filled the dramatics of his life. He explains his special attraction for scouting stemmed from the influence of his older brother, John, who was an assistant scoutmaster and later Eagle Scout when McNabb was a young scout.

Fittingly, it was John who presented his younger brother with the Eagle Scout badge and Assistant Scoutmaster Certificate for Trooop 28 Monday night.

McNabb also acknowledges the support of his past scoutmasters, Nelson Pratt and David James, and most recently, Merle Brown, who advised McNabb in his Eagle Scout project of fingerprinting the town's school age children.



"It's (the project) the hardest thing...it's the project that is the trick," McNabb siad.

"You have to complete 50 hours of service to community. You have to supervise the project, plan it, get it approved by the scoutmaster and the district project chairman. It has been said that only one percent of all Boy Scouts meet the requirements for Eagle Scout."

McNabb offered two fingerprinting days, one at the end of last school year and the other at the beginning of this school year. With the support of School Supt. Eugene Crowell, Police Chief Joe Kealey and the Parent School Organization, McNabb completed a project which he feels made community parents more aware.

Fingerprints of 150 Cohasset children are now in their parents' hands because of his efforts.

At the completion of the project, McNabb said he felt "like I had done something valuable. People said it was great and the parents were very appreciative."

Donovan to oppose Studds

George Donovan of Hull is a republican candidate for Congress in the republican primary to oppose Gerry Studds in November.

A Maritime lawyer, Donovan, says "fairness would include sending less overseas in the form of foreign aid and using some of the money to develop the deep water port of New Bedford. Such a move would created five thousand jobs within a fifty mile radius of the port."

Mystery House Contest No. 5

Well, glory be. Fourteen people were correct in Week 4's Mystery House Tour.

If you guessed No. 76 Howard Gleason Road, take a bow.

This is the highly altered Victorian house built before 1876 by the eminent actor William H. Crane, one of the residents of Cohasset's fashionable "Actor's Row. This was a group of theater personalities and yachtsmen who lived in houses along the waterfront at Cohasset Harbor.

Later it was the home of the Rev. Howard Key Bartow, of Cohasset's St. Stephen's Parish. The house was extensively changed some years ago.

The exact location is the corner of Margin Street, Atlantic Ave. and Howard Gleason Road, near the Yacht Club.

Those people submitting correct answers were Lynette Lyndan, the Galt Grant family, A. J. Antoine Jr., Verna Martini, Betty Enders, Robert Leonard Sr., Warren Pratt, Lillian Pierce, Thomas Chamberlain, G.E. Nothnagle, Charles Wheelright, Warren Thomson, Nancy Garrison and Hamilton Tewksbury.

The Galt Grant family, Warren Pratt and Robert Leonard Sr. continue to slug it out for first place with three correct answers. In second place with two correct answers are A. J. Antoine Jr., Verna Martini, Betty Enders and Jean Rosano.

These people are vying for the retail prizes which will be a $100 gift certificate at the Linen Chest, $50 gift certificate at Hugo's and a $25 gift certificate at Fleming's of Cohasset.

This will be Week 5 of the ten-week Mystery House Tour. If need be, two houses will be provided for playoffs.

Once you find the home, write down the address of the homes, exact number and street along with your name, address and phone number and send it to the "Mystery House Tour", care of the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025 or drop of the answers in an envelope at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or at Hennessey's News, both in Cohasset Village.

The deadline for weekly entries will be 9:30 a.m. sharp Tuesday.

The following week we will disclose the correct address with a picture of how the home looks today with a little history brief about each house.

Remember, only one guess per week.

This week's clue is:. the background of this week's picture served as one of the earlier post offices. In addition, this is the first picture of the Mystery Tour which has some people in it.

McKinnon not to seek reelection

Allan McKinnon will conclude his years as State Senator for Norfolk and Plymouth Counties at the end of 1984.

Sen. McKinnon announced Monday that he will not seek another term of office.

He started his career at the State House in 1970 when he first ran for the office. He left behind him then his work as a teacher of U.S. History in Holbrook and Weymouth.

"I have spent 14 satisfying years in the State Senate, he said, and "I think now it is time for me to seek new challenges."

McKinnon did not say Tuesday what those challenges might be. "...Up in the air," he said of his plans.

The Senator said he viewed economic development as one of the hallmarks of his years in the Senate. He was chairman of the Commerce and Labor Committee for five years. He also pointed to the Scenic Rivers Act as having important environmental impact for this area. The North River was named a scenic river and thereby received protection of its natural resources.

McKinnon has also been instrumental in gaining money to support the commuter boat for the South Shore. He was assistant Democratic Majority Leader and still serves as chairman of the Insurance Committee.

Following are the comments the Senator added to the announcement that he will no longer seek office as State Senator.

"I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank my many friends and campaign workers who have been so supportive of my political career. They have made sacrifices both financially and by giving of their time and effort over the years. Their continued support and the confidence and faith they have placed in me during my time in office is truly appreciated and will never be forgotten.

"I would particularly like to thank the voters from the South Shore who have elected me for seven consecutive terms. When you serve for the length of time I have served in a law-making body and you cast thousands of votes in that time span, many of which dealt with controversial subjects, perhaps every constituent of mine has found issues on which we disagreed. I am, therefore, doubly appreciative that these same constituents could overlook these differences and vote for me at the polls every other fall. In retrospect, although there are always a few votes you would like to have back, I can say I feel quite comfortable with 99 percent of my votes and stands on issues," McKinnon said.

McKinnon also stated, "I have been truly blessed with an outstanding office staff who have had a genuine commitment to public service and the needs of my constituents. Their dedication and hard work has earned them a well-deserved reputation as one of the best staffs at the State House.

"Lastly but most importantly, I would like to thank my family for their understanding and tolerance of the demands a political career places on an individual. They have been tremendous over the years and their loving support made a difficult and time-consuming job that much easier."

Samaritans open new branch for South Shore

The Samaritans, the international suicide-prevention service, is opening a new branch in North Plymouth to serve the South Shore. Volunteers are needed for this 24-hour service, and may apply to be interviewed for the April training course. The Samaritan center at Cordage Park will open for calls and visitors at the beginning of July.

The Samaritans, which has branches all over the world, was founded in London, England in 1953. The first American branch was started in Boston in 1974 by Monica Dickens of North Falmouth, Mass. There are now ten active Samaritan branches, and six more opening this year. The Cape Cod branch, which was opened in 1977 has been getting about 500 calls a year from Plymouth and the South Shore.

The Samaritans are all volunteers, who are there night and day for anyone who is lonely, depressed or suicidal and needs someone to talk to in confidence. Men and women over 19 years old who would like to work with the Samaritans of the South Shore are invited to call 747-1606 from 9-12 Monday through Friday, or may write to P.O. Box 1376, Buzzards Bay, 02532 for an interview appointment.

Bridge plans draw resistance

of the gulf from the bridge. It's a horror," he complained. "I'm sure just about everyone in town is against this. Let's face it, the kids are going to swim from the area whether a fence is there or not. They still throw rocks from the expressway overpasses, don't they?"

SelectmenChairman Mary Jane McArthur opposed the plan, reasoning that the chain link fence and aluminiumguardrails will detract from one of the more picturesque areas of Cohasset.

After reviewing photographs depicting what the fencing would resemble, the chairman stated she could not go along with the opinion of the other selectmen. (Selectman Clifford Mitman was absent from last week's meeting).

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield explained that refusal to approve the fencing might jeopardize state funding of other critical repairs to the bridge. In addition to the chain link fence and three guardrail bars, the repairs will include reinforcing underneath the structure, resurfacing the road and installing new drainage culverts.

Noel Ripley, chairman of the local Historical Commission, said that organization is also opposed to the construction plans. They plan to inform selectmen this week of the commission's unanimous decision.

Arguing that such an edifice will be "esthetically unpleasing," Ripley added that the fencing will impede their plans to organize a Captains Walk through the historic areas of town, which includes Old Mill Bridge. Plans for the historic tour through Cohasset should be finalized this spring, he added.

"I sympathize with the neighbors, that there is a problem," Ripley said, "but I think this fence is a particularly unfortunate solution."

Explaining that the history of Cohasset is imbedded in its harbor, Ripley said the proposed fencing would certainly lessen the visual impact of the popular area.

One Border Street resident says she agrees the fence will "add nothing to our scenery," but noted, "I can't think of a better alternative."

She said, "it's a dangerous place to drive in the summer with the kids crossing in front of the cars. It's a pretty spot, but it's hard to know what to do. You can't have a police officer there all day to keep the kids away."

An Atlantic Avenue resident whose home is located near the Cunningham Bridge, explained that neighborhood is plagued with similar problems. But she doesn't agree that a 10-foot chain link fence is the answer.

"This problem has been evident for years. I don't think an ugly fence is the solution. It seems to me that for the cost of the fence, we could get the money to hire a police officer there.

around town

☐ Last Thursday morning started out like any other for Pat Litchfield, but it didn't last for long. Out she went to get her mail, and what a surprise she received! She was one of twenty people from the area chosen to be a contestant on "Wheel of Fortune", a game show that appears twice daily on local television stations. Pat was one of one thousand people interviewed, and must have done extremely well, for she made it! The whole family is so excited for Pat, especially since they all plan on attending. The date isn't known yet, but I have been promised that I will be told in ample time to alert all "Around Town" readers as to when it will be televised. Good luck in advance, Pat.

☐ Had an update on Dorene Louise (Rose) Petrosky recently. Dorene was awarded the Ph.D. degree in biological sciences at commencement exercises at the University of Delaware. Her dissertation research was in the area of human genetics. Dorene is a CHS grad and holds a B.S. degree from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and an M.S. degree from the University of Wisconsin at Madison. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi honor societies and of Sigma Xi, the Scientific Research Society. For the past 11 years she has taught at Delaware State College in Dover, Delaware, where she is currently associate professor of Biological Sciences. Dr. Petrosky lives in Dover with her husband and ten year old son. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rose of Cohasset.

☐ Congratulations are certainly in store for Jonathan deLima! Jonathan, a sixth grade student at Deer Hill School, is a finalist in the Quincy Patriot Ledger Spelling Bee and his winning word was Spherical (hope I spelled it right!). His parents, Richard and Sarah deLima, are so pleased for him...no wonder! Allison Kornet and Zack Hochkepple, also sixth-graders also deserve applause because they were tied for runner-up.

☐ A very happy birthday to Kitty McMahon, who was 94 years young April 4. Kitty now resides at 52 Curtis Street in Scituate, and if her name sounds familiar to some, well it should! She was a kindergarten teacher in the old Bates Building, and one of her illustrious students was Bill Poland!

☐ William E. Devine of Cohasset has been named senior representative for the new health program development office in Newton opened by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts.

Devine, a resident of Todd Lane, will assist major group accounts in developing health management programs to contain the cost of health benefits.

"William Devine will provide guidance and expertise in assisting employers to design affordable health benefit programs for their employees," said John J. McGrath, office director.

A graduate of Archbishop Williams School, Braintree, Devine received his degree in business administration from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

An experienced group health specialist, Devine joined Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts in November as a marketing representative.

☐ Shirley Tolan of the Cohasset office of Gallery 360, the Gallery of Homes passed the million dollar mark in residential real estate sales for 1984, according to Tom Hamilton, principal of the Cohasset office.

Mrs. Tolan put more than $1 million under agreement during the month of February. A consistent million dollar broker throughout her 13 year long career, she was the Cohasset office broker of the year in 1983 and was also one of the top Gallery 360 brokers in the firm's nine South Shore offices.

A Scituate resident, she was formerly the treasurer of the Scituate Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Tolan is the on-site sales manager for the Scituate Harbor Inn condominiums, formerly the Inn for All Seasons, a gourmet restaurant and Victorian inn.

To qualify for the Dean's List at Norwich, a student must attain an academic quality-point average of at least 3.0, the equivalent of a "B" grade in all subjects.

MDC Police officer thanks Walter Sweeney for his talk as Hull High School Principal Tom Ballerino looks on.

☐ Recently, Cohasset's Walt Sweeney, former San Diego Charger and Washington Redskin player than was all-pro, gave a speech to the students at Hull High School. It was given as part of the M.D.C. Police Benevolent Association ongoing Drug and Alcohol awareness program, and was directed to the Junior and Senior classes. Pictured here are M.D.C. officer Bob Green, Walt Sweeney and Hull High School principal Tom Ballerino.

☐ "The Dining Room," a two-act play by A. R. Gurney, Jr., will be presented by Thayer Academy faculty and students in Frothingham Hall on Fri. and Sat. April 6 and 7 at 8 p.m. Scenes of the past are reenacted by the characters in the old dining room which is now up for sale.

Working on props is Diane Thayer of Cohasset.

☐ James Froio Jr. of Cohasset has made the Dean's list for undergraduate students for the fall semester at Salem State College.

☐ With lots of hope as she reads this, here's to Debbi MacDonald who is battling her illness with a new platelet cure that all of her relatives and friends have helped her to receive. Debbie was written up in the newspapers recently, and went into the hospital with tons of good cheer. With everyone cheering for her, things are bound to be fine!

☐ Koren A. Lipsett, Class of 1985 of Cohasset, has received honors for the fall term at Skidmore College, a co-educational, liberal arts institute with an enrollment of about 2,100 students.

Highest honors are awarded for a quality point ration of 3.6 or more from a possible 4.0. Honors are awarded for a ration of 3.2 to 3.59.

Lipsett is the daughter of Mrs. Valerie A. Lipsett of 85 Elm St.

☐ The Athletic Directors met recently, and came to a decision which will make the Thanksgiving game a lot more competitive after this year. They have agreed to play Hull vs. Cohasset, an old rivalry renewed. Here's hoping the first game is at Cohasset, Hull is so cold in November!

☐ Received another Florida report, this time via Mary Jeannette and Phil Murray. Needless to say, they also visited Neil O'Brien and Pauline Keating and had a grand time. At some parts of their trip they were almost convinced that they had never left Cohasset at all. They saw so many Cohassetites, i.e., Mim Poole, Barron and Izzie Salvador and Fred and Edith Peterson.

☐ While on the subject of Mary Jeanette, she says she has found the cure for bad backs! It seems that she awakened on the day of Donkey Basketball with a bad backache, and Phil told her not to take part in the event. Being the true trooper that she is, she did...voila! Back ache was gone upon completion of the game. Could it be that everything ached so badly that she forgot about her back? Only she will know.

☐ Despite the cold and wet weather, the Boosters Club Dance was a grand success. The dancers enjoyed the disc jockey's selections so much they were exhausted by the end, the winners of all of the raffle prizes went home happy (any time you want to come out a winner, sit at Bob Ciciotte's table...guaranteed to win at least once!), and the Boosters came out ahead. The committee did a fine job once again.

☐ Scott Muir's talk about his recent ventures in Tokyo, Japan inspired many of the students he spoke to. They learned of the Japanese culture and many of his other Japanese experiences, making many envious of his endeavors. He was asked to return for another session, thus proving the interest that he created. He even speaks the Japanese language!

☐Joseph Manfredi, Jr., P.E. of 51 Surrey Drive, has recently been promoted to Senior Vice President of Syska & Hennessy, a consulting mechanical and electrical engineering firm in Cambridge.

The firm has been responsible for the design of many of Boston's most prestigious buildings including the Museum of Fine Arts, Westin Hotel at Copley Place, the Christian Science Church Center and many others. Manfredi has been the Regional Vice President of Syska & Hennessy's regional office since its opening in 1981.

Grade 8 students learn improvisation

Six eighth grade English classes participated in sequenced theatre workshops from March 15 to March 20. They were designed to focus on drama techniques suitable for classroom use and the work that is involved in creating and sustaining an illusion.

Lucinda Wilkins of The Just Around The Corner Company of Brookline organized and instructed the four days of drama seminars.

Session One opened with a discussion of what live theatre can and cannot do. Wilkins defined the terms of believability and suspension of disbelief and related how these are necessary, and also difficult, to achieve in live theatre.

Students were divided into two groups and told to work out the action of watching a sports activity together. This was followed by a discussion of the believability of the two scenes with suggestions for additions and expansion.

Different forms of theatrical reality - character, setting and plot - were covered in Session Two. Students were asked to think of a small object that presents them with some difficulty and communicate what the object is, what the problem is, and how the problem is solved. Students also paired up to work together on an improvisation about a mutual problem object, such as a stalled car. These were presented to the class followed by a discussion of believability.

Session Three, Theatre as a Medium Meeting the Needs of Society, briefly covered the evolution of modern theatre. Students reviewed the elements of theatre, focusing on establishing the relationship of character to setting. They were asked to select an everyday sort of character and write a brief life history of the character for use during Session Four.

In the last workshop, students explored the elements of the play through character, with emphasis on behavior appropriate to the setting. They planned and performed improvisations using the characters they invented which included a 'problem' which had to be solved using the strengths of their characters.

Follow-up suggestions were presented to the classroom teachers who included Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Alcott and Mr. Reade.

Although a short-term project, Wilkins used every minute of each class effectively to involve students physically as well as intellectually in the dramatic workshops. Through the presentation of solvable, but complex problems in plot, characterization and acting, students were made more aware of cause/effect and the problems of theatre.

The workshops were funded, with assistance from the PSO Arts Enrichment Committee, through the Events Program of The Institute for the Arts, Boston. The Institute is funded by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities and is a project of the Cultural Education Collaborative. Grants were also received from the Cohasset Arts Council and Yankee Oil and Gas Incorporated.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Wood began a drama club for junior high students. About 25 seventh and eighth grade students meet once a week or two with Wood and Nancy Donahue, a senior who is assisting with the group. Donahue led the first class in creative drama exercises. Wood hopes to prepare the students for the presentation of a short play by the end of the year.

When Ron Emmons presented a performance of his State Drama Festival entry "Chinamen" March 22 at CHS, he shared the billing with two theatre pieces by junior high students.

Mrs. Wood and Junior Sarah Muir assisted 16 eighth graders in restaging a one-act play, "The In Group," and Michael Casselero and Sarah Hamilton performed one of the improvisations from the drama workshops involving small object problem solving.

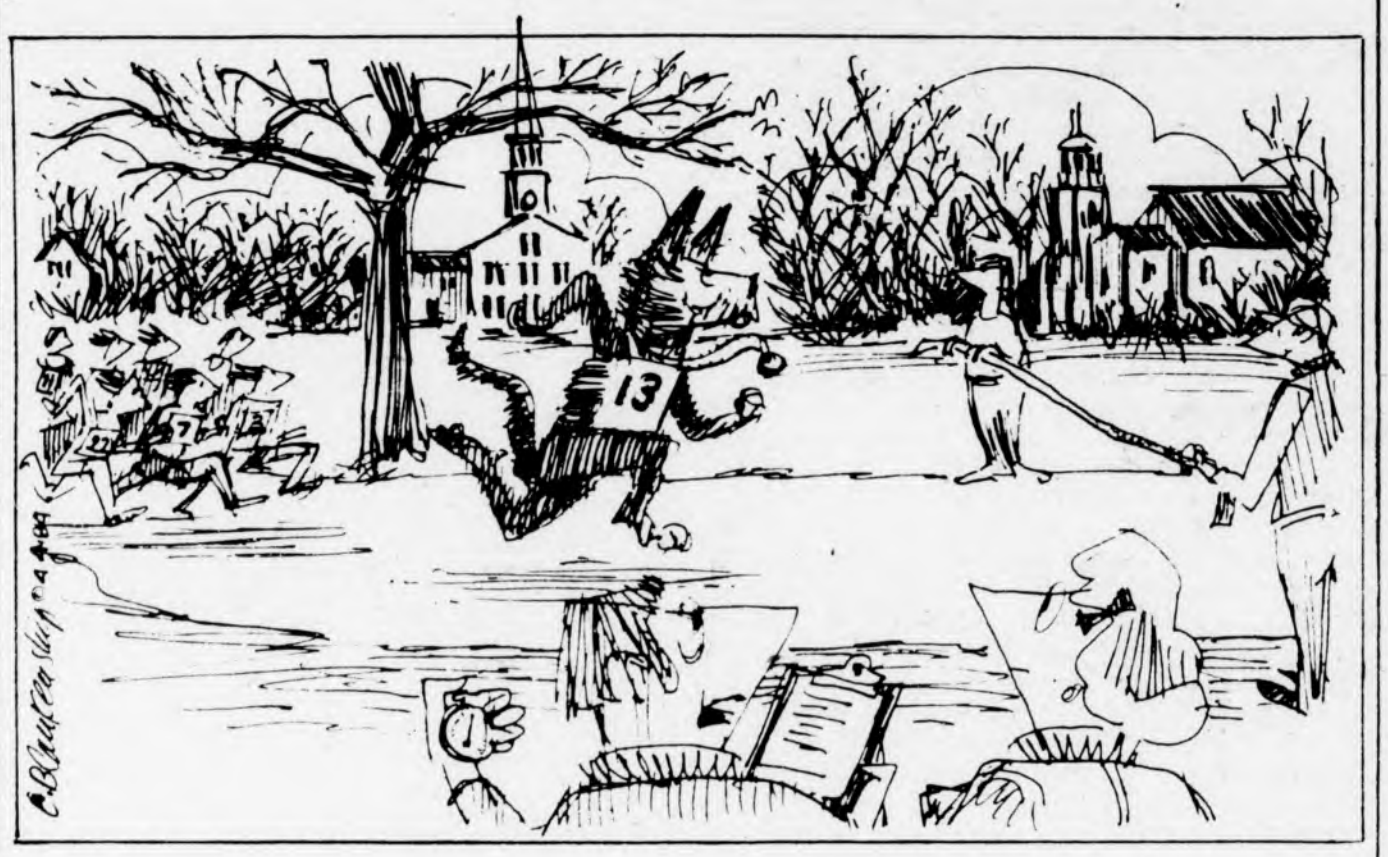
McKinnon's tenure

State Sen. Allan McKinnon of Weymouth is in the twilight of a 14-year career in the legislature. This week, he announced he will not be a candidate for re-election, and as most everyone — including doormen at the State House — knows, he will probably wind up with an appointment in the Dukakis Administration. He has been a Dukakis supporter for a long time, even during those lean years in the late 70s when Dukakis had few friends in the legislature.

Greatness does not come to mind in considering the McKinnon record, but that is not to denigrate the achievements or the abilities of the man.

Sen. McKinnon is a decent and honorable man who has served his constituents well for seven terms. His record is better than most and his character is far better than most.



Had fate been kinder, Sen. McKinnon might well be thinking about running, rather than leaving, the State Senate. In the late 70s he was the Democratic whip — third in the hierarchy — and had his eye on the post of majority leader which, if one is patient, can lead to the Senate presidency and the inevitable designation: "There goes the second most powerful man on Beacon Hill."

Alas, the rise of Senate President William Bulger — no busom buddy he — saw the decline of McKinnon fortunes and he eventually fell off the pyramid, a victim of Bulger's hard ball play.

Still, as Senate chairman of the legislature's insurance committee and as former co-chairman of the commerce and labor committee, Sen. McKinnon wielded some power and wielded it for the public good. His legislative accomplishments are impressive.

Allan McKinnon is not a flashy man. And although endowed with a good sense of humor, he is not a man of charisma. What he is, is a fair, honest, serious man who embodies much of what a public servant should be. And after 14 years, that is not at all a bad legacy.

Storm update

Cohasset was one of the very few area communities to have school Friday, March 30 and all town officials contacted feel Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle and Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield and his workers deserve a great deal of thanks for their hard work.

The Police, Fire and School Depts. worked together Thursday afternoon to form emergency shelter evacuation plans to Cohasset schools if the need arose.

Litchfield said last week's storm was tough because once the snow stopped, it started up again.

He said this storm was no comparison to the Blizzard of 1978 when 4500 yards of sand needed to be cleaned up on Sandy Beach.

Highwayer workers began sanding at 1 p.m. Thursday, March 29 and worked around the clock till 8 a.m. Friday morning.

"Peter Laugelle and his men did a hell of a job clearing the trees on the roads," said Laugelle.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley praised his men, some of whom came in on their own to answer calls. Two shifts were kept overnight. Dooley said he was quite satisfied with their performances. A full list of emergency calls are listed on the Police and Fire Logs.

Get a legal coupon

By Claire McDonough

"We got a bunch of coupons in the mail," I told the Dragon. "Do you want to keep any of them?"

"That depends. Are they for anything we're likely to use?"

"Let's see." I rifled through the contents of a large envelope.

"If we buy six donuts we can get another three free. We can have five skirts dry cleaned for the price of four. We can have a free legal consultation. We can get $1 off on a car wash. We can . . ."

"Back up a minute," the Dragon interjected. "What did you just say?"

"We can get $1 off on a car wash," I repeated.

"Not that. The one before it. Does it really say a free legal consultation?"

I re-checked the coupons. "Right. But we have to go to Norwell for it."

The Dragon's eyes had a dreamy look. "Fascinating. If professional people are going to start giving cents-off coupons, there's no telling where it will lead. I wonder how much a legal consultation is worth, anyway."

"Beats me. But maybe if you turn in your donut wrappers along with the coupon, you could get a break on the second visit."

"That's a wonderful idea," he enthused. "And there's really no limit to how far this can be carried.

"For example, the automobile insurance people might start passing out flyers at the supermarket. Perhaps they'll let you insure an inexperienced driver at the same price as someone who's been driving over six years."

"Do you know what 'fat chance' means?" I asked him.

"You have no imagination at all," he told me.

"Maybe they could give out something like green stamps for every optional coverage you buy. When you've saved up enough, you could turn them in and insure your teenager."

"I hope," I said gently, "that there's a psychiatrist out there giving bargains, too."

"People always make fun of great ideas in the beginning," he said defensively. "They laughed at Columbus, didn't they?"

"Some people still do. I wonder if it's significant that the Flat Earth Society is based in our nation's capital."

"You're changing the subject," he said sternly. "Give me that coupon."

"What for? No one's suing you, you're not suing anyone. What do you need a legal consultation for?"

He smiled evily. "It never hurts to keep abreast of the latest divorce laws."

"If it comes to that," I rejoined, "I get custody of the nine donuts."

Prescott explains low-income housing issue

To the Editor:

It was a great disappointment to the writer to read of the Cohasset Selectmen's unanimous decision to reject a proposal by the Cohasset Housing Authority to study and apply for state funding of the house on Government Island to be used for low-cost housing in order to comply with the Commonwealth's requirements for the town.

Three of the Selectmen met with the Housing Authority at their March meeting March 26. They were John DeBassio, Mary Jane MacArthur and Rocco Laugelle. All three of them agreed at that time with the Housing Authority to apply for funds and at a later date ask the voters of Cohasset (if the funds were approved for the house on Government Island) at a Town Meeting what the resident's decision would be as to that sale.

In order to clear the air for those who were not at the Housing Authority meeting and yet spoke at the Selectmen's meeting with such authority, the following should be made clear to them as well as the residents of the town: In order to quell the fears that the state would be taking over the house on Government Island, it is felt that a clear definition of what the Cohasset Housing Authority is would be in order.

Under Chapter 121B, Section 3 of the General Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts the housing authority is defined and its functions as follows.

A. A housing authority is not a department of the town. It is a public body politic and corporate created pursuant to the above law. It is composed of five town residents. Four of them elected by the voters of the town for a period of five years and the fifth appointed by the Governor. At present the authority is in charge of the operation of the 64 apartments for the elderly located at 60 Elm Street.

B. The housing authority is a public corporation created and maintained to eliminate slums, unsafe and unsanitary dwellings and to furnish low cost housing and to relieve acute shortages experienced by the public and our veterans.

C. The statute establishing the housing authority makes it plain that such an authority although organized by and in each city or town in cooperation with the state is nevertheless, when organized a complete entity in itself distinct from the municipal cooperation within whose territory it is set up and exercising its own independent right.

D. The expenditure of public funds by city or town for clearance of a slum area or for low rent housing, pursuant to housing authority law are valid expenditures of public money for public purposes.

E. Families of low income are families and persons whose net income is less than the amount necessary to obtain and maintain decent and safe housing.

It is hoped that the above will put to rest the fears of those who say that property is being turned over to the state. The state goes on to say that they are not attempting to dictate local housing policies nor does it deal directly or interfere with any local action dealing with the housing authority.

The Office of Community Development from which we receive only operating money and assistance and to whom we answer in regards to budgets and operating procedure only, has never interfered with its day to day operation or projected itself in any decision since the authority took over the housing for the elderly at 60 Elm Street.

To those who have stated the town is giving something away — it is not true! The only change, should the house on Government Island be turned over to the housing authority for two low-income rental units, would be in name only.

That is — from the Town of Cohasset to the Cohasset Housing Authority. It would take the town out of a costly real estate problem.

In answer to Selectman Frank Englands' remark "You will find people fighting to be low income" — it is not true. The two apartments at present bring in a rental of $250 each or a total of $500 per month.

At the present time, in this writer's opinion, with a rental of that amount it is already low cost housing.

The building needs extensive repairs which if taken over by the housing would be paid for out of the housing authority budget and maintenance of same would be supplied by the authority — all at no expense to the town.

To Selectman John DeBassio (who uttered no objections at the housing authority meeting) "It would be one of the most valuable low-income properties in the state" I can only answer it would also be one of the most expensive parking lots if the Selectmen approve same for restaurant parking.

It is frusatration to sit with three Selectmen and have them raise not one objection, request the Executive Director of the Housing and the Executive Scretary of the town to draw up a request for state funds and survey and investigate this property, yet two nights later make a complete turnabout.

It is not the intent of this writer to lead anyone to believe that our only recourse for low cost housing is to obtain the house on Government Island and 30,000 square feet of land. It is a place to start and will show the state we are concerned and looking for homes. It is our understanding that six units would satisfy the state. This could be the answer for two of them.

Town Counsel has informed all concerned that there is no restriction prohibiting the town from transferring the house and 30,000 feet to the authority, if the state approved the project and please remember the final decision is in the hands of Cohasset voters at a town meeting somewhere in the future.

If Selectmen Rocco Laugelle who said "It would be better for the housing authority to look elsewhere" would please tell us where to look it would be appreciated.

While other funds may be available, it was felt that Chapter 705 Funds should be used, as it leaves the Housing Authority in charge of the project. It also included the rights of Cohasset residents to receive preference in the scattered site housing.

Under 705 it is my understanding that the state will allow, if funds are available (upon approval of the site, plans, etc.) the approximate sum of $60,000 per unit, toward the price and improvements of the house and property. It would appear to the writer if the property purchased exceeded the $60,000 the town could be accountable to raise the balance.

Other plans are available under 707 which is a rental plan under the state as well as Section 8 which falls under Federal funding. It is also my understanding due to the absence of any direct or formulated course of action that the funds available now had to be applied for by April 9.

As this date is impossible to be met since we have no concrete plans to present or ideas we can not again apply until funds once again become available, hopefully in the fall of 1984. Will the state go along with us until that date? Lets hope so or grants could be cut off to the town.

I feel the Housing Authority has done all it can to find property and make application to the State for funding of low cost housing. It is now time for the Selectmen and other town boards or residents to come up with other proposals.

Lloyd W. Prescott

(While the writer is Chairman of the Cohasset Housing Authority, the above remarks are his own and do not necessarily reflect the other members opinion. Ed)

Proper posting is needed

To the Editor:

The Mill River Bridge, which has provided scenic vistas of Gulf River and Cohasset Harbor is facing a crisis.

Due to a 3-1 decision by the Board of Selectmen, 10 foot high steel fencing, which is standard issue for highway overpasses will not surround Mill Bridge.

The selectmen stated that the reason for installing the fencing is to avoid being sued for negligence if someone was injured jumping from the bridge and to curtail complaints from neighbors.

Even with a highway overpass fence it is doubtful that bridge jumping will ever be eliminated from Mill Bridge.

It is my opinion that the Selectmen and Police Department have not made a concerted effort in enforcing what they suddenly see as a serious problem.

If the selectmen are so concerned about bridge jumping why are there no signs on the bridge railing stating that bridge jumping is not allowed and the legal consequences to violators?

Are we now going to install 10 foot high fencing on Cunningham Bridge?

It is unconscionable to think that such an eyesore will soon face both residents and visitors to the town. The practical solution to this problem is proper posting and enforcement of existing laws.

Attend town meeting

To the Editor:

One result of the passage of Proposition 2½ was to remove fiscal autonomy from our School Committee and return the power to decide upon the level of financial support for our schools to the Town Meeting.

For better or for worse the decision is now up to us, the citizens of Cohasset, and the Executive Board of the Parent School Organization strongly urges all voters concerned with the quality of public education in our town to be present at 1 p.m. at the high school auditorium Saturday, April 7, when the town budget will be presented for approval.

The final recommendation of the Advisory Committee on the school budget is not yet known and the voters may be called upon to rule on a difference in funding of over a hundred thousand dollars.

It is a difference that could make a big difference to our children. Please plan to be there.

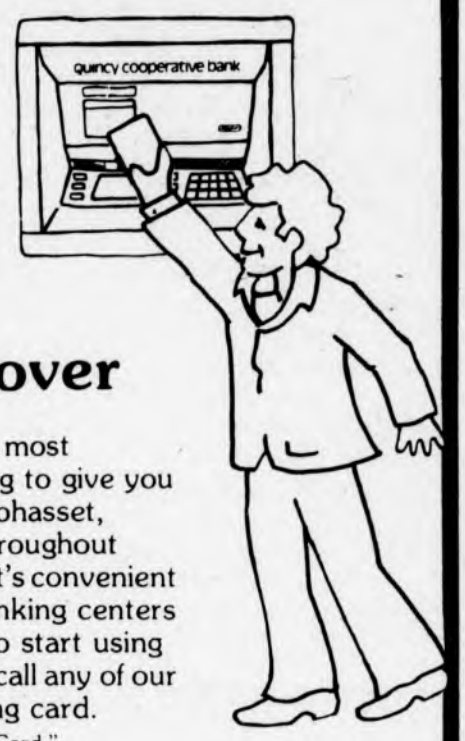
New tax forms

The Massachusetts Department of Revenue has issued a new information return to over 700,000 Massachusetts taxpayers.

The form, called 1099G, provides taxpayers with information so they can declare state tax refunds on their federal returns. It was issued by the state in compliance with Federal law.



The federal reporting requirement applies to taxpayers who claimed state tax payments as an itemized deduction on their federal tax return and subsequently received a state refund.

Taxpayers who have already filed their federal income tax return and failed to report their state tax refund can file an amended return on Form 1040X.

For further information on that procedure, taxpayers should call the Internal Revenue Service Taxpayer Assistance line at 523-1040.

The new reporting requirement has no effect whatsoever on individuals' state tax payments.

Opposing candidates present their views

By Jane Lane

No rhetoric was spared Tuesday night as opposing candidates for town offices politely sparred with each other in the public forum of Town Hall.

Sponsored by the Cohasset League of Women Voters, Tuesday's Town Affairs Night attracted almost all local office seekers, and about 100 interested residents.

Questioning from the audience was sparse, and the political candidates pulled few punches, in a surprisingly serene presentation. This program was the first, and last public gathering of all the political candidates before the April 14 election.

All candidates, opposed and unopposed, were given a few minutes to present an oral statement to the audience, and then time was allotted for questions from the voters.

Town Moderator William Weeks was the first speaker.He is running unopposed for the elected three-year position he has held since 1981. As moderator, Weeks explained he presides over annual and special town meetings, and along with the selectmen and advisory committee, appoints citizen volunteers to various town committees and boards.

Weeks is seeking a second term, because, he stated, "I believe very strongly in the importance of voluntary participation in our community, and in this way I feel I can help and support this town."

Assessors

The next candidates to speak were two residents seeking one, three-year seat on the Board of Assessors. Charles Aronovici of Jerusalem Road is challenging incumbent Warren Pratt of Red Gate Lane.

In his remarks, Aronovici said the assessors must address the immediate problem of senior citizens being forced to leave town because of the recent property revaluations. He told the gathered voters he would act as an advocate in dealing with town departments and state agencies to help alleviate the situation.

With a degree in finance and a familiarity with computers, Aronovici said he could be a valuable asset during the town's next revaluation. He added there is a need to send out tax bills on time, and to alleviate additional borrowing necessitated by late tax bills.

Warren Pratt has been an assessor in Cohasset since 1969. He reviewed the entire revaluation process for the voters, and noted that all revaluation work has been approved and is in compliance with the State Department of Revenue regulations.

Rec. Commission

Alna Ekberg is seeking re-election to a five-year term on the Recreation Commission. She is unopposed, and did not attend the candidates' program

Terese England Duggan of King Street is one of three candidates seeking two four-year positions on the commission. She noted the tremendous recreation facilties within the town, and the need to maintain them. A volunteer soccer coach for the Recreation Department, Duggan said, "Cohasset needs people willing to work and listen. I would like to give something back to the town which gave me so much while I was growing up."

Peter Laugelle, Tree and Park Superintendent, is seeking a position on the Recreation Commission. As a member of the Wampatuck State Park board of directors, Laugelle said he is familiar with many of the facilities and recreational needs of the town. He also cited the harbor as an area where more recreational uses should be pursued.

Robin Suhrbier discussed her extensive involvment with the local PSO and many other civic activities. Her strength, Robin added, was in her creativity, acknowledged the need to balance athletic and non athletic activities, while continuing to generate interest in the programs.

Planning Board

Planning board candidates were the next speakers during Tuesday night's presentation.

Deborah Cook is challenging incumbent Patrick Plante for a five-year membership to that board.

Cook said it was the obligation of that board to maintain and protect the uniquely beautiful qualities of the town. The primary tool used to accomplish this feat, is the town's zoning bylaw, adopted in 1955. Cook said an intricate study, using aerial photographs, topographical maps, and other methods, should be initiated so the board will know exactly how many new residential and commercial units can be developed in each available tract of open land in Cohasset.

Incumbent Plante took challenge to that, and said the board has spent hundreds of hours carefully planning and working in cooperation with developers on such new projects such as cluster developments. He noted 100 Pond Street as the town's first example of this new planning concept. Plante said the planning board is aware of the number of residential and commercial land available for future development.

School Committee

One of the more hotly contested positions in next week's election will be the three-year seat on the School Committee. Incumbent Richard Conley is being challenged by George Marlette and Judy Volungis.

Hampered by a severe cold, Conley quickly reviewed his past term of office. He noted he has never been absent from one committee or sub committee meeting since his term began. He insisted that despite Proposition 2 1/2, the Cohasset school system continues to graduate "intelligent, well-rounded men and women capable of entering college or joining the work force."

In answer to a question, Conley said he would not use scare tactics to pressure voters into approving the School Committee's proposed budget. If it is not approved, the board would sit down, listen to administrators, teachers, and residents, and then decide what, if any, cuts must be made.

Marlette initiated his comments by citing a recent newspaper photograph depicting the collapse of the Deer Hill roof. He labeled the reason for the continued deterioration of the roofs a "lack of long range planning."

When asked when computer education should begin in the schools, Marlette answered that students should be introduced to the principles of computer technology in kindergarten, by realizing the proper role of computers. If the school committee's budget does not pass town meeting vote, Marlette said he would consider alternative sources of funding programs such as athletics, with corporate assistance.

Volungis, who holds master's degree in education, said she would seek a larger share of the town's budget

Pratt library report

By David Chittin
Library Board of Trustees Chairman

The year 1983 once again saw our library in its long-accustomed role as a major cultural, recreational and social resource of the Town. In many ways, the various collections and the associated services enriched the quality of life among Cohasset people.

These benefits are possible because of the willing support of taxpayers and Town governmental entities. Beyond the basic tax support, however, are the decisive and enthusiastic contributions of a number of people who make the Library the valuable and enjoyable resource that it is:

The paid Staff, full-time and part-time, continues to render helpful and efficient service in ways that evoke repeated praise.

The Friends of the Library contribute many hours of highly effective volunteer time without which the Library could not function. In addition, the Friends raise money and spend it generously on Library needs not covered by the Town budget.

Many other citizens of the Town make generous money gifts as well as donations of books, magazines, pictures, etc.

All of these efforts and examples of generosity add up to crucial support for the Town's library.

The minutes of the Trustee meetings, held each month, describe the activities and the concerns of the Board over the past year. A sampling of such matters includes:

The death this year of Evelyn Wood, long-time and revered Staff Librarian, brought an outpouring of generous gifts were received on behalf of others throughout the year.

A concern that wage treatment be equitable among all Town employees, whether unionized or not. Such equity includes parity of benefits on a pro rata basis for our part-time employees.

Taking full advantage of the potentialities of the new cable television community programming opportunity.

The Nantasket Library closed its doors this year. While not a part of our library, it is sad to see an old friend pass on.

The concern that the Library building be properly maintained led to an inspection in detail by Trustees which will be evaluated by contractors to help in determining necessary repairs, if any.

On an editorial note, there still seems to be room for consideration by the Trustees of key issues and establishment of priorities. As in the business and educational worlds, there is always the need for long-range planning which will better harness the professionism of the Library staff to the regionalization, mechanization and upgrading opportunities of tomorrow.

How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two- and three-bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free St., one mile to our entrance. Call 740-1500.

for the schools if it is necessary; stress the importance of communication between schools and the community; improve teacher motivation and respect for the instructors by parents; and provide leadership for the School Committee to pursue worthy goals. She noted that as a school committee member, she would wait to see actual class sizes, before deciding where any budget cuts would have to be made.

Sewer Commission

Ted Guild was the next candidate to present his opinions to the voters. He is seeking re-election to a three-year term on the Sewer Commission. Guild is unopposed.

Explaining the interim sewer report by Ward Engineering is scheduled April ll, Guild said copies will be available to the public at the Pratt Library, and at 43 Elm Street. Among the alternatives anticipated from the report, Guild said, were a plan to sewer an additional area of town, including the Veteran's area, Hillside Road, part of Summer Street, Smith Place and part of Cushing Avenue, and transferring the sewage to the Hull waste water treatment plant. A second alternative might be to rehabilitate, modernize and expand the capacity of the present waste water plant without invading wetlands. A final choice may be to rehabilitate, and modernize the present plant without expanding its capacity, leaving many on-site systems which the commission feels should be sewered, Guild said.

Selectmen

Three candidates are seeking two, three-year positions for selectmen.

Incumbent John DeBassio, former Cohasset Police Chief, said his experience as an administrator in a variety of police departments, and civic involvement in many communities is an asset to this town. He noted he is "comfortable with the decisions I have made in the past year, and I anticipate making progress and improving the quality of services to all residents."

Doris Golden, former six-year member of the School Committee, challenged the present selectmen's recommendation to hire an outside consultant to help solve personnel problems within the fire department. As selectman, she would personnally meet with the chief and firefighters to solve the problems there, Golden said.

Selectmen chairman Mary Jane McArthur emphasized her 20-year involvement in various town committees and boards. Among the most critical issues facing the town now are the resolution of the sewer problem, solving the overcrowded conditions at Town Hall, meeting housing requirements for our public works department, and meeting requirements for adequate housing for all Cohasset citizens. She stressed a need for continued and improved communication between selectmen, other town boards, and Cohasset residents.

Water Commission

Chemical Engineer Jeff Bettinger is a candidate for a three-year term on the Water Commission. He and Arne Gjesteby are challenging incumbent Commissioner William Montouri.

Bettinger supports publishing the names of those residents who have not paid their water bills. He said he was committed to protecting the town's watershed supply and the cleaning and replacement of water mains to maintain adequate fire protection and water supply thoughout the town.

Gjesteby, noting his longtime experience as a Boston businessman, unlike his two opponents who are engineers, quipped, "If you want someone with a business background, you have no choice but to vote for me."

As a commissioner he would investigate the operation of the department in a more cost-effective manner, work to improve the water quality and the distribtuion plant and to protect the water supply from pollution.

Montouri said as the head of a million dollar department which employs 45 full-time people he is a 'an experienced businessman." The top priority, she stated, is to re-meter the town, adding that by the year 2000, "the current rate structure will allow the department to be well in the black."

Proposed increases in the water rate will allow improvements to be made in the town-wide system and supply, he said.

He also mentioned this year the commission has shut off delinquent billpayers, more effective, he said than publishing their names in a local newspaper.

Sheila Evans Jr. and Doris McNulty are vying for three, three-year positions as Library Trustee. Candidate Cornelia Foell did not attend.

Evans stressed her participation as a trustee in providing an attractive, cheerful library. More than 200 people come daily to the Paul Pratt Library, she said.

John McNabb, Jr., reiterated his interest in maintaining a quality library. He emphasized his role as a trustee in convincing the town of the importance of the library within the town budget.

McNulty said she agreed with incumbent Evans that the Pratt Library retains a quality reputation, despite budget restrictions. She noted that the per capita use of the Cohasset facility is twice the state average.

Frances Marks, who is unopposed in the Town Clerk election, attended the program. Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield also made a brief presentation.

Last Candidate's Corner

This is the last week Candidates Corner will be published in order to protect the candidates from unsubstantiated charges made by another candidate before the Saturday, April 14 election.

Cohasset Jewelers specializes in repairs

Cohasset's family-owned and operated jewelry store has expanded to offer on-premises jewelry repair.

Cohasset Jewelers, owned by Jerry and Netta Cirone of Hingham, has offered jewelry repair service for the past two months.

Don Cirone, Netta and Jerry's son, recently completed two years of study in jewelry repair at the Jewelry Institute, Boston.

Jerry Cirone has owned Cohasset Jewelers since July of 1982. Prior to that, he worked for 28 years in the Jewelers Building in Boston.

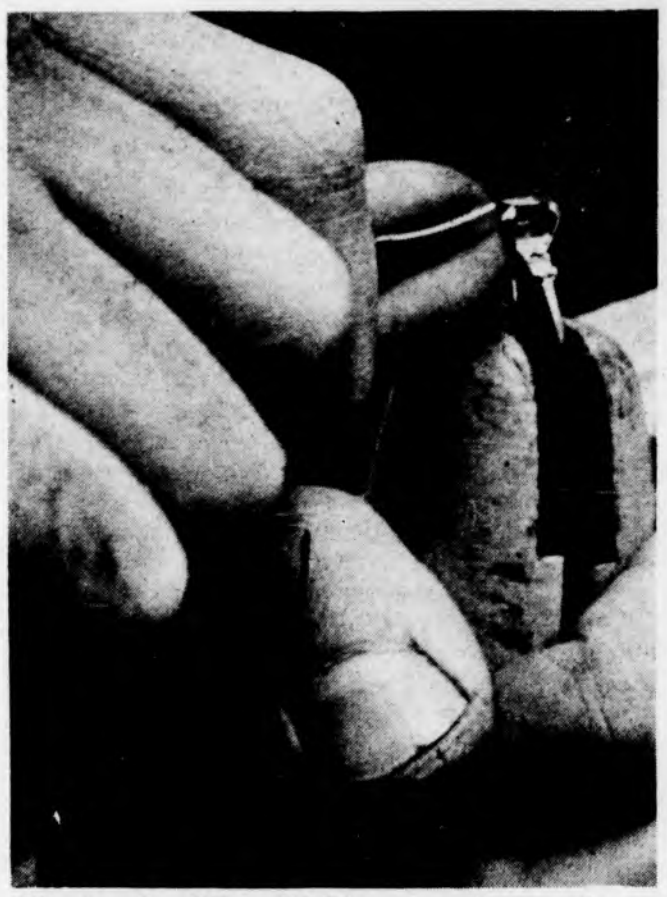
Cohasset Jewelers has been located next to Stop 'n Shop in Cohasset for over 13 years.

With the addition of the workshop at the rear of the store, Cohasset Jewelers can repair a piece of jewelry in minutes or hours.

Before opening the repair shop, the Cirones brought pieces of jewelry to Boston for repair and service, said Mark Cirone, another son.

Some repair prices will decline because the store is doing its own work, Mark said. "There is not a third party any more."

With the addition of this added service, a ring can be enlarged or reduced in a matter of minutes, Don said.



"It represents us when it leaves the store," Jerry said. "We feel we want to have better control on the jewelry."

Cohasset Jewelers will continue to have diamonds set by a diamond setter.

A diamond setter studies five years before he starts setting diamonds, Don said. "When you send it to a diamond setter, all he does is set diamonds."

Don is involved in restoring a gold bracelet which he calls an unusual job. "This is a job no jeweler in Boston wanted to do."

The Cirones said they each check a piece of jewelry before it's put in the customer's hands.

The hands of Donald Cirone work on a ring at Cohasset Jewelers.

Spring cleaning underway

With the spring cleaning season underway, Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries must remind the public not to leave any merchandise at its attended donation trailers after 5 p.m. or on Sundays.

Cohasset and Scituate residents may donate only Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., at Goodwill's attended donation trailer in Quincy, at Star Market, 130 Granite Street.

When the trailer is open, the attendant will give you a tax receipt for any donations. All donations are tax deductible: housewares, clothing in good condition (not stained or torn), shoes, toys and home furnishings Handicapped people at Goodwill process all the goods for sale at Morgie's Goodwill stores.

Luncheon

The second annual luncheon to honor Plymouth area secretaries is scheduled for noon Wednesday, April 25, at the Inn for All Seasons.

There will be a presentation by Norma Fennochetti of Marshfield, Director of Scheduling for Governor Dukakis. Fennochetti said, "Your job can be just as significant as you choose to make it."

The cost of the luncheon is $10 per person. Reservations which will be on a first-come, first serve basis, can be made by calling the Chamber office 746-3377.

Girls Tennis

The Girls Tennis team will start the season off with a new coach. Steve McDonough will head last years league champions and state competitors.

Steve is a recent graduate of Scituate High School and a coach at the Mill Pond tennis club.

For his first season at Cohasset coach McDonough is looking forward to a great year. He feels that with the experience and the strength of this years team they should plan to attend the State tournament again.

Boys Tennis

This years Boys Tennis Team have very high expectations. According to their coach, they will be playing in the finals of States if all goes well.

Yet, Miss Jillson, the coach of the boys, believes that this years team is stronger than last years squad. She feels that the drastic change in attitude is the key to victory. This year everyone has a positive attitude and she is looking forward to a great year.

Thursday, the Skippers will compete against Duxbury, a tough competitor.

This game, coach Jillson said should be a good indication of how her relatively young team should do this year.

With any luck, they plan to avenge last years shutout.

This years players are: cocaptains John Calocusis and Brian Ramsy, Chris Neelon, Curtis Erileson, David Lord, Rich Redick, Alex Choi, Richard Tinory, David Leptich, Derik Lacks, Steve Myers, Greg Wallingford, and Jason Marsak.

Girls Softball

The Cohasset Girls Softball team plan on a .500 or better record this year.

"At this point I'm optimistic," remarked Coach Fallon, "but its too early to tell how far we can go." "Our pitching and hitting has been fairly well, but we still need more improvement on defense."

This years team consists of Janet DiGirolamo, Carla Lucas, Kim Whittet, Tara Standford, Karlin Isle, Lisa Shumaker, Ann O'Leary, Sue Filey, Flo Standford, Katie Anderson, Lilly Carbone, Noelle Conant, Jill Nardrow, and Kerry O'Brien.

The Skippers were due to play their first game Wednesday against Mansfield at 3 p.m.

Boys and Girls Track

After a record of 4-5 last year, this years track coaches hope for a .500 season or better.

Coaches, John Anderson, Ron Emmons, and Miss Brady will supervise over 80 kids who divide up between the five field events and the nine running events.

"This year our strength lies in our returning players," said Coach Anderson.

"These players are: David Rice, John Rattenbury, Rich McCarthy, Perry Harris, Mike Desantis, John Reidy, Mark Murphy, and David and Bobby Schulze."

"In addition to our upperclassmen there are about 40 kids who are junior high," said Coach Anderson. "Which is quite an enrollment increase."

For the girls track standouts there is Sara Seavey, Trina Moore, Cathleen Buckley, Katie Duffy, Janet Bagley, Jackie Plant, Peggy Maynard, Maura Corkery, Julie Hoogevene, Rachel Sargent, Kaitin Stanton, Tri McArthur, Cathy Branigan, and Therese Lennon.

Their next match will be Thursday April 5 against Abington.

Semi-pro baseball league

The town of Norwell will have a team in the semi-pro Cranberry Baseball League this summer. The Mariners, who hope to obtain an affiliation to the Seattle Mariners, will be sponsored by Village Classics of Norwell. The team will be coached by Joe Connolly of Norwell. Games will be played at Norwell High School.

Although the season does not begin until May 27, tryouts for the team will begin in two weeks. Any player interested should write to: Joe Connolly, 170 Grove St., Norwell, 02061, or call Joe at 659-7747 after 6 p.m.

Swim meet

On March 24, The Swogjan Swim team swam a meet against Taunton Boys Club. The Swogjan Swim team won all but one of the events, final score was 196 to 42.

Twenty-nine swimmers attended from the Swogjan Swim team — fifteen of them broke their own times in various events. Four of the fifteen broke two sets of their own times*.

Appeals Board decisions issued

The appeals board recently approved a variance request for two stored trailers but denied a request for a variance to locate a foundation 19 feet, seven inches from a side yard line.

TRAILERS

The applicant was Robert Giarino of Autohaus, 742 Chief Justice Cushing Way.

Giarino said he wants to continue to use two trailers on his property for the purpose of storing parts. He presentd plans showing the location of these trailers and said that they had been there without permits for over 10 years.

He wants to continue to use them as he was short of space at his present location, the topography and location of the water course to the rear of his property not allowing for expansion.

He added he had purchased property across the highway and would be expanding his business in the future.

The board noted the Board of Health wrote expressing no objection to the variance and the Planning Board recommended denial of the application.

The board noted the zoning bylaws provide the temporary use of trailers as determined by the Board of Appeals.

It is further noted the size of the property is depriving the applicant of uses required of an automobile sales and service business.

In a unanimous vote, the board decided to approve the application and allow the two trailers to remain for a period of one year from the filing date of this decision.

Board members approving the project were Myrna Putziger, chairman and Barbara Power and Terence Farrell.

FOUNDATION

The applicants are Reese H. Davis III and Cathy S. Davis of 86 Ledgewood Drive.

The applicants requested a variance from the applicable provisions of Section 5 of the Cohassset Bylaw to permit them to locate a foundation 19 feet 7 inches from a point on the side yard line.

The premises are situated in a Residence R-B district, and the applicable provision of Section 5.3 of the Bylaw require, among other things, a 20 foot side yard.

John McNabb, attorney for the applicants, presented their appeal, adding the building has exitsted about 10 years, and in requesting the variance he wished to perfect the record as an aid in the conveyance process. Mr. McNabb presented no evidence in response to the requirements of Section 12.1 of the Cohasset Zoning By-Law.

The board unanimously denied the application and noted that according to state law, a structure, used in accordance with the terms of the original building permit, is protected from the proceedings of a zoning violation after six years.

Board members denying the application were: Myrna Putziger, chairman; John F. Rousseau Jr.; Terrrence J. Farrell and Barbara M. Power.

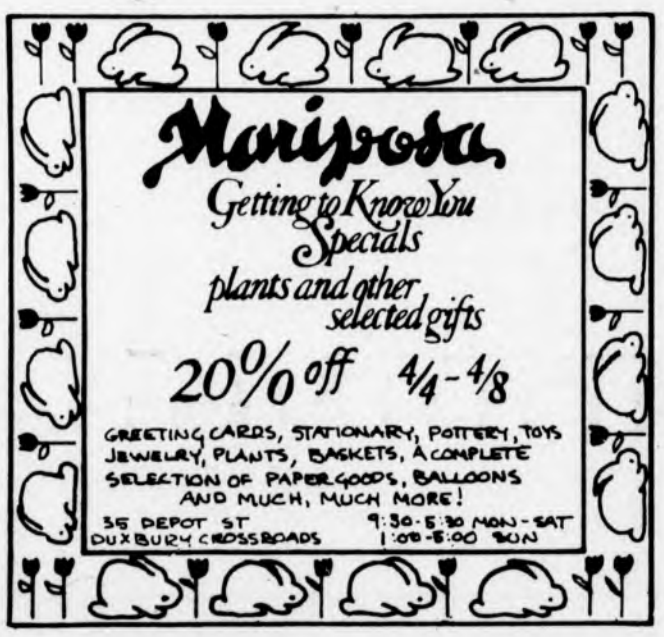
Cohasset resident featured

Boston area writer and creative consultant Steve Kravette is featured in the April issue of Sylvia Porter's "Personal Finance Magazine" in the article "Surefire Strategies for Getting a Raise."

Cohasset-based Kravette's fourth book, "Get a Raise in 60 Days," prompted the interview which surveys ten leading career development specialists.

A former Copy Supervisor with K & E, Creative Director with Marvin & Leonard and New England advertising award-winner, Mr. Kravette has an active list of free lance accounts.

In between advertising projects, he's written books that include "Complete Relaxation," "Complete Meditation," "Get a Job in 60 Seconds," and "Get a Raise in 60 Days" and is currently working on two new books. His newly formed LifeWorks Seminar Group will be conducting seminars on the job market, peak performance productivity and issues on aging in the workplace.



"Hints don't produce raises. Neither do jokes. Neither does wanting a raise, needing a raise, or deserving a raise," Steve insists in his book, "Get a Raise in 60 Days."

What does produce raises is the subject of "Surefire Strategies for Getting a Raise" in the April issue of Sylvia Porter's Personal Finance Magazine.

Kravette is one of 10 top career development specialists and negotiation experts surveyed in the article.

"Cohasset has always responded generously to the American Cancer Society's program," Mr. Chittim says, "but this year we are trying to make this the most extensive coverage in some time. It has the dual purpose of making sure that every household has information about cancer--risks, early detection, treatment and Cancer Society services--as well as to ask for the donation to continue and expand the work of the Society. So many families have been touched by cancer that we know there will be a welcome to the crusaders."

Serving as precinct chairman directing the work of area captains will be Robert J. Ciciotte of Linden Drive in precinct 1 and Osborne F. Ingram of Beechwood Street in precinct 2.

Each will have eight area captains distributing kits to crusaders and monitoring the return of these kits to the Cushing Plaza Office of the Rockland Trust Company.

Historical deed may change Cox estate

With just days to go before Saturday's annual Town Meeting, a blockbuster of a story has hit Cohasset.

Historians, cleaning out a cellar, found portions of a parchment deed which says McDonald's Restaurant may have ownership to the Cox Estate.

This could mean the restaurant could build the world's largest drive-through restaurant with an option of building a putting green on the front lawn.

The deed says descendants of Ray Kroc, founder of McDonald's, have an easement to the Cox Estate and can use portions of the land for commercial purposes.

Town officials are stunned to say the least.

Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur called an emergency meeting at midnight and the Planning Board was due to call another meeting at 7 a.m.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson was summoned at 1 a.m. and wearing dungarees, sneakers and a sweatshirt marched into Town Hall at 1 a.m. and said, "Here we go again. Get ready for another expensive, long-winded lawsuit. Better call a Special Town Meeting."

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza put the issue on the table before selectmen.

"We could take the estate by eminent domain and keep our rights for access to put up a parking lot," said Lanza.

Maybe we could force Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulous to not give McDonald's a health permit, he added.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested a giant rally to stop McDonald's, beginning at the Town Common and then continuing down to the Cox Estate.

"I just can't bear the thought of a commercial saying, "Where's the Beef" coming from the kitchen of the Cox Estate," said Rocky.

"Wrong commercial," whispered Selectman Cliff Mitman.

Do you believe this is happening? A rally around the Common will be planned to protest this commercial move.

"Maybe Mary Jeanette can do something at the State House, said Selectman Frank England. Maybe she can talk to Gov. Mike Dukakis, he said.

To avoid personalities, selectmen then adjourned to an executive session meeting and remained in that session till 7 a.m. when they were awakened by the Planning Board.

Meanwhile, residents stormed The Log 'N Line the next morning, wanting to know how such a thing could happen here.

Maybe we should search all the cellars to find out what other skeletons in the closet can be found, a resident said.

"Let's go back to a three-member board of selectmen. Something like this would have never happened," said another.

McDonald's officials said they don't want to disrupt the town and would be willing to negotiate a financial compromise.

It seems likely a Special Town Meeting, asking for another $90,000 in legal fees, at least for starters, is a strong possibility.

Boy George applies for a beach sticker

It's Wednesday night.

Another night at the Cohasset selectmen's meeting.

There are no audience members, except for a dozen attorneys whose numerous clients are collectively suing the town for various offences.

The reporters seated near the front of the Town Hall auditorium yawn in unison.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza rushes in, seats himself beside the town officials, and begins his weekly attempts to adjust the sound system, the tape recorder, 1351 pages of mimeographed notes, and his tie.

"Well, looks like there's nothing on the agenda tonight - except for six hours of executive session to discuss pending litigation, contracts, personality of town employees, grievances, and arbitration," he tells the town officials. "Looks like Rich Henderson hit the paydirt this week. The town now owes him about $65,000 for legal services rendered the past two nights."

"Now you know why I'm going to law school." he mumbled, twisting his mustache.

The two reporters stir slowly, and begin to depart just as recreation director Jack Worley rushes in. A mad crowd of citizens crowd behind him, arms flailing, screams emanating from their open mouths.

"Oh, do we have a problem," he whines to selectmen.

"What's Dooley done now?" Mary Jane McArthur moans, hiding her face into her folded arms.

"A problem? In Cohasset? Well, that's a switch," selectman John DeBassio answers. "We so seldom have any dilemmas in this quaint country hamlet. How pleasantly refreshing. Okay everyone, lets look industrious and really tackle this one."

"As you know," Worley begins, "it's beach sticker time."

The two reporters moan in disbelief - yet another year has passed since selectmen discussed beach sticker rules and regulations at 44 consecutive sessions.

"Well, everything was going swell this year," Worley continues, while several chuckles are heard from the audience. "But it seems we have a new resident in our fair town and he insists he and his companion be allowed two beach stickers for the one residence."

Just then, the masses part, and in walks Cohasset's newest citizen. A peculiar sight - an oddly unattractive woman in knarled braids, a large staw hat, and flowing robes.

"Hello dear officials, I suppose it is I who is being referred to. The name is Boy George," he-she states in a musky-toned voice.

"Love your town dears. Love that beach. Not great for my sensitive skin, but ooooh, that salty ocean water is soooooo invigorating," it continues.

"All I'm asking for is two little stickers for me and my friend. We share the lovliest antique cape along the village. You know the one, we've just vinyl-sided it a lovely shade of mauve."

"How could you do such a thing to a poor, innocent antique?" Mary Jane demands, striking the gavel repeatedly into the wood table.

"Mary Jane, that's not the issue at hand here," Cliff Mitman clarifies. "What we have to decide, once and for all, is whether two unrelated persons sharing a residence can be allowed two stickers. Where's Henderson when we need him?"

At just that moment, Town Counsel literally flies into the auditorium, rips off his flowing red cape, and asks, "Somebody call for the local barrister?"

"Yeah, Rich, based on legal precedent, how many beach stickers may be issued to non-related persons residing in the same household?" Frank England asks. "And for God sake, Rich, stash that stupid cape."

Stuffing the cloak inside his briefcase, he answers, "How the hell should I know. I'll file the papers in a month. And I'll bill you in the morning," Henderson yells as he exits, up, up and away.

"In regards to the way I see this situation pertaining to your particular circumstance in light of the present testimony as best I can ascertain in the manner in which this has been presented, I see no alternative but to make a decision no matter what issue is before us at this moment in time as I perceive this matter at hand," selectman Rocky Laugelle stipulates.

"Sounds good to me, Rocky," selectmen agree. And with that, they vote to allow Boy George and friend two official beach stickers.

"See you at Sandy Beach," B.G. interjects, blowing kisses to the stunned audience. "Just wait until you see the swimsuit I picked up at a Johnny Appleseed's sale. I tell you, Cohasset is my kind of town."

Cohasset never belonged to Hingham

Newsflash — Cohasset — April 1, 1984

Subject: Astounding find unearthed changes local history!

By D. Wadsworth, Sometimes Guardian of Cohasset's history.

Local historians have long believed that Cohasset originally was part of our next door town of Hingham and became a separate town in 1770 when set off from the parent town by Act of the Great & General Court of Massachusetts.

Recently, however, local historian and descendant of Cohasset's first settlers Mr. Hezekian Orcutt Litchfield Tower Hobart Bates Stutson, while browsing around at the Cedar Street landfill, found documentary evidence disproving the convensional wisdom of the Town's best historical minds.

After a recent engineering study at the dump, old "Uncle 'Kiah" Stutson unearthed number of ancient stone slabs with a mysterious language engraved upon their faces.

The language, now deciphered, proves conclusively that Cohasset never belonged to Hingham, never was even part of Massachusetts, and actually is one of the ancient kingdoms of Middle Earth.

When "Uncle 'Kiah" Stutson first showed his discovery to local history experts, he was rebuffed with grumblings of "Makes No Sense" and "Impossible to read" and finally "Best to throw them back, the dump's where they belong".

Not one to give up that easily, "Uncle 'Kiah" packed his stone slabs onto his mini-bike and headed for the Great Museum in Boston.

There, a team of specialists working with the eminent Dr. D. Dustybones succeeded in translating the ancient language. "Remarkable", "Earth shattering" commented the learned scientists. For here, in part, is the message of the stones: "I, Frodwen The Mighty King of Middle Earth, do hereby proclaim that the people of Fair Cohasset shall be My Loyal Subjects for as long as the sun rises and sets upon this glorious land".

The date of this amazing proclamation, Dear Readers, is just what you might expect. Translated from the ancient script, it reads "April the first in the 900th year of the Kingdom of Middle Earth."

Needless to say, local historians are dumbfounded by the discovery, and one could be heard to gasp, "We've been fooled! The world's just been turned upside down!"

At the Town Hall, silence is the order of the day, but one town official was heard speaking guardedly into his telephone, "Get me the Town Counsel, quick!"

Up at the Cedar Street landfill, kindly old "Uncle 'Kiah" just smiles and says, "Its jist like I always thought, I knew there was somethin' funny 'bout all them history books."

But what, my friends, could you really expect to read on April Fools' Day?

(This alternative view of Cohasset's history was NOT brought to you by your local Historical Society.)

Eddie to stay

Boston Celtics General Manager Red Auerbach said he would outbid Cohasset High School Principal Dick Streeter and School Supt. Eugene Crowell in an effort to sign Ed Minelli as a special scout for the upcoming NBA playoffs. Auerbach, acknowledging Minelli is one of the best when it comes to teaching fundamentals, said Minelli would help scout the Philadelphia '76ers and will be assigned to come up with a defense to stop Moses Malone. But Streeter and Crowell maintained Minelli is CHS property and will remain there forever. "We want them Cruisers," said Streeter.

Gold fever squashed

Water Commissioner Peter Pratt is working with Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos to prevent rumors that gold and plutonium have been found near Scituate Hills. "The rumor that there's gold in them hills is absolutely false," said Pratt. If that was true, he said, we better raise the water rates. Sewer Commission Chairman Charley DeSantis breathed a sigh of relief as nightmares of the Oklahoma Land Rush danced into his mind after he talked to Pratt.

"Where is Henry Kissinger?

President Ronald Reagan, after a week's stay at Cohasset By the Sea, said he would nominate Fire Chief Martin "Digger" Dooley and Union leader Billy Protulis to a special peace envoy to find a moment's peace in Lebanon. Reagan said, not once did he read of hostility in the media regarding the Fire Dept. and figured if Dooley and the union could find peace on Elm Street, certainly Lebanon could use their skills.

Martha is boss!

And finally, finally, finally, Martha Gjesteby, with no debate, was elected School Committee chairman in a unanimous vote. In her acceptance speech, Martha said there would be no more closed door meetings, every meeting must be publicized two weeks in advance, and School Supt. Eugene Crowell must submit a minimum of two research reports per week to her. And if he doesn't, "well, that's the way the cookie crumbles."

In a related matter, School Committee member Jack Langmaid said he might say something praiseworthy about the Mariner if he finds something worth reading about in that paper.

'People are talking'

Cohasset has many budding television stars. Television scouts have investigated many Cohasset personalities and want them as summertime replacements. For example: Karen Bartow will replace WBZ-TV entertainment reporter Joyce Kulhawik. Karen was seen practicing her lines of "Live from the Deer Hill roof" or "Live from Ron Emmon's theater class." She was also seen trying to fit into a top hat.

Tanna Kasperowicz has been selected to replace Nancy Merrill on "People Are Talking." Kasperowicz recently announced her first guest will be Sgt. Dickie Barrows who promised Tanna he would say something on the record. And if he didn't he'd bring Manny Salvador as his sidekick.

Wise Selectman Frank England will host "The People's Court" as the summer replacement for Judge Joseph Wapner.

PSO President Sue MacNamara has been notified by Jerry Lewis she will head the Massachusetts Drive for "Jerry's Kids" because of her PSO Telethon

Trustees vote to close library

By Chasy Hardier

After a heated, two-hour debate this week, the town board of library trustees voted to close the library all day, April 1.

The unexpected action followed a discussion of the experience in Farmington, Connecticut, where the public library and the schools led a campaign to get people to stop watching television. Library loans doubled in the weeks following.

Cohasset library officials were considering a similar effort in Cohasset, when information was presented that recent research suggests that reading library books makes people foolish.

The research was sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education. President Reagan, based on this research, has recommended cuts in federal aid to libraries.

On a close 5 to 4 vote, the Cohasset board voted to close the library one day, in order to reduce the hazard of exposure to library materials, until further research can be done.

Residents who have felt foolish after using library materials are urged to describe their experiences in writing to trustees.

Where's the gossip?

☐ Mary Jane McArthur was contacted by the Dallas Cowboy Cheerleaders last week. It seems that they saw her gallant efforts during the donkey basketball game, and couldn't do without her! She was asked to bring the shovel with her...

☐ The snow has finally gone away, Sandy Beach has no seaweed and is loaded with sun-worshippers. Several people were spotted swimming in the 70 degree water.

☐ At the last school committee meeting, there was complete harmony, everyone agreed with Martha Gjesteby.

☐ Ed Minnelli refused a spot on the cover of Sports Illustrated recently. His team is too good to have to stand the possibility of the "Jinx" that goes along with the honor.

☐ The town meeting got its quorum long before the opening time scheduled, and Bruce Edmonds didn't get up to speak on an issue once!

☐ The executive board at the George M. Mealey Post voted that no person would be allowed to enter the establishment without his or her spouse.

☐ Two local gals have opened their own clothing shop. The name of the shop is "Cheech and Chong's", and specializes in clothing. The gals have a new outfit for each day, and they have people working for them.

☐ Tim Marsac awoke this morning and had shrunk during the night! At 4 feet tall, he now knows how hard it is for his basketball team to make those baskets!

☐ Ron Emmons "got the call" and is headed for Broadway, where he will direct a new play.

☐ Jim Franey and John Anderson were surprised when their teams were able to start their season on time. And Joe Bouchard got word that the Red Sox were sending down two pitchers for his team.

☐ Richard Yokum received a new van, complete with carpeted cages for all of the dogs that he had to impound. And, Richard can sit all alone in the front seat, no canine pals next to him.

☐ The parking tickets that were handed out last Sunday while worshippers were in church weren't real...April Fools!

☐ Jackie Wirth purchased a horse and is a member of the Cohasset Riding Club.

☐ Harold Litchfield's wife won so much money on "Wheel of Fortune" they have retired and Harold welcomes a snowstorm...

☐ Skinny Laugelle didn't have any jokes to tell all of last week!

☐ An elevator was installed in the Town Hall this week, and all of the employees have already gained two pounds as they don't have to use the steep stairs any more.

☐ A list of persons has been published in the town, stating who is related to who, thus everyone knows why they can or can't talk about, and with whom.

☐ Lester Hiltz won Megabucks, and vowed to share it with all.

☐ Ron Goodwin got the contract to silk-screen all of the Tee shirts for the winning presidential candidate.

☐ Ed Goff won the bid and is now putting storm windows and doors on the former Cox estate. He guaranteed them it would lower their gas bill.

☐ Jake Powers got even with Jack Karle after recent prank...

☐ Bob Ferreira and Pat McCarthy's horses tied for second place last week at Suffolk Downs.

Masque of Angels April 8

By Judy Gilman

There will be cherubim and seraphim lifting their voices to the rafters, dancers frolicking and a story of love set right after some false starts when Dominick Argento's Masque of Angels comes to St. Luke's Church, Scituate, this Sunday, April 8.

It's an all-South Shore cast, with the renowned Unicorn Singers providing the choral music, three Virtue Dancers (Joan Kenney, Bonnie McArthur and Lorri Valentine) providing visual hijinks, and the Virtue Musicians (whose instruments include oboes, trumpets, violas, a bassoon, trombone, cello, and, of course, an angelic harp) together providing the spectacle known as the masque, a favorite of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, which combined all the performing arts into a single presentation.

Angels, according to this 1966 work, have a difficult time trying to guide mortals in the proper decisions in life. This particular band is, in fact, missing some of its dancers. The others tried to dance on the head of a pin and fell off, leading to injury and absence.

Who would think we use our feet to touch? That's one of the facts the children in the Early Special Needs Class are learning during their unit on the Fine Senses. Walking through sand and foot painting are just a few of the activities they have experienced.

PSO supports school budget

The Executive Board of the Cohasset Parent School Organization voted unanimously to support the full funding of the School Committee's budget request for 1984-85. The PSO Executive Board asks for your support and your affirmative vote on the school budget, Article IV, at the town meeting April 7. For your further information, please review: school budget for FY 1984-85; copies available at the public library; Superintendent Crowell's office; or from your School Committee members.

Painting exhibits

Two new exhibits of paintings are on display outside of the Jr.-Sr. High School art rooms. The high school display concerns itself with paintings done from memory of someplace they have seen early in childhood. The junior high displays are colorful depictions of imaginative scenes; under the sea, space, travel, flowers, etc.

Three and four year old screening

The Massachusetts Special Education Law (Chapter 766) provides for the screening of three and four year old children whose parents feel may have a special need which might interfere with their future educational progress.

The screening process includes a parent interview as well as a health, vision, hearing, motor and language screening.

Parents who feel that their child might have such a special need should call Stephen E. Hart, Assistant to the Superintendent, at 383-6104.

Energy grants

New England Telephone is offering grants of up to $1,000 to help small, non-profit social or cultural organizations conserve energy and save money.

Public Relations Manager Carolyn McKeon said, "This marks the sixth consecutive year that New England Telephone will offer the grants.

"The grant program was developed during the 'energy crunch,' when the high price of heating fuel created financial hardships for many non-profit agencies. The program has been so successful that we've continued it each year since," said McKeon.

At the SS Art Center

Landscape, architecture, photography

As the snow melts, the temperature rises and the days grow longer, a person's thoughts begin to turn to outdoor landscaping and designing for an exterior environment.

Landscape architect, Mary Smith, will once again teach a home landscape design course for the Art Center.

The course begins Wednesday, April 11 and goes from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. Advanced registration is required.

Participants will learn to develop appropriate solutions to three assigned landscape design projects chosen to help students deal with landscaped design on a residential scale. Simple drafting techniques will be explained.

For further information on this course or any course on the spring schedule, call the Center, 383-9548.

Photography

Ever try to take a picture of a wildflower or a sailboat regatta or a whale in the middle of a sea. The South Shore Art Center's photography classes teach students to use their camera in clever creative ways.

Courses in photography, both picture taking and photo developing, begin the week of April 9 at the Center in Cohasset. Advanced registration is required for these and all classes at the Center.

Paul Fortin's course for the beginning photographer in both color and black and white will meet on Monday's beginning April 9 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The course covers all the basics including F stops, shutter speeds, films, filters, composition, lighting and subject matter. Emphasis is on recognizing the elements of good photography and applying it to ones own work.

Fortin's intermediate and advanced level photography meets Wednesdays, beginning April 11 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Students will explore various subjects in this course including portrait, people and landscape. The instructor requests that students bring previous work to the first class.

Darkroom developing and printing will be taught by John Goldie in both his beginning and intermediate darkroom courses. Both courses begin Thursday, April 12 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. and will continue at arranged times convenient to the classes.

The beginning courses explores the aesthetics of photography and the techniques of developing and printing. The intermediate course combines a demonstration, lecture, critique approach to work with students toward completion of a specific project. Students must have basic darkroom knowledge. Admittance is based on portfolio review.

Learn how to take your camera off automatic and to enjoy the creativity of photography. For further information on these classes, the complete spring schedule or memberships, call the Center, 383-9548.

Artists very frequently admire a particular quality in a work of art by one of the Great Masters--Rembrandt, Renoir, Rubens, Van Gogh, Gauguin, etc.

A new course offering on the South Shore Art Center's spring schedule will encourage artists to identify and isolate those qualities they admire in the Masters and attempt to incorporate those qualities into their own work. Jim Ann Howard's "Art from Art"--translating a Master's quality to your own work--begins Wednesday, April 11 from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. at the Center, 103 Ripley Rd., Cohasset. Advanced registration is required.

Howard will encourage her students to work on incorporating styles they admire into their own works of art. She believes that many of the qualities that are in great paintings are within the reach of many artists.

Students may choose either traditional or modern Masters and then identify within these works what qualities they particularly admire. The structure of the course is set up for advanced artists and they may work in any media depending on individual tastes.

Also new to the spring schedule is Albert Abany's Print Making without a Press--an opportunity for students to learn various techniques for making prints without the help of a press. The Course begins Monday, April 16, from 3:30 to 6 p.m.

Abany will start with linoleum block printing which will give the students immediate results and progress to other relief processes such as rubbings and monoprints. He will introduce color into the printing process which he believes will add an interesting dimension to the prints.

Students will also experiment with series printing. He will demonstrate the process for doing a small limited edition of probably five prints.

Both Howard and Abany bring an extensive art background to the Center. Abany received his B.S. in education from the Boston Museum School and has done graduate study at Massachusetts College of Art and Boston University. He has taught at the Art Institute; Brockton, Fitchburg and Danforth Museums; Quincy Junior College and Boston Center for Adult Education.

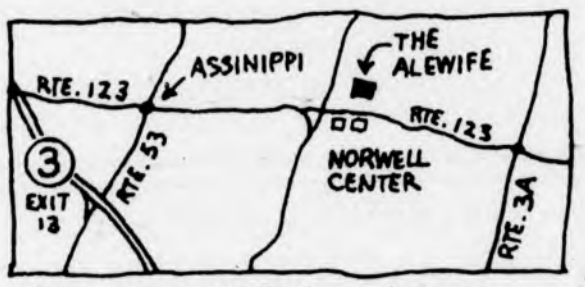
Howard's extensive art background will prove vital to working with the individuals in her class. She is affiliated with Helen Shlien Gallery, Boston; Cove Gallery, Wellfleet, Ma.; South Shore Art Center; Artists for Survival, Boston; and Boston Visual Artists Union. She has participated in numerous one-person and group shows and has won many awards for her work.

The center's complete spring schedule offers a diversity of courses for all interests and levels of artistic ability. There are photography courses designed for all levels of photographic ability, painting courses for beginning, intermediate and advanced artists, various design courses depending on area of interest and special workshops.

Advanced registration is required for all Center courses and workshops. For further information on courses, exhibits and memberships, call 383-9548.

Watercolor Painting

Virginia Avery, a familiar face around the South Shore Art Center, will teach the spring session of Watercolor Paintings.



Designed for all levels of artistic ability, the course begins Wednesday, April 11 from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Center. Advanced registration is required.

Avery will work with her students on the various techniques of watercolor painting and include some experimentation with transparent methods of painting. The class will meet outdoors when the weather permits.

The Children's Department offers classes for all ages, workshops and vacation drop ins which allow an informal atmosphere for developing artist ability and exploring with the various art techniques. The next vacation drop in for children seven to 12 years old is planned for the April vacation, April 16-20.

Classes offered on the spring schedule included Children's Art Workshop, six to eight years old, taught by Serena Brundige, beginning Friday, April 13, from 3:30 to 5 p.m.; Children's Art Workshop for children nine to twelve years old, taught by Susan Rodgerson, beginning Wednesday, April 11, from 3:30 to 5 p.m.; and David Tandy's High School Workshop, Fundamentals for Young Adults, beginning Thursday, April 12, from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Village fair "Spring Day"

Carrying on a pattern set in recent years, the Cohasset Village Fair organization will hold a "Spring Day" Saturday, April 28 in the Unitarian Parish House from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

This advance effort of the five-church fund-raising event in December will again offer a Bargain Bazaar Flea Market as well as the sale of baked goods, plants and books.

Proceeds of the Spring Day will be used as "seed money" for the major effort in December.

Leadership of this year's Village Fair is being taken by the Greek Panagia Church, with Mrs. Jean Syrmopulos as general chairman.

In the unique ecumenical benefit, the Greek church will again be joined by workers from St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, St. Stephen's Episcopal, First Parish Unitarian and the Second Congregational churches.

Locating low income housing on that stretch of land would create "one of the most valuable low-income properties in the state," according to selectman John DeBassio.

Recreation Commission member James Gallagher also expressed his disapproval of the site, saying, "if we give away something at Government Island, we will give away something that belongs to the town."

Government Island Study Committee chairman Hamilton Tewksbury reaffirmed his opposition to the plan, stating that recreational uses for the property are being explored by his committee.

John Muncey, a Housing Authority member, agreed the Government Island land is valuable, and very likely, an expensive piece of real estate. "But let's face it," he argued, "there isn't a cheap place in town. The real estate values in this town are very high."

He continued, "it's a mystery to me why selectmen rejected this idea when they were in agreement with us last Monday night. I haven't talked with them yet, so I don't know why their opinions flipflopped two nights later."

According to Muncey, under Chapter 705 funding, which would be used for the leasing or purchase of the property and land, the building "would have been taken off the taxpayer's back. Nothing would have changed, except the Housing Authority would have controlled the property, not the selectmen."

He added that the only alternative plan proposed by the Housing Authority at this time is a four-room home on Marion Way off Route 3A which has been appraised at $75,000.

"We're going to have to do something," he said. "I don't know which way the Housing Authority is going to go, but we have to sit down and decide soon."

In a directive to the town last year, the state threatened to withhold grant funding if a proposal to provide low income, equal opportunity housing in Cohasset is not developed.

Correction

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce made two errors in its list of retail and commercial enterprises who are chamber members. The Bread Shop, 11 Elm Street, and not The Bread Basket and Coastal Country Properties should have been included on the list.

By Theresa Sullivan

This is the second in a multi-part series on the South Shore Collaborative. —Ed.

To the person unfamiliar with severely handicapped children, the people who work with the children in the Community Program at East School in Hingham seem to be incredibly dedicated, caring and knowledgeable.

Evidently professionals in the field feel the same way because the East School's Community Program, under the direction of Pat Linari, was selected as a national Model Demonstration Site because of its work with autistic children.

South Shore Collaborative Director Dr. Michael Savage said the East School program was chosen as a model site by the National Association of Parents for Autistic Children, the U.S. Dept. of Education, Special Education Office and the Mass. Dept. of Education, Special Education Office.

The Community Program is for children 3 to 22 years old from the eight South Shore collaborative towns and other towns who have children whose needs are best met by the South Shore Collaborative. Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth make up the South Shore Collaborative and currently students from Hanover, Abington and Brockton are enrolled in the collaborative.

The teachers, therapists and aids use every skill a child has to communicate with him. They use sign language and a sign board with those children who cannot speak. A sign board has pictures of different objects a child points to, to indicate to a staff rson what he wants.

For the children who are blind, the classroom is also sensitized for them. For example, a swing in the room has a bell attached to it.

Also, one of the teachers is certified to teach the visually impaired in additon to being certified to teach special needs, Linari said.

"They all know when they're being loved. They all know how to manipulate their environment to get attention. They do make their needs known by whatever way they can, whether it's whining or crying," Linari said.

The South Shore Collaborative employs a physical therapist full-time, an occupational therapist part-time and a speech therapist part-time. Children see these therapists according to their needs at least once a week.

If these children were in private care, they'd spend about one hour a year with a therapist, Savage said. Also, private or institutional care for the type of student in the community program would be $15,000; and transportation would be extra, Savage said. On the other hand, the community program costs $11,000 per student per year. The tuition is flexible and changes depending on the number of children enrolled in the program each month.

The community program also has a simulated workshop environment for its adolescent and young adult students. The workshop is under a contract with Work, Inc. and the students are paid for the work they complete.

They go to Burger King each week to learn how to spend their money and how to behave in the community, Linari said.

The staff researched and set up the workshop through their own initiative, Savage said. "The staff identified 160 skills needed in a workshop.

"When the people came out from Work, Inc., they thought it was the best school-simulated program they had seen," Savage said. And the students do learn and earn themselves money.

"These are kids that someone said couldn't do anything," he said, again praising the teachers, therapists and aids who dedicate themselves to the kids.

The students' parents are an integral part of the Community Program. The teachers write a short note home to each parent daily, telling of the child's eating patterns, behavior and any problems.

The parents of children in the Community Program's Pre-School Program meet every other week to share resources, discuss problems and just let off steam, South Shore Collaborative Social Worker Demetra Demos said.

The Parents Group involves Demos, but she tries to stay out of the conversation and allow the parents to speak. The Parents Group's purpose is "friendship, mutual support and learning. The support comes in taking risks, trying new things."

The parents of the older children and the parents of the younger children meet together. "Each has something to learn from the other," Demos said.

Linari and Demos pointed out the great need parents, and usually mothers, have for a group of people who understand what they're struggling with. "The burden of a severely handicapped child falls a lot on the mother. As much as other people may chip in, it's really her responsibility," Linari said.

"It's exhausting because it's constant. You can't let up or take a vacation from it," Demos said. She tries to encourage parents to maintain their privacy and control over their lives. This isn't easy for parents, she said.

"From day one, their life becomes an open book. They are c nstantly dealing with professionals—therapists, medical people, social workers. They need to have some control over their lives.

"They have to feel that they can do some of the steering," Demos said. For too long parents of severely handicapped children had no control; they just followed the doctors' orders, she said.

"I really encourage them to become knowledgable. We do a lot of exploration of community resources—helping them deal with bureaucracy, red tape.

"If there is ever going to be any one most important person in these children's lives, it's their parents. These children need their parents to be informed, educated advocates," she said.

Despite the fact that the work is tiring and progress is slow, most of the parents do all they can for their children, she said. "Our parents really do value their children as people. They really put a lot into making their children look nice.

"There's a strong sense of self-respect by virtue of the way they care for them. It takes effort. They put so much time and effort into their children, I think they feel even more committed that (the children) have a right to look nice," Demos said.

"Most students in our program at East (School) are students who not too long ago would have made their way into the institution. If you go to those institutions, you will see adults who aren't as bad as some of the kids.

"Now it's the other extreme. The parents have to raise a ruckus to get anyone to realize the parents can't continuallay keep the child in their home. I'm not saying the institutions should open their doors again to everyone, but these parents do grow older," Demos said, suggesting respite care "to give parents a mental health break."

There is a need for greater sensitivity on the part of the community, she said.

"These children are human beings with basic human rights."

That ageless old high school gang of mine

There must be some mistake. Marlene Leavitt Sprague wrote to say my high school class will have its 30th reunion this summer.

Must be an April Fool. Someone added wrong. It's not feasible that simply because 1954 subtracted from 1984 is 30 that I'm old enough to have been out of high school that many years.

In lieu of panic I have reread Marlene's missive. She hasn't changed, you know. Marlene was always the one who was most reliable about planning our reunions and better still she has stayed handy there in Hancock County, of which Ellsworth is the Shiretown.

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

"There will be an exquisite buffet catered by the staff at the White Birches with live music, featuring liberty waltzes . . ."

What in heaven's name is a liberty waltz? Whose class did that one? Not to worry. Stanley Richmond or Ernie Tracy will remember what it is.

The letter goes on to say that we graduated when everyone liked Ike and a hit song lasted for more than 24 hours. I hope they don't limit the music to the 50s. Personally I like music from the 80s better, merged with our school song that'll do it.

If this reunion is anything like our 25th Jane and Loretta and I'll cheer. We did then and thought we challenged the Dallas Cowboys cheering squad. No one had the heart to point out the differences. They figured if we could still make those moves and remember the words, we deserved little criticism.

John Edes will be there and he'll talk all night like he has at every reunion. Joan Lund won't miss it. She has always brought a new husband for the rest of us to meet. We've been in awe of Joan since we were in high school.

I wish Kent White and Muriel Pike would make it. And, Anitra, my high school best friend, maybe she'll be there. She was Esther Williams while I was Rita Hayworth in our eighth grade fantasy creations. I don't like to be reminded of the hard times that have fallen on Rita since I graduated from high school. I never seriously considered dying my hair red back then but I was truly taken by the thought of a couple of her sarongs hanging in my closet of full skirts that swirled with a crinoline.

There will be the usual letters read from people who won't be able to make it. We were aghast five years ago and then equally irreverent when we learned that some of our classmates were recovering well with pacemakers.

There's something that happens when you get the Ellsworth High School Class of 1954 together. They do not integrate as adults who haven't seen one another and who are therefore strangers. Instead you have a group of grown men and women who regress without apology to what they were in 1954. There's never any apparent time loss or gap. The present is addressed only where a class member has become bald or otherwise not immediately recognizable. Jack Scott isn't a grown man. He's the forward on the Maine championship basketball team who "goes with" Nancy . . . never mind he's been married to her since graduation.

We were a small class. I'm sure we're smaller now. Tuffy Carlisle'll be there. He was president when we were freshmen and quickly recovered from his aspirations for political office.

There's a place on my invitation to make 'remarks,' about the children or grandchildren I have. That's intimidating but it will at least stimulate a few remarks.

Growing older is supposed to be embarrassing. I react to that with traditional mutterings. But growing mature, rich if you will, in life is the most appealing characteristic I've seen on people yet.

Besides Jane Fonda has been out of high school that long. Sophia Loren has been out longer than that. Jackie Onassis isn't saying so, I bet, but if she goes back it'll be for a 35 at least. Same with Dan Rather. Tom Selleck wasn't born yesterday . . . and it looks so good on him. And that doesn't even count Vicki LaMotta, 'member her? Well, if you don't remember her heyday you must have had your 60th reunion at least.

Anyway I'm sending in my money for the reunion at White Birches, as Lois Perkins since no one uses names that weren't in the yearbook. So far as I know I have no grandchildren to report and that's something that wouldn't slip my mind even if I'm getting on.

from the kitchen

by Joan Pinkham

The world is so full of busy people these days that speedy, easy convenience foods are a way of life for many. When used properly -- that is, by following the directions to the letter -- even a gourmet cook may find them handy to have in reserve. A stop at the fish market, a visit to the supermarket to pick up some Big Tate instant potato flakes will give you the ingredients for Beryl Marton's

SESAME CRISPED FILLETS

1 egg
1 T lemon juice
1 tsp. salt, dash of pepper
2 pounds fish fillets
1½ c. mashed potato flakes
2 T sesame seed
Butter and lemon wedges

Beat egg with juice, salt and pepper. Dip fillets in egg mixture. Roll in potato flakes which have been mixed with sesame seed. Heat butter in large skillet, but do not let it reach the smoking stage. Cook fish until golden on underside, turn carefully and brown the other side. Serve with tartar sauce. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

A food company that plops beans into a can and sends them off to market, wants to make sure that of all the brands of beans, it is his that will wind up on your dinner table. Packaging is the name of the game, with the hope that you will find his label so attractive that you won't be able to resist. Some companies include recipes on their label which armies of cooks in the company kitchens have labored over to produce a perfect dish. Again I suggest the paperback which our thoughtful reader, Margaret Ward, sent me called "Best Recipes from the Backs of Boxes, Bottles, Cans and Jars." All-time favorites that are "fast, easy, delicious, thrifty and foolproof" have been included -- even Nestle's original toll house cookies. Suggested is this recipe from Campbell's kitchens which was introduced in the 60s, for which they still have requests. Perfect with a thrifty meatloaf is this

GREEN BEAN BAKE

1 10¾ oz. can cream of mushroom soup
1/2 c. milk
1 tsp. soy sauce
Dash of pepper
2 pkgs. (9 oz. each) frozen green beans, cooked and drained
1 can (3½ oz.) French fried onions

In 1½ qt. casserole, stir soup, milk, soy and pepper until smooth. Mix in beans and 1/2 can onions. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 min.; stir. Top with remaining onions. Bake 5 min. more. Makes about 4 cups.

Here, where cranberry bogs dot our countryside and Ocean Spray berries are known the world over, their Plymouth kitchen on the historic waterfront has produced recipes for year-round use, not just with our Thanksgiving turkey. I for one can't wait to visit their kitchen which opened for the season April 1 where demonstrations are offered daily at 9:30, 11:30, 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. In the meantime, how about their recipe for a sauce to be used over chicken, ham or roast pork called

CRANBERRY BURGUNDY GLAZE

1 can (16 oz.) whole berry cranberry sauce
1/4 c. burgundy wine
1 tsp. lemon juice
1/2 tsp. prepared mustard
1/8 tsp. ground ginger

In a saucepan, mix together all ingredients. Heat until well blended and smooth. Serve as a sauce over baked or broiled chicken or ham, or roast pork. Makes about 1½ c..

Inspired by bright blue skies last week, Eleanor Medonis was doing a little spring cleaning when I spoke to her, getting a little ahead of the game by tidying drawers. Next day came the blizzard, so icy and blustery that I, too, was inspired -- to stay inside. Just so the day wouldn't be a total waste, I tackled the kitchen drawer, thinking to sort out the recipes I stash away, the idea being to try one on such a stormy day. This features a label found on a Heath Bits O' Brickle Bar called

ICE CREAM PIE AND SAUCE

Spoon half of 1/2 gallon softened vanilla ice cream into a prepared 9" graham cracker pie shell. Sprinkle 1/2 Bits O' Brickle on top. Heap with remaining ice cream. Freeze. To make sauce, combine:
1½ c. sugar
1 c. evaporated milk
Remaining 1/2 bag candy
1/4 c. butter or margarine
1/4 c. light corn syrup
Dash salt

Combine ingredients and boil 1 min. Remove from heat and stir in remaining candy. Spoon over pie wedges for eight.

Jeff Bettinger

Jeff Bettinger, candidate for the Board of Water Commissioners, spoke to an enthusiastic group at a coffee held Tuesday, March 27, at the Wakeman home on Atlantic Avenue.

He began by stressing his background of over nine years of experience in water and waste treatment stressing the need for technical expertise on the Board of Water Commissioners. He then addressed what he thought was the biggest problem preventing a balanced Water Department budget: "Currently too many bills are not being paid. Every year since 1978, the unpaid bills have been greater than the budget deficit. It is not fair that taxpayers have to make up for a few who don't pay their bills. Except in the case of hardship, I would advocate publishing the names of delinquent customers in the newspaper."

In response to a question about establishing a service charge to any new dwelling hooking into the Cohasset water system, Mr. Bettinger said: "If the Department could do it without legal complications, I am in favor of it. The money could go into a capitalization fund and be used to reduce the Department's debt to the town in addition to providing the capital necessary to upgrade the distribution system and improve service to all of the customers."

Mary Jane McArthur

Mary Jane McArthur, candidate for re-election to the selectmen told campaign workers at a meeting this week her campaign is based on three major tenets.

First: many of the goals which she set for the office when first elected three years ago have been accomplished or are well underway.

Second: she has set further goals toward which to strive during her next three years in office, if re-elected.

Third: she had a thorough grounding in all phases of town government through twenty years of volunteer public service before she offered her name as a candidate for selectman.

Mrs. McArthur added she was pleased to have had the opportunity to preside over the transition from a three to a five member board of selectmen.

She believes this transition has gone as smoothly as could be expected given the number of serious problems which faced the board.

She said she could not take full credit for this because it could not have come about without the hard work and good will of the other members of the board.

She frankly acknowledges she has put in many extra hours on the job working out solutions to a myriad of town problems.

The year, 1983, was a banner year for significant changes in town government. In addition to the new five member board of selectmen, it saw the installation of new chiefs in both public safety departments, as well as a new Executive Secretary. A Tri-town Commission was formed with Hingham and Hull; a cable TV license signed; and numerous procedural changes made in the conduct of meetings and in other administrative areas.

The primary goals which Mrs. McArthur has set for the future are: study and evaluate performance of departments under the jurisdiction of the selectmen; improve communications with citizens including a periodic newsletter and informal "drop-in" sessions; computerizing of records of town departments, boards and committees; continued search for ways to provide adequate housing for all citizens; remedy the office space and public works housing problems; and fair and consistent enforcement of rules, regulations, and by-laws.

Mrs. McArthur told her workers she has never made any promises to anyone, nor will she.

She also said that, to the great credit of the citizens of this town, she has never, in three years of service, been asked to do any special favors for anyone.

She also spoke of the great diversity of people living in Cohasset. "We are fortunate indeed to have a population which is representative of a broad spectrum of thought, life styles, interests and intellect," Mrs. McArthur said.

"These include the very old families, the very new families, and all of the families in between. The job of elected officials is to listen to all points of view, to try to take the best of each and come up with decisions which will result in the greatest good for the greatest number. It's not an easy task, and some will be alienated no matter what," she added.

Judy Volungis

Parents continue to be concerned about class size, and the school committee's ability to respond, in a timely fashion, to an influx of students in elementary grade levels, Judy Volungis, candidate, said during a recent coffee.

Without question, the school committee has gone on record saying it prefers lower class sizes at the elementary school level. Unfortunately, it has not in all cases dealt with that influx of students until the advent of the fall term. In the meantime, parents become concerned.

"And while the school committee does, ultimately, deal with the issue, the delay in response causes grumblings. As a school committee member I would pay closer attention to elementary grade sizes throughout the summer months, and would be ready to react before classes commenced," she said.

When asked if she would be in favor of cutting the school budget, Mrs. Volungis said, "No. I would like to see some of the funds reapportioned. But I have no real problem with the size of the budget this year," she said.

When asked why the school commitee and/or the school facilities committee hadn't reacted more quickly to the plight of leaking roof problems at Deer Hill School, Mrs. Volungis said, "Physical plant maintenance has been let go, there's no doubt about it. The School Facilities Committee and the School Committee have been alerting the public to the roof problems for some time, but not before the situation was really already out of hand. This just points up the lack of sound planning. With the Deerhill roof being 30 years old, and the High School one 34 years old, I think it is apparent that the need for re-roofing should have been anticipated even before the advent of Proposition 2 1/2 and the fiscal constraints that have ensured.

Where was the planning during the interim years when enrollment was declining drastically and Prop. 2 1/2 had not yet been passed? I feel the public would prefer to be confronted with a sound, reasonable budget for planned maintenance rather than be forced into emergency funding as in the case of the roofing," Mrs. Volungis said.

George Marlette

George Marlette, candidate for School Committee has called for the utilization of present student representatives to the School Committee in a more active role.

In addition Marlette suggested the possible use of elderly volunteers for the essential support service of compiling information, and materials for evaluation by School Committee members on various issues.

Marlette said, "Occasionally the time constraints placed upon committee members makes it difficult or impossible for them to devote adequate time to compiling research both locally and at the state level.

It could be mutually beneficial to student representatives and to the School Committee to encourage an expanded role for interested students. The Committee members would save countless hours, while students would gain experience, and enhance their resumes for future college or job consideration."

Town Meeting adjourns until the summer

By Jane Lane

About 150 people sat Monday night for more than an hour, waiting for Town Meeting to begin. It wasn't to happen.

In a suprising move, after huddled discussions with Moderator William Weeks, Town Counsel Richard Henderson, advisory committee members and selectmen, the decision was made to postpone the remaining warrant articles until this Saturday at 8 a.m. for town election of officers.

At the conclusion of the municipal election, the 1984 Town Meeting will be adjourned until a special Town Meeting is held sometime in late June or early July.

The start of Saturday's session was delayed for about 45 minutes until the 200-person quorum was reached. About half the warrant was completed in the four-hour meeting, with the town's annual $8.2 million budget appropriated, along with the school budget and $1/2 million for school roof repairs.

Apparently the request for a new fire department ambulance, and a subdued controversy surrounding the proposed extension of the Government Island pier was not enough to rouse residents from their homes Monday night.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza explained the decision to postpone the remaining articles will not affect the town's finances. The budget has been appropriated, and adequate latitude has been retained within the operating budget to include room for appropriations to be decided later this summer. The delay in reviewing the entire warrant will not affect the tax rate, he added, which will be set sometime in the late summer, or early fall.

Roy Fitzsimmons, chairman of the Ambulance Study Committee, said the postponement will allow selectmen time to appoint an Emergency Medical Service Committee. That citizens committee, which is to include experts in the medical profession, will assist selectmen in researching the type of ambulance and equipment proposed to be purchased in the next fiscal year.

Whether it was luck of the draw, or the charisma of chairman Richard Conley, the school committee literally breezed through town meeting Saturday.

Without so much as whimper from the audience, the

A rememberance of Gilbert Tower

In the words of his son, Gilbert Tower "just faded away." He wasn't ill, or suffering. He was old.

And when Town Moderator William Weeks reported his death to the 175 residents at Monday night's Town Meeting, a hush settled upon the crowd. This annual event will never be the same without him.

Friend and comrade Arthur Clark remembered Gilbert as "a particularly brilliant and serious man." He was 99 years old, and if one's life is measured by accomplishments, Gilbert has been immortalized.

He was a nationally-recognized pioneer in naval architecture and engineering. And despite his sought-after talents and his flair for adventure, Gilbert remained a true son of Cohasset. The latter half of his life was spent in dogged pursuit of a better future for his hometown.

Whether it was a dissertation to a packed house at town meeting, a lengthy letter to the local newspapers, or a prolonged phone call to a community official, Gilbert seized a challenge and embraced it to the end.

His son, Osgood, spoke to Gilbert a half-hour before his father's death Monday afternoon. Although he was blind and unable to talk, he understood.

Gilbert was born in Cohasset in 1885, and except for brief excursions, he lived there all his life. He was married to the former Elizabeth Osgood, who at 96, resides at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

At the age of 16 he graduated from Cohasset High School, and in 1901, entered the Massachu-

Fishermen loudly protest pier extension

By Karen Brown

Cohasset fishermen presented a petition to selectmen last week protesting the proposed extension of the Government Island pier.

The petition was signed by 49 commercial fishermen, eight of whom "are from out of town."

"You're giving up more than you're getting," one fisherman told the board.

"You're discriminating against the fishermen," said another.

"A pier this size is conducive to other fishermen from other areas to come in," said Jack Worley, Chairman, Recreation Commission Director.

"What's to stop an 80 footer from coming in?" asked another fisherman.

"If and when we do get the pier, what's to happen to the cove?" asked fisherman Herbie Jason. "I've been in the cove for 50 years...don't want to leave now."

However Jason later voiced his approval of the project.

"You've got a million dollar industry and a 5 cent and 10 cent pier. The (new) pier is really honestly needed...- It's not just for the fishermen, it's for all people."

Selectmen met with the fishermen to discuss their opposition to the project; the board discussed the final planning report for which was presented to the board by the Harbor Study Committee in the spring of 1982.

With passage of the Pier Bill by the Massachusetts legislature in December, any town showing sufficient need for improved wharves and piers may receive state

Village druggist takes Medi Mart to court

By Mike Berger

A Cohasset Village druggist has filed an antitrust suit against the Stop and Shop Company, specifically MediMart for deliberately underpricing prescriptions in order to drive small drugstores out of business.

Pharmacist Ralph Harrison, owner of Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy and who has operated his drugstore for 25 years feels Medi Mart's pricing has been intentionally done to destroy local competition.

Harrison alleges MediMart is selling prescriptions below cost and that discount prices have been only offered at the Cohasset store in Cushing Plaza and not at other branch stores.

Stop and Shop spokesperson Aileen Gorman said, "There is no way Stop & Shop is trying to put Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy out of business." She added Stop & Shop has offered special discounts at the Cohasset store the same way it runs promotional sales when any new branch store opens.

Harrison said he conducted a check of 25 to 30 drugs at various area MediMart stores and said prices at the Cohasset store have remained consistently lower and

Capital Budget

The Library Board of Trustees is considering a $30,000 budget for Fiscal Year 1986 which will tie the Cohasset library into a regional system for automated clerical library services.

Library Director Dick Hayes said this will improve the library's filing system and enable trustees to control future labor costs.

The town Capital Budget Committee decided to support the proposal contingent on the establishment of a regional system and that a definite fiscal advantage is demonstrated to the committee.

Straits Pond update

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset has announced Straits Pond which borders Cohasset, Hingham and Hull near West Corner is to receive a new flood gate.

The Straits Pond flood gate contract has been awarded by the Division of Waterways.

"Reed Marine Servicing was awarded the contract April 2 and contractural papers have been sent to the Quincy Company," Murray said.

The company has ten days to obtain bonding, workmens' compensation and the signing of the contract.

Rep. Murray said she will contact the company and attempt to expediate the paper work in a shorter period of time.

The flood gate money was put in the 1982 budget by Murray. The old gate that currently exists has been there since the 1920's and is quite delapitated. The new tidal gate will, hopefully, be far more effective in eliminating some of the stagnation and algea problems, she said.

Shopping area hearing

Developer Donald Staszko, along with engineers from EJ Flynn Engineers, presented plans for a proposed shopping mall in Cohasset to Conservation Commission.

The proposed site is at the intersection of Rte. 3A and Sohier Street.

Engineers who helped present the plan said the intent of the drainage design was to allow for a minimal increased run-off and retention and detention areas for a "100 years storm."

The Conservation Commission was particularly concerned with the drainage design because of "an awful lot of clogged drains in Cohasset."

The owner of Cohasset Auto Body, and an abutter to the proposed site said: "What I'm concerned about is any increase whatsoever in existing drainage. One of the lowest points is on my property."

Staseko said, "I know of your concern. That is why I spent the time and money..."

The Sewer Commission has expressed concern with the effect of the project on Sanctuary Pond.

funding covering 50 percent of the cost for such improvements.

This means competing with other towns in the state for funding.

"The first step in this competition," said Charles Fink, Chairman of the Harbor Study Committee, in a letter to the Recreation Commission March 14, "is to put together a winning application. This is a task for professionals and the town meeting in April will be asked to vote $5,500 to make that application."

Fink, said fishermen will have to pay a user fee to support financing through loans of the project.

Over a 10 year loan period, estimated Fink, this amounts to an annual fee of $400.

The "user fee concept", said Fink, is implemented "up and down the state."

Selectman John DeBassio asked Fink: "Can you better the facilities without taking on this kind of debt? We're not interested in generating money."

Selectman Frank England asked about the "unanswered questions" about the project.

Will Cohasset lose parking space on Government Island after the pier is built?

How much control will the state gain over Cohasset waterways by funding this project?

"In regards to control, we won't gain or lose anything," Selectman Rocco Laugelle told the fishermen.

Fishermen base much of their opposition on what they consider an intolerable situation in neighboring Scituate.

"We don't want another Scituate Harbor--Lobstermen in Scituate wait three to four hours in line getting their bait," said Paul Figueiredo.

Proponents of the new pier advocate taking the "long view" of the project.

"There is a chance for improvement of the commercial fishing industry...50 cents on the dollar," said Harbormaster Harry Ritter.

"Big boats shy away from Cohasset, facilities should change to keep pace," said Eddie Jason.

Fink talked about losing "our competitive edge."

The Cohasset Advisory Committee has decided not to recommend the article.

Selectmen expressed strong reservations about recommending it also.

"I agree with people who say we should be looking where we will be 20-30 years from now," said Selectman England.

Yet England doubted that with the unfavorable climate of opinion towards the project whether town meeting would pass the article applying for the funding.

Finally the board agreed to recommend the article.

In other business the Board:

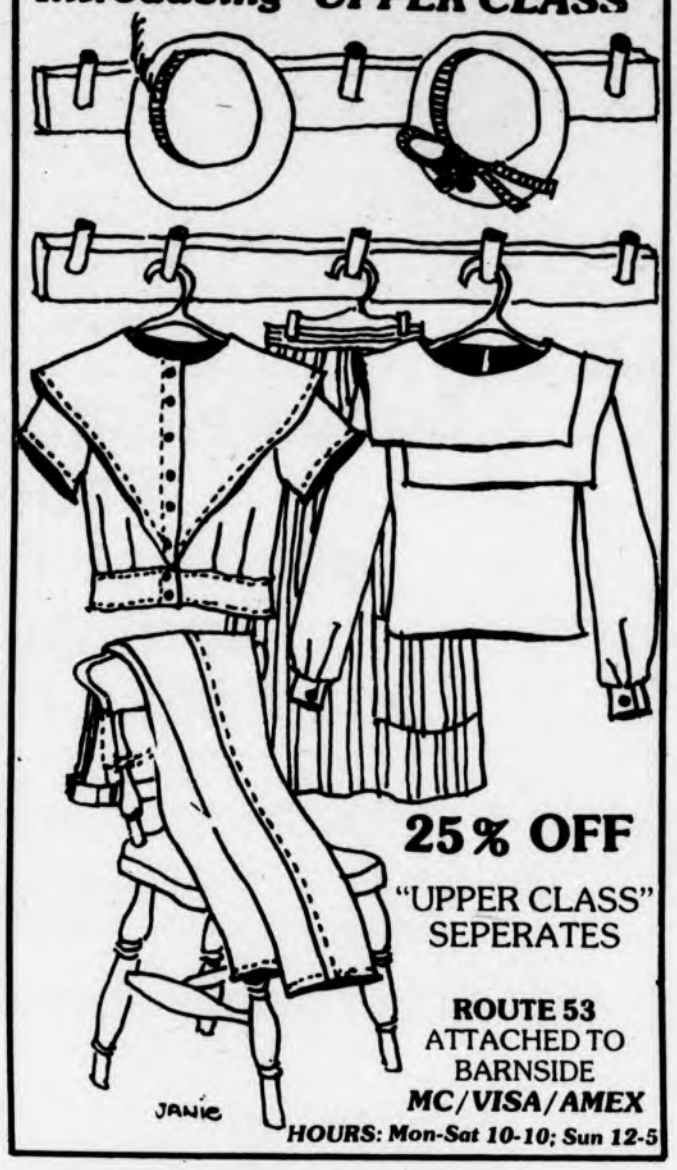
discussed alternatives to patrolling the Mill bridge.

Selectman DeBassio described it as "A major safety hazard" and referred to "liabilities for leaving that open."

"A fence is not going to stop those kids from jumping off that bridge," said Chairman Mary Jane McArthur. "The only thing that . going to stop them is a police officer."

Facilty Permits

The board agreed on fees for 1984 facility permits.



Jack Worley, Recreation Commission, Director recommended "a flat rate fee regardless of the number of permits an individual or family wants."

Worley also recommended reducing the age requirement for senior citizens in permits from 65 to 63 years old.

The board and Worley finally compromised at $6 for each permit, $2 for replacement permits and $3 for senior citizen permits.

"Just for the record," said board executive secretary Mark Lanza, "this is not a good idea. It will not take in more than $15,000. It's not good financing."

setts Institute of Technology. A straight-A student, Gilbert graduated and was later a member of the first class to graduate from MIT with a master's degree in naval architecture.

He dabbled in fire insurance, and in 1917, entered the Navy at the Boston Naval Shipyard, preparing ships for WW I. He was later transferred to MIT as an assistant professor of naval architecture, still assigned to the U.S. Navy.

After the war, Gilbert traveled to Panama and worked as a mechanical enginer on the construction of the canal. He was later named chief mechanical engineer of the project.

He moved to Chicago after completion of the canal, and returned to the more mundane business of fire insurance. A few years later his love for Cohasset lured he and his family back, and he was named Cohasset Fire Chief in 1937. It was during that time he met a call firefighter named Arthur Clark.

"He was quite a man. He always had the interest of the town at heart," Clark remembered. "His passing this week is like the passing of an era. Or maybe that era had already passed us by."

Everyone in town who knew Gilbert Tower remembers his active and continual involvement with the municipal affairs of Cohasset. His lengthy participation did not actually begin until after he retired from the Fore River Shipyard at the age of 75. Although he had received several Presidential Extensions to remain a naval architect at the shipyard, he was forced to retire 20 years ago.

But the quiet life was not favored by Gilbert. He turned his ambitions and expertise toward his hometown.

"He was great for drawing maps of the town -maps of roads, maps for zoning, and maps for planning," his son recalled. He was a member of the planning board and at one point was distinguished by the Board of Selectmen as Honorary Town Engineer.

Although planning and zoning were two of his primary municipal interests, Gilbert loved to piece together family histories through genealogy, and was constantly updating and repairing his antique home on South Main Street. That family homestead was built in 1848. Gardening and stonework that surrounded the home were other beloved pasttimes of this active man.

Music was a great passion for Gilbert, who played baritone horn in his younger days, along with the trumbone and drums.

When he retired from his profession, Gilbert was named a member of that exclusive society of elderly Cohasset folk, known as the Old Goats Club. Formed about 13 years ago, the luncheon jet set group included many of Gilbert's friends and neighbors, including Frederick Howe.

Of the 35 members, Frederick remembered his colleague "as an especially alert man, even in his later years."

His friends, family and neighbors will mourn the loss of this stylish, gentle man.

But we can take comfort in the words of his son, "There was no pain, no problems. It was just time to go."

A memorial service will be held 7 p.m. Saturday at the First Parish Unitarian Church.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the church or the Cohasset Historical Society.

Cohasset cancer crusade set to begin

An army of crusaders already enlisted in Cohasset's most ambitious effort on behalf of cancer information and fund-raising is ready. House calls will be made throughout the town climaxing with a final house-to-house night Tuesday, April 24.

Before the drive is completed, the group of nearly 150 crusaders will attempt to leave with every resident important information about cancer and ask for support of the American Cancer Society's extensive program of cancer research, treatment and service.

Dave Chittim, residential chairman, is heading up this year's Crusade. He announced the area captains who will back up the house-to-house canvassers in making their calls, have been recruited by the precinct chairmen and will soon be receiving the kits and instructions they will distribute to the crusaders.

In precinct 1, where Bob Ciciotte is precinct chairman, the captains are Maria Plante, Dick and Ginny Abbadessa, Holly Holway, Taffy Nothnagle, Marilyn Fessler, Lucia Woods and Beverly Quilty.

In precinct 2, where Ozzie Ingram is precint chairman, the captains are Betty and Bob Ripley, Al Odermatt, Don McAllister, Regina Schultz, Nancy Ripley, Jean Higgins, Margaret Young and Ann Mitchell.

According to Chittim, emphasis will be put this year on making sure that accurate, important information about cancer is provided to households.

"Each crusader will have in the kits a quick test that the householders can take to determine their risk of cancer, and more importantly, can learn how these risks can be reduced," Chittem said.

"The message that we are sending this year is that we are winning in the battle against cancer because in 1984 the cancer survival rate is one out of every two patients whereas it was only one in three as recently as the 1960's. This improvement has come about through improved awareness of risk factors, early detection and improved treatment."

Selectman - Cohasset

An Open Letter

TO THE RESIDENTS OF COHASSET

Dear Voter:

During my active and visible campaign to seek your Vote and Support to serve as your Selectman for the next Three Years, I have had the opportunity to discuss on a one to one level, many of the problems and anxieties that confront Town Government today and its direct effect on the taxpayers and residents of our community both present and future.

If elected, among my concerns as your Selectman are the following issues:

- A more positive approach to problems with sound, sensible solutions through effective leadership.
- The resolution of the Sewerage issue.
- The orderly and potential growth of Route 3A. The character and charm of our Town must be preserved.
- The settlement of the Fire Department dispute. I look forward to becoming actively involved in this matter and to strive to resolve differences in an amicable manner without resorting to confrontation politics.
- To assist in seeking all State and Federal Grants that would enhance our community and its quality of life.
- A realistic approach to the Low-Income Housing issue which is mandated by State Law. I will support the Cohasset Housing Authority in their search for moderate housing.
- The Towns Landfill Operation. I believe that to accomplish our time projections in this matter that the proper manpower should be made available while a long range solution is being evaluated.
- I will scrutinize and curtail the spiraling cost of legal fees and avoid out-of-court settlements due to negligence.
- The Route 3A Disposal Site. All measures should be taken to properly insure that our water supply is in no way threatened or endangered.
- I will assist and cooperate with all Town Boards and its members. I feel that a spirit of cooperation is absolutely necessary to achieve common goals for the future welfare of our Town.
- I will show respect and concern towards anyone who appears in front of the Board of Selectmen with a problem. I strongly feel that the Board should be in a position to resolve problems - not create them.

I feel that my proven record of governmental experience can be of service to you and our community and I sincerely welcome your support and vote for ONE of the TWO seats on the Board of Selectmen. Remember - that no vote is more important than your vote.

In conclusion, as a conscientious resident, please take the time to go to the polls and vote on Election Day, Saturday, April 14th. After all is said and done, this is your Town and your vote proves that you care about its future through electing responsible leadership.

Very truly yours,

Doris C. Golden

Selectman candidate Doris Golden

(Doris Golden, candidate for selectman, was unavailable for an interview because of an illness. She was able to answer in writing specific questions asked of all the selectmen candidates. ED.)

Personal Strengths

My six year background in town government as a member-chairman of the Cohasset School System which expended over 50 percent of the town's total budget and employed over 210 personnel plus the educational responsibilities of our children is a public record and speaks for itself.

I was involved and played a leading role in annual budget preparations, public hearings, personnel evaluations, hiring and dismissals, labor negotiations and grievance procedures, plus a myraid of other functions.

I am well versed in administrative duties and responsibilities.

Lastly, I feel strongly that compassion, understanding, and the ability to get along with people is a prerequisite to serve in any town capacity.

Current Board's Weaknesses

The ultimate answer to this question is not my viewpoint but rather the fixed responsibility of the residents and taxpayers of Cohasset.

My Goals

I look forward to participating in the determination and successful completion of the following issues:

the Fire Department dispute,
the resolution of the sewerage issue,
the orderly and potential growth of 3A, the town landfill operation,
the possible negative side effects of the Route 3A disposal site,
the securing of viable state and federal grants, the safeguarding of our natural and environmental resources and,
the investigation and evaluation of common problems that could overburden our community from a resource and financial viewpoint that might be better resolved through regional planning.

Fire Department Issues

I firmly believe that this matter can never be resolved through confrontation politics.

True, there are many variables to be considered such as union agreements, contracts and job descriptions.

But there is one element that all parties have in common, the health, welfare, public safety of all the residents of our town. LET IT BEGIN THERE!

I speak with authority in this matter because I witnessed a real sense of cooperation and professionalism from all fire department personnel at a fire in my home last December 21 that could have been totally destroyed if it were not for their combined expertise in fire fighting.

Executive Secretary

I would like to review the differential between the job description and actual signed contract which is less than consistent.

Ambulance Service

Our town has much to be thankful in this area. Our EMT's are both well trained, courteous and efficient.

The 911 universal phone system is long overdue for obvious reasons. I feel that this vital service can be updated and embellished upon to become a far greater asset and medical service to our community through thoughtful planning, understanding, and cooperation.

Combined Fire and Police

I am opposed to this concept as being impractical. The few communities that exercised this option abandoned it.

It's that time of year again.
"They-say-er" Time!

THEY SAY Dick Conley's got this election in the bag. He's got the "Townie" vote all wrapped up. THEY SAY Judy Volungus has is made...this is her second run. And, THEY SAY young George Marlette is bright, articulate, and well educated, with a lot of solid plans and ideas for our schools. THEY SAY Marlette's candidacy is refreshing, that he is the logical choice for School Committee...but THEY SAY first time candidates can't win. Well, they are wrong.*

On Saturday, April 14, when you draw that curtain, and it's just you and the ballot, don't let the "They-say-ers" tell you how to vote. Remember, you are selecting the person who will represent you on the School Committee until 1987. Cast your vote wisely. It can make a difference.

☐ Brenda Birmann, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Gerhard Birmann of 107 Atlantic Avenue, participated in a children's theatre workshop during Middlebury College's winter term. The workshop, directed by assistant theatre professor Douglas Anderson, consisted of creating an original children's play, entitled "Noses," and performing it in the local grade schools.

☐ The Leahy family on Forest Ave. certainly had a grand announcement on their house last week. A huge sign, printed in green and white lettering (in honor of St. Patrick's Day?) telling the world that their daughter was born March 15. Lest the sign was missed, the lamp post was decked out with a very large pink bow. A nice sight to see!

☐ Little leaguers and their folks should take off their baseball caps to three volunteers that will certainly make baseball at the Little League Field more enjoyable! Bill Higgins (who is a plumber by trade), Larry Mitchell (also a plumber) and Mark Bates (an electrician) not only re-built a section of the back-stop, but also re-built one of the bleachers, so fans will have a better (and much safer) view of their super-stars.

☐ Chris Mahoney certainly must have worked hard to receive the honor that he got from Holy Cross last month. Chris is in the NROTC program, and was selected Midshipman of the Month,with the following criteria being considered: 1) close ordered drill, 2) military knowledge, 3) current events, 4) uniform inspection, and 5) physical fitness. Representing Delta Company, he now competes for Midshipman of the Year, an honor coveted by all that are in the program. Chris has taken a Marine Corps option, you can be sure that the Marines have their eye on him.

☐ Another Mahoney makes the news this week too. Mike Mahoney had received his orders and will be heading for Germany in June. He will be stationed there for one and one-half years. Here's hoping that he gets a chance to return home before he leaves, so that he can get another proper send-off.

Janet LaRosa, R.A.C., Joanne Raskin, Dr. William Raskin and Genevieve Lane, R.A.C., celebrated the recent expansion opening of the Raskin Medical Center in Cushing Plaza.

☐ Robert Riley, 54, of 483 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, finished 289 out of 633 runners completing the 10 kilometer (6.2 mile) road race Sunday, April 1. Mr. Riley's time was 47:26.

He was cheered on by two of his five sons, his wife, Carol, his mother and father, his 84-year old aunt, two neices and a nephew (all of whom handed out cups of water to thirsty runners on the course, which passed by the Riley's ocean-front home).

☐ Maria Plante and the Cohasset Teacher's Association are hard at work again this year, sponsoring the Ride-A-Bike event. This takes place annually, this year it will be held May 6, from 1 to 4 p.m. For more information and details, call Maria at 383-9263.

☐ There is a new champ at Deer Hill School, as a result of the Cohasset Marathon held last week. Ned Thompson, a sixth grader made the run in 47 minutes, the fastest time of all the participants who entered from Deer Hill! Looks like there is a star in the making, Bill Rodgers look out!

☐ One has to envy Henry Dormitzer and his dream that has come true. When the tall ships sail into Boston Harbor in June, his "dream," "The Spirit of Massachusetts," will be leading the ships. Not only did he help to raise the money needed to have her built (he was responsible for almost one million out of 1.5 million that it cost), but is working 60 to 70 hours a week to watch it become a reality. The Spirit will be on a summer tour of Massachusetts ports, one of which will be to Hull June 30. The ship will also spend three months a year in Boston harbor and will be open for tours to the public. Each summer it will carry a crew of six professional sailors and 30 cadets (aged 15-25) from Mass. and other New England states, on a series of two-week cruises to Nova Scotia and Bermuda. Mr. Dormitzer's dream of teaching young people to sail old-fashioned ships with all of the teamwork, self-reliance, resourcefulness, self-discipline of days gone by will come true.

Trading gardening secrets will be the purpose of an organic gardening round-table at the South Shore Regional Office of Massachusetts Audubon Society April 11.

Three local gardeners, who are familiar with the nature of the south shore soil, will be on hand to exchange ideas and tips for improving an organic garden.

Dorothea Reeves, Peggy Beals, both of Marshfield, and Bob Sturdy of Cohasset all have florishing gardens. Join these three gardeners April 11 at 7:30 p.m. The fee is $2 for members and $3 for non-members.

For reservations, please call Massachusetts Audubon at 837-9400.

☐ Three Cohasset businessmen made the news last week, Kevin Lewis has joined Wyatt Inc., of New Haven, Conn. He will be responsible for marketing heating oil on the South Shore for the largest independent oil company on the East Coast. John Nedvins has joined the Commercial-Industrial Division of the Flatley Company in Braintree. He will be leasing Flatley properties in the Braintree suburban marketplace. William Devine has been named senior representative for the new health program development office in Newton, opened by Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

☐ Sarah Linsley is unbelievable! Imagine winning the Roadrace for the eighth straight year. And, she flew in for the race from Chicago, where she is a law student...that is dedication and certainly a supreme effort to keep a winning record going strong.

☐ Elections will be held Saturday, be sure to cast your votes! Hats off to all of the candidates that are in the running. It shows they certainly care about the town and are willing to do something for it! In that respect, there are no losers!

☐ Sandy Rose had five out of six Megabucks numbers last weekend. He was spared the agony of waiting until the end of the drawing, as the first number chosen was the only one that he didn't have. Talk about being "so near yet so far," that is a real example.

☐ Keep your news coming, via letter, phone, etc. Your news is our news.

Week six in the Mystery Tour

It's Week 6 and past the midpoint of the Historical Mystery House Tour.

Last week's correct answer was either 19 or 23 North Main Street as historical records indicate the Unitarian Parish House was known as either 19 or 23 North Main St. throughout Cohasset history.

Built in 1722 by the Rev. Nehemiah Hobart, the first minister of the recently formed parish in the second precinct of Hingham, this fine old house was for many years the home of Rev. Joseph Osgood. He appeared in the left of the picture, published last week.

Alterations to this structure are not as extensive as with some but changes in landscaping and in the general appearance of the house present a challenge to those not familiar with the face of the town as it was a century ago.

The exact location of last week's Mystery House was North Main Street, across the street from the Common and the fourth house from the corner of Depot Court.

Those people submitting correct answers were the Galt Grant family, A. J. Antoine Jr., Verna Martini, Betty Enders, Robert Leonard Sr., Lillian Pierce, Charles Wheelright, and Hamilton Tewksbury.

Eight people were correct. Nine people submitted entries.

After five weeks, the Galt Grant family and Robert Leonard Sr. are still fighting for first place with four correct answers and there is a bevy of contestants fighting for second place.

With three correct answers are Warren Pratt, A. J. Antoine Jr., Verna Martini and Betty Enders.

Jean Rosano, Lynette Lyndan, Lillian Pierce, Charles Wheelright and Hamilton Tewksbury each have two correct answers.

These people are vying for the retail prizes which will be a $100 gift certificate at the Linen Chest, $50 gift certificate at Hugo's and a $25 gift certificate at Fleming's of Cohasset.

This will be Week 6 of the ten-week Mystery House Tour.If need be, two houses will be provided for playoffs.

Once you find the home, write down the address of the homes, exact number and street along with your name, address and phone number and send it to the "Mystery House Tour", care of the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025 or drop off the answers in an envelope at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or at Hennessey's News, both in Cohasset Village.

The deadline for weekly entries will be 9:30 a.m. sharp Tuesday.

The following week we will disclose the correct address with a pictur of how the home looks today with a little history brief about each house.

Remember, only one guess per week.

This week's clue is: this gambrel Cape Cottage was built in the latter 18th century in a well known part of town.

How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two- and three-bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free St., one mile to our entrance. Call 740-1500.

Editorial

Remember to vote

Forty percent of a voter turnout is considered good for a small local town election. We predict with good weather, the turnout may hit 45 percent.

Anyone who cares how the town is run from a selectmen, school committee, water commission or just from a recreational standpoint should vote Saturday.

The Mariner does not support candidates but we hope in this election issue we have raised enough issues and given the thoughts of the candidates to help the voters decide.

One comment heard around the election statements is the board of selectmen is dissension ridden. We don't agree.

The new five-member board had a very difficult year with many, complex issues, particularly the Fire Dept. situation. We have sometimes criticized selectmen for not taking a more forceful action.

However, we have attended enough selectmen meetings and talked with selectmen enough to know there are differences of opinion on the board and that's the way it should be.

But this is not a ballclub where dissension causes a lack of performance. Selectmen may disagree but all five current selectmen do believe in what's good for the town and do not harbor hostile feelings against each other.

Many of the candidates' stances are similiar but ultimately a voter must decide which candidate's management style and personality will help solve many of the town's complex problems for the next three years, particularly for selectmen and school committee.

Which candidate will communicate the best with other town boards and work together for the good of the town? Which candidate can put aside personal differences and work with other town employees rather than fighting against each other?

If you can sift through all the Candidates Corner material, election ads, campaign stories etc. and make a rational decision, then more power to you. You have shown you care about the town.

The polls will be open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Town Hall.

Residents can vote absentee until Friday at 1 p.m.

Saturday's results won't probably be known until 10 to 11 p.m. and will be posted at the Police Station and the front door of Town Hall.

Where is the ego?

By Claire McDonough

I met my friend Fauna's daughter, Bambi, in Boston the other day.

"Are you still working for women's rights?" I asked, falling in step beside her.

Bambi shook her head. "Not any more. I was very involved in getting women equal pay for comparable work, but Phyllis Schaffley says if I do it will destroy family values in America. I certainly don't want to be responsible for that."

"I can understand why you wouldn't," I agreed, "but I'm not sure how it works. How does it destroy family values if you get paid as much as a man for doing something that's worth just as much?"

"Take my case," Bambi explained. "I run a day care center. For doing this I get paid roughly half as much as someone who runs a parking lot. The people in my consciousness raising class and I reasoned that since you need more education to run a day care center, and since children are at least as important as automobiles, then our salaries should be roughly equal.

"But Phyllis Schaffley doesn't see it that way. She figures that since parking lots are largely operated by men, and day care centers are largely operated by women, you could wind up with wives who make more money than their husbands."

"So?"

"So you could wind up bruising male egos."

Bambi frowned. "The way it's been explained to us, male egos are terribly fragile things, and the poor dears have to protect them at all costs.

"Four or five years ago there was even a judge who ruled that a man was justified in beating his wife if she made more money than he did, because a man has a right to expect his wife to be dependent on him."

"That doesn't make any sense at all," I told her. "Does Phyllis Schaffley accept less money for legal work than a man would get?

"And anyway, it doesn't pertain in your case. Your husband walked out and left you with three little kids to support. His ego isn't around to get bruised."

"I know," Bambi replied. "But you can't make an omelet without breaking eggs."

"What's that supposed to mean?"

"I don't know," she admitted, "but Phyllis Schaffley says it, so it must mean something."

"I still don't see why it's worse to bruise a man's ego than it is to bruise a woman's body," I told her.

"Neither did I, at first. But the thing is, if women didn't act so independent, and if they didn't show they were financially independent by making more money than their husbands, then their husbands wouldn't feel threatened and have to hit them."

"So what's a woman supposed to do?" I asked.

"It's really simple when you stop to think about it. You accept less money than a man who does comparable work, and you're grateful to get it. You don't say anything that might bruise a male ego. And above all else, you don't go anywhere that men don't think it's all right for decent women to go."

"And this preserves family values?"

"Of course. It's the American way."

Praise for Litchfield

(The following is a copy of a letter to selectmen —Ed.)

I wish to inform you that Harold Litchfield, Superintendant of the Highway Department, and his men repaired the leaking tide gates at the harbor.

It was a savings to the town and an excellent job.

I found no water from cracks or bent tide gates.

I wish to thank Harold for an excellent job.

Sincerely,

Lunar high tide?

To the Editor:

The news accounts of Thursday's storm referred to the Blizzard of '78 as a 100 years storm. Perhaps it was, but recent studies and last week's storm suggest that severe storms are becoming more frequent. Most of the damage on March 29 and 30 was to trees and electric utilities. Nevertheless, significant damage was done along the beaches and bluffs.

What if there had been a Lunar High Tide?

Now we are becoming more depnedent on "cable," along with phone and electric power and increasing the burden on utility poles, making the other lines more susceptible to snow and ice damage. How about putting more utility lines underground? If we continue to put our future up in the air, on poles, then we must take down more trees which might fall on the lines. Even then, we face wind and ice damage to those lines.

Letters

How many people have, or can afford, standby generators? We must legislate, enforce, and finance in the conviction that storms will hit. Otherwise we are making our technological society increasingly hostage to nauture's rampages.

Concernedly yours,
Reed (Cassandra) Stewart

Rotary club thanks

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Rotary Club, I want to express our deepest gratitude and appreciation to all of the residents of Cohasset for their support and cooperation on Sunday. The Roadrace was an event in which we can all take pride. The runners and spectators all felt the warmth of the Cohasset Community.

Special thanks to the Selectman and Town Departments without whose support the event would not exist. Harold Litchfield, Peter Laugelle, Clark Chatterton and Richard Yocum provided unsurpassed assistance.

The coordination of Co-Chairman Roy Fitzsimmons and Peter Logan with their committee heads, John DeBassio, John Muncey, Gene Crowell, Don Harold, Kevin O'Connor, Steve Sadler and all the Rotarians provided an event that certainly christened spring.

Again, our heartfelt gratitude to all for their assistance and support.

Sincerely,
John Sadler
Rotary Club President

League of Women Voters election guide

The following is the Voters Guide, prepared by the Cohasset League of women Voters.

All candidates were requested to answer two questions, the questions and answers appear under the candidates' names.

The questions were:

1. What experience and or special qualities do you have that would help you perform the duties of the office you seek?

2. What are the most significant problems and opportunities you see for this position during the next term of office?

ASSESSOR
One position - three years

Charles L. Aronovici
619 Jerusalem Rd.

1. If I am elected to the Cohasset Board of Assessors, there are two unique factors which would contribute to my successful execution of Assessors duties.

a) I work from my home, here in Cohasset. This will make me more available and accessible for the demands of the position.

b) My career has taken advantage of the combined benefits of a degree in finance together with over 15 years of technical and managerial experience in the banking and computer software industries. I believe that this combination will lend itself to a program of planning, efficiency and attention to detail. It will also contribute to the enhanced maintenance and operation of the current computerized property-record and assessment system.

2. The most significant opportunities for the next Board of Assessors includes:

a) The complete resolution of all inequitable assessments in and between the various areas and neighborhoods.

b) To expedite tax rate setting and tax bill distribution to eliminate unnecessary borrowing and associated high interest payments.

c) To ensure that the next required revaluation of Cohasset property be accomplished with utmost speed, accuracy and efficiency, at the lowest possible cost to the taxpayers.

d) To improve public relations between the Board of Assessors and Cohasset residents through a policy of open and helpful communicaiton and easy access to public information.

Warren S. Pratt
56 Red Gate Lane

1. Through my years on the Board of Assessors (1969 to the present) I have developed an understanding of the problems involved in the assessment of property.

I have attended courses offered by the Association of Massachusetts Assessors, first at Bridgewater State College, then four years at the University of Massachusetts - Amherst.

2. The first of January, 1983 the assessors signed a contract with Appraisal Consultants of New England to do a complete revaluation of the Town of Cohasset. The job has been completed, including conducting public hearings to discuss individual valuations with anyone who felt they were over assessed. The Department of Revenue told us that we had chosen the very best revaluation firm of the five that were approved by the Department.

We have hired a part-time appraiser to follow up on new houses and major renovations.

All the tax records are now on the Town's in-house computer system.

HIGHWAY SURVEYOR
One position - three years

Harold W. Litchfield
171 Beechwood St.

1. I have been a member of the Highway Department for almost 24 years, the last six years as your Highway Surveyor. I feel that I have the time on the job and the experience as a department head to continue to qualify for this position.

2. I really don't foresee any problems in the near future other than the usual day-to-day problems that can pop up in any busy department. We are planning some major repairs to both Mill and Cunningham Bridges. These repairs will be handled by the Commonwealth and will be fully funded by money granted specifically for bridge repairs. At the present time, we have no schedule as to the time-table for making these repairs. These projects will probably result in some traffic problems and possibly detours in the immediate vicinity. As these projects are being done by the Commonwealth, with State funds, my department will not have control over when this work will be done. But I will do everything in my power to try to get these repairs made with as little impact as possible on summer traffic.

HOUSING AUTHORITY
one position — five years

Lloyd W. Prescott
Old Pasture Road

1. Have served for the past five years as a member of the Cohasset Housing Authority and the last year as Chairman.

2. To work with the rest of the Housing Authority members in offering our elder citizens a clean, well maintained, apartment complex. To work with the members of the Housing Authority and Selectmen in obtaining 705 Funding for additional scattered site housing for low income families.

LIBRARY TRUSTEE
three positions — three years

Doris R. McNulty
80 Nichols Rd.

1. A degree in Library Science and over 15 years experience in various Library and Information Management services in government, public schools and industry, plus service on other boards (professional groups, charitable organizations, LWV) and six years on the Cohasset Library Board.

2. To meet budget constraints in an era of ever escalating costs, to maintain a high level of enthusiasm and dedication on the part of the staff, to encourage the involvement of the Volunteers and Friends which has added so much, to move wisely into computer technology, to explore the relevant uses and capabilities of Cable T.V. — all of these continue to be areas of concern to the Board.

Sheila S. Evans
72 No. Main St.

1. I continue to be intensely interested in the well-being of our town library. My experience as a Trustee over several years gives me both a philosophical perspective and a pragmatic approach to the library's progress.

2. The Trustees have done wondrously well in maintaining the library's quality despite Proposition 2-1/2. The book budget is at satisfactory levels, library personnel's pay has maintained a fair relationship with other town employees, and Cohasset's library is well ahead of most local libraries in long term planning.

Wisdom in balancing the goal of an "ideal" library with economic reality is the continuing challenge for your elected library trustees.

Cordelia Foell
43 Black Horse Lane

1. A Library Trustee has to find the best answers to the sometimes conflicting pressures of: citizens' desire for library services; taxpayers' need to control increases in town expenditures and skilled library staff's right to fair compensation. My service on the Cohasset Library Trustee Board (12 years) and other boards provides me with the experience and judgment necessary to wise decision-making. In addition, I have a strong loyalty to the library. Ours is one of the best-run small libraries in Massachusetts. I will give the time necessary to keep it that way.

2. Three issues stand out for our library: 1) how to respond to increased demand for services; 2) if and when to invest in new technology (automated circulation systems, computerized catalogue, etc.) and 3) how to maintain a library atmosphere in which people like to volunteer. Cohasset has one of the strongest Friends of the Library organizations in the state. These Friends and Volunteers not only save the town money (over $25,000 in 1983), they make our library a warm and friendly place. The Trustees must help to preserve that atmosphere.

John K. McNabb, Jr.
53 Pond St.

1. I have been an avid reader and a heavy user of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library ever since I learned to read. I have always been concerned about the quality and services provided by our library, and would welcome an opportunity to work on behalf of local library services as a member of the Board of Trustees

I am a life long resident of Cohasset and a 1974 graduate of Cohasset High School, where I was Student Council President and a non-voting Student Representative to the School Committee. I graduated from Bowdoin College in 1978.

I work as the Assistant Legislative Liaison for the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE). In this position, I analyze and keep tabs on environmental legislation at the State House and coordinate the response of the DEQE to new initiative in environmental legislation and to inquiries from state Senators and Representatives.

2. I have always been impressed with the quality of service provided to the town by the library staff, and the commitment of the town over the years to providing library services. The residents in Cohasset do have a fine library concerning the size of the town.

There are many new opportunities over the horizon that the library is already looking into — local cable

Selectman candidate Mary Jane McArthur

By Mike Berger

Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur acknowledges the five-member board of selectmen has gone through some turbulent times and dealt with some difficult issues.

After nearly one year of leading the board, Mrs. McArthur said there have been accomplishments but there still is room for improvement.

But she vehemently denies there is dissension on the current five-member board.

When asked what were the issues in the race, she said, "I don't know if any one issue stands out above the others. I recognize there has been an attempt by some to characterize this board as "dissension-ridden.

"On the contrary, this board works together very well. We may disagree on how to approach some issues but we are never disagreeable in discussing our differences. We respect each other's point of view. In fact I can truthfully say that serving on this five-member board has been one of the rewarding experiences I have had during my experiences of town government."

Mrs. McArthur views herself as a team member and is reluctant to personally take credit for the board's accomplishments.

She feels one of her personal assets is her ability to "bring people together. I like to work with a team approach." She also feels her other assets are her organizational ability and her experience in town government.

Besides serving three years as a selectman, she served for four years on the advisory board, two years as vice-chairman, and also terms on the Capital Budget, School Facilities, Govt. Island, Conservation Commission, Historical Commission, the 1970 Bicenntenial Commission and served on a subcommittee on the Planning Board concerning the Coastal Zone Management Commission.

GOALS

Mrs. McArthur feels selectmen should conduct an indepth study and evaluations of all departments under the jurisdiction of selectmen. The goal is to increase department accountability and to improve service delivery.

She said selectmen should continue to have all records of all town departments and committees computerized, especially the town public safety departments.

There is a need to constantly review all ideas and approaches, especially new technology in a more efficient manner, she said.

Selectmen will continue to help the Housing Authority look for ways to provide adequate housing to meet the state ordered agreement. "The authority is theirs (housing authority) and we stand willing to cooperate."

Mrs. McArthur said there is an urgent need to remedy inefficient office space and to continue to meet with other town committees, not under the jurisdiction of selectmen.

"A lack of communication causes many, many problems," she said.

FIRE DEPT.

Mrs. McArthur was asked to assess the Fire Dept. problems and solutions to these problems.

"I think it is reasonable to expect there might be an

Selectman candidate John DeBassio

By Jane Lane

"I think my personal strength is my record - as Cohasset Police Chief and as a selectman member for the past year. The other portion of this answer, goes in part and parcel with that. And that is what I bring to this community - something unique - over 20 years of municipal service and experience, as a police administrator and as a selectman," John DeBassio answered.

"With my background, there is a familiarity with the way the system works. I know most of the procedures, rules and regulations, budget processes. I am very familiar with the Civil Service system, the rules and regulations of hearings, and iicensing, which is an important function of the board. I think my experience and knowledge in these areas of municipal government, and my ability to deal with people, are the greatest attributes I bring to this position." he added.

Goals

"I think the board of selectmen as a whole wants to play a larger role in some of the things the various boards and commissions are doing. We are not looking for a leadership role. But one thing I would like to do, is to understand the priorities of the other town boards. We must provide them with the resources selectmen can make available, to achieve their specificed goals. More importantly, selectmen can ensure that all boards are working toward the same goals they were assigned. In everything I do, I want to ensure that the majority of the community will benefit. This includes the issue of the landfill, and the testing of the water quality. One of my major concerns right now is to get improved transportation for the South Shore.

Another personal goal for this selectman is, "my dedication to refurbish or construct a new Town Hall. There is simply not room for all our commissions and boards to meet. We have to provide an atmosphere that is conducive to work, for our town employees and commitee members. The town has to decide whether they want a theatre or municipal offices. We can't have both in one facility. The town must decide whether to restore this building and keep the theatre, and then we must move the municipal offices into a more efficient building, " he continued.

Fire Dept.

The former Cohasset Police Chief does not intend to "complicate the issue" by commenting on the job performance of Fire Chief Martin Dooley, and the personnel problems with that department., He does state, however, "there has been a tendency to look more to their particular interests - both the chief and the association. They tend to see only their problems, and as a result, the community suffers. The two sides have remained adamant. Until they are prepared to sit down and talk about the differences, that situation will continue. There are indications that they are at least talking now, and that's encouraging.

"It is the selectmen's position, that we will do whatever we can to create a situation which will induce communication between the two sides," he added.

DeBassio has favored enlisting the assistance of an outside consultant to review the fire department problems. "There are a number of issues that were incorrectly perceived as one overall issue," he explained. There is the problem between the fire chief and the association. And there is an extension of that difference of opinion, over the operation of the fire department. I think there are separate issues, more than enough work to be done by a professional consultant - to look into ways to improve the service to the town. This professional would have looked into equipment needs, reorganization of the department, staff levels, and perhaps physical plant changes. The relationship between the chief and his men is another separate and distinct issue," he added.

annual budget which had been the center of local debate for weeks, was approved. The $4,065,335 school appropriations, which finally received endorsement from the advisory committee last week, seemed to slip its way through the midst of the town budget.

If the school administrators were prepared for a battle, it was not to be, as they walked away victorious and unscathed. In addition to the lack of fireworks regarding the budget, the committee's request for $1/2 million for roof repairs met with unified approval. Not a single negative utterance eminated from the crowd gathered at the high school auditorium.

Chairman Conley explained that the Deer Hill and high school roofs have lasted beyond their expectancy. Architectural surveys of the structures convinced the school committee that further deferrment of repairs would lead to a public safety hazard, and the structural deterioration of the buildings.

The superintendent, Conley added, has been notified that Cohasset's application for a match state grant has been recommended for funding. That state money will fund not less than 50 percent of the total cost of the roof repairs, Conely noted.

Advisory committee member Jacqueline Dormitzer emphasized the necessity of immediate repairs to the roofs "to ensure the safety and architecture of the school buildings."

Without any further discussion, the request was approved by a voice vote that excluded a single negative opinion.

The Board of Health, on the other hand, could have borrowed from the school committee's reserve of luck. The board's request for a front end loader was ditched by voters who were swayed by the advisory committee and selectmen's arguments against the acquisition.

Selectman Frank England, who used to sell heavy equipment for a private corporation, urged voters to defeat the proposal, saying the health board had not investigated alternative, less expensive pieces of machinery.

What may have critically harmed the health board's argument was the absence of landfill operator Joseph Laugelle. Board chairman Marilyn Sweeney, admittedly not an expert regarding heavy equipment, made the presentation to town meeting.

Sweency urged voters to appropriate $20,000 for the purchase of a rubber tire front end loader to be used to transport trash bins at the landfill. The current tractor machine, in need of constant repairs, would have remained at the landfill for compaction purposes.

Reasoning that a special town meeting will be held in June or July, England told voters to postpone appropriations for a machine until the matter is more thoroughly researched.

remain the same issues until or unless the Board of Selectmen take a more positive approach in exercising leadership qualities.

If elected, I will provide those needed leadership qualities.

Low-Income Housing

I will support a realistic approach to a low-income housing issue which is mandated by state law. I will assist and support the Cohasset Housing Authority by the powers entrusted in them by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the residents of Cohasset.

The Hardest Job if Elected

The most difficult task will be, when vital decisions must be made in the best interest of our community and its residents.

I will do so with integrity, fortitude and the common sense which must be behind all rational decisions.

It is said that Rio de Janeiro is the world's most beautiful city. Eight million "Cariocas" (Rio residents) live beside the sparking blue-green bays that splash up to soft, white sandy beaches. There is a still lagoon at the city's center, and bare mountain peaks, fringed with lush tropical forest, surround its outskirts. Rio's manmade features are equally impressive and include mosaic-tiled boulevards flanked by sleek high-rises, fine museums and theaters, glamorous shops and nightclubs, lazy sidewalk cafes and swank hotels that look like wedding cakes. However there is more that sets Rio apart. It has a lightheartedness and cosmopolitan sensuality that no movie, song or dance, except maybe the sultry bossanova, created here, has ever managed to capture.

School committee candidate George Marlette

1. What personal strengths or assets do you bring to the school committee?

"I believe my greatest asset is my capacity to work very hard," candidate George Marlette said. "This is evidenced by my educational qualifications. I am now proficient on legal computers, which will be an effective tool for the committee, to monitor legislation affecting the committee and the Cohasset school system.

"It is very important that all school committee members spend time monitoring legislation, or on the telephone, or in the library researching issues—doing their homework," he adds.

"I have said before, nothing breeds rhetoric like the absence of fact. Many hours of research have to be accomplished by any member of the committee if we are to make well-informed decisions. That way, we can dispense with a lot of rhetoric that takes place at committee meetings," Marlette adds.

2. What are the committee's weaknesses—the goals of the school committee?

"I think the school committee must make a serious attempt to gather all the additional facts they need to make informed decisions," he answers. "When meetings are conducted, they must take the time to get the facts. I would like to see one committee member, perhaps even an additional member added to the committee, to be named assignment coordinator. That person would have the responsibility of making assignments to various members, and to ensure we are doing the exact assignments. After all the data is compiled, the committee would study all the information—and be able to make completely informed decisions," Marlette suggests.

"The goal of the committee is to be an advocate of all the people in Cohasset. The elderly, who once participated in the system—we should maintain their input. Perhaps the school committee could sponsor a series of coffees and invite our elderly citizens. I bet the halls would be packed. We could tell them about the schools, what we plan for our students. Help them to be informed about the system they have helped support for so long. We also need to get the 18 to 24 year-olds involved again in the school system," Marlette continues. "One good idea may be a newsleter we could send to the college kids—bring them up to date on what is happening in their hometown community."

"The school committee, as fact compilers, should gather all the information pertaining to the schools, relating to the budget, plant management, and our long range planning ideas, into one comprehensible form, and let the community know what is happening in their schools," he adds.

3. Assess the performance of school administrators, including the superintendent. Strengths and weaknesses.

"First, I think Mr. Crowell does his homework and prepares well. But I think all the school administrators should work more closely with the school commitee. Individual teachers and department heads should encourage the participation and attendance of school committee members in their classes, to observe.

When we are discussing such topics as class size, let's see how a teacher can conduct a class with 30 students, or with 13. School principals have a lot of needs for their schools. They should actively encourage the participation of the school committee, to come into the school and observe. They should also enlist the active support of more parents," Marlette says.

"Overall the administrators, and particularly the superintendent are doing a great job," he adds. "Stephen Hart's assuming of his new role in the school department is a step in the right direction."

4. Thoughts on computer curriculum.

"First, I want to explode the myths surrounding computers. People think we are starting at the elementary schools and finishing at the high school, to make all our students computer programmers. We are simply introducing our students to the role of the computer in today's society," Marlette said.

A computer analyst himself, Marlette adds, "a computer should serve as a remedial, tutorial tool to education. It is not a substitute for math or physics or chemistry or English. If we can teach our children the fundamentals of computers, it can be a very effective remedial tool to supplement our education. We are not talking about Buck Rogers, we are talking about a learning aide. It is important our kids know computers as a tool to education, realizing the computer is only as good as you are—the same as a calculator.

"I would like computer literacy integrated into our present clasrooms. Not a separate curriculum. In physics, we could teach the kids to find data through the computer. We could integrate the use of computers in several existing programs—music, literature, poetry, communications, the sciences. Perhaps someday our vocational educational classes could even construct a computer terminal for classroom use," he suggested.

School committee candidate Dick Conley

By Mike Berger

School Committee Chairman Dick Conley feels his personal strength is his ability to bring people together and encourage them to come forward with their own ideas.

"I work for the positive aspects of the program," said Conley when asked about the issues in the race for school committee.

"I eliminate the negatives or I don't start out on a project on the negatives. But I look at how to make it better.

"My candidate George Marlette talks about crisis management. I find that interesting and infact take it as a compliment. When Proposition 2½ passed, that was crisis management and we came out of that with great progress. The schools are still turning out great students and the teachers are not suffering from burnout."

"I agree we still should do as much long range planning as possible within our financial limits," Conley said.

"Mrs. Volungis feels there are too many executive sessions but if you check the record we went into executive sessions for bargaining or maybe a grievance or a parent-student issue."

Conley feels he is the best candidate who has the experience to evaluate the entire school system. "I do my homework. I am prepared because my questions have already been answered."He also feels he is experienced in knowledge of building maintenance and construction as he helped to negotiate a price for repair of a school gym floor.

Conley has negotiated contracts for school custodians and secretaries and was part of a negotiating team which bargained with administrators.

He feels his job as a firefighter (acting captain) does not interfere with his work as a school committee negotiator. In fact he acknowledges the State Ethics Commission has given him a clean slate by declaring it is not a conflict of interest for him to serve as a Fire Dept. administrator and as a school committee member.

Conley added it was an anonymous complaint which prompted the Ethics Commission study but they found no violations and he also received an opinion from the school committee's bargaining Atty. Alan Miller which also cleared him of any conflict of interest.

Conley said all school committee negotiations are held in executive session, a trust he says he will never violate.

"After the contract is signed and agreed to, it is an open document. There is nothing I can give to anybody which they can't already have."

Conley acknowledges he hasn't been on the bargaining committee of the firefighters local union for eight years.

His accomplishments as a committee member and chairman are intangible.

"It's something you physically won't see but it's there. It's a climate of caring and fostering an atmosphere which asks, 'What's best for the kids?' It's a spirit of working together, an openness and willingness to solve whatever problems to make the school system better."

"Not one person makes up a school committee but it is a collective team effort," he said.

GOALS

Conley feels the committee should continue its curriculum update and its computer program.

Regarding computers, Conley said, "I believe in it. I know we can't afford it but it does have a place in the school system. It's a great teaching aid."

Conley feels students should be taught how to operate a computer in the Deer Hill School and if students want to continue computer study for a career, they should be allowed to take work-related courses in the Business Dept. of the high school.

Other committee goals will be a school maintenance program and the board must still come to terms with a future reduction in force "for a few years to come."

Conley is excited about cable TV because it will allow the School Dept. to offer team teaching and teacher sharing.

But he also feels cable will help to make a better informed electorate. "Either people will see what's going on in the town by showing up at meetings or showing up at the ballot boxes."

ADMINISTRATORS

Conley is pleased with the collective leadership of the school administrators although he feels the group operates "on a low key."

"They operate on the needs of the school system and plan and live within the budget constraints.

"I think it was a great decision to bring Gene Crowell here. He knows what the committe wants and which way the committee wants to go.

"There can always be improvements but all of our administrators are doing more varied positions. I give them all high marks."

HARDEST ASPECT

Without hesitation, Conley says the hardest aspect of a school committe's job is to tell "Mr. Crowell to tell the teachers they won't have a job. And we have had to tell a person 47 times since Prop. 2½ was passed. How you deal with it is to look at the overall picture and we are still operating a superior system."

Pharmacist. . .

sometimes $5 to $6 below cost.

Gorman said there could be one or two drugs below cost but "by and large we do not sell below cost."

Gorman said MediMart buys drugs for less than small store because it buys in quantity. Wholesale drug prices may vary depending on when they are purchased and from which company.

"No one has discussed that when Medi Mart opens a new store in a market area, we stress a whole program, a program which offers health counseling services to schools and senior citizens," she said.

Harrison's antitrust lawsuit asks that the court enjoin MediMart from selling below cost and asks an undetermined amount for damages and lawyer fees.

Harrison said if the other small drugstores are driven out of business, MediMart will drive the prices up.

Harrison said he would not complain if MediMart prices were consistent in all of his area stores.

He was upset when local and regional newspapers began carrying coupon offerings good only at the Cushing Plaza store. One of the first advertisements offered "$10 off any new or transferred prescription" and another ad urges customers to come in and compare because MediMart is out to save consumers every penny "we can."

Gorman said this is fair competition.

School committee candidate Judy Volungis

By Theresa Sullivan

School Committee candidate Judy Volungis feels her strong interest and background in education are the strengths she would bring to the School Committee.

"This is the second time I've run for this office," she said, adding, "I have a very strong desire to serve on the school committee."

She is the best candidate for the board "Because I know how education works. I understand the teachers' point of view, the taxpayers' point of view and the parents' point of view," Volungis said.

She has a Masters in Education and taught for nine years. She and her husband Dan have two children.

"I'm the only candidate who will have children in both Osgood and Deer Hill schools next year."

Volungis cited her experience and interest in finances as another attribute. She has worked as an accountant-bookkeeper for her husband's business for seven years. "I'm very good with figures."

Asked what the board's weaknesses are, the candidate replied, "I don't know as I'd say they had weaknesses. I'm not totally against what's going on now.

"I think the board has to set goals for itself. My first goal is to set goals for the school committee," she said. Other areas she would work toward are long-range planning, particularly regarding building maintenance and curriculum.

She suggested a curriculum review, where "you re-evaluate some of the old programs, and if they're unnecessary, introduce some innovative things."

The library and text books need to be updated, Volungis said. "We need more relevant materials," she said citing a Deer Hill library reference book on American Presidents in which the current president is listed as Dwight Eisenhower.

"The arts need to be an integral part of basic education; you can do this through teachers' meetings without any additional expense," the candidate continued. "It takes leadership from the principal."

Each month, all the classes could incorporate one artist in their curriculum, with the language classes writing about that artist while learning sentence structure and history classes studying the time in which the person lived, Volungis suggested.

"I fully intend to be fiscally responsible," she said.

Volungis was reluctant to assess the school administrators' performances, saying only, "As a member of the school committee I would have to do that."

Asked her thoughts on computers, she said, "I don't have my mind made up as to what should be done. There is this general rush to buy computers." She said computer companies may be saying students need computers more than they actually do.

"There are a lot of computer experts in Cohasset.

"Before I make a decision on major hardware purchases, I would ask them." This doesn't mean she doesn't favor computers. Mrs. Volungis owns three pieces of computer equipment and has taken computer courses.

"I don't think you can replace a teacher with a computer. I think a child should be exposed to computers, the earlier the better. But I do not see the need to graduate every child in the school system a computer programmer—that should be left to the colleges and technical schools.

"We do have advanced classes for those who are really interested." She said she does not think the school system should panic and feel it has to purchase many more computers immediately. She'd rather spend time investigating the need before spending the money.

"There aren't any real issues in this race," she replied when asked to state the issues. She reiterated her goals of planning, building maintenance and curriculum update.

She said, "I feel I can get along with all the members. I'm a very easy-going person. I just don't see the need for friction.

Volungis said the most difficult job facing a school committee member is "figuring out the budget every year."

She continued, "Declining enrollment. Since 1973, enrollment has declined by 632 students. Although projections for the lower grades indicate an increase in the near future, small classes are just beginning to enter the junior high school. Enrollment at the high school will be decreasing for the next several years."

Promoting community support through a teacher-parent advisory committee is another area the school committee should work on, Volungis said.

"There's a large amount of support within the community but there's another part of the community who look at the dollar sign. There has to be communication between the townspeople and boards."

She felt more people would support the school if they knew more about the school system.

Mary Jane McArthur. . .

unsettled period in a situation where there was 28 years of one administration and two quick changes of administration in less than a year, each with a different background and experience.

"However, it is also reasonable to expect a new administration will bring new ideas and approaches. There must be a firm commitment by all that any differences that do exist will be dealt with by open communication, frank discussion, mutual respect and understanding all points of view."

EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza, said Mrs. McArthur, has done an overall "good job" in 18 months of work.

"His role is a little bit different than his predecessor (Arthur Clark.) The board has expanded to five members and his role is difficult in a very busy office.

"I could see areas of improvement such as the improvement of response to a citizens' requests. Mark has done a good job keeping the board informed and researching issues. I think as time goes on it will be necessary for the board to delegate more responsibility to him," she said.

MEDICAL SERVICES COMMITTEE

Mrs. McArthur was asked what the role of the Emergency Medical Services Committee should be?

"This committee could assist the Fire Chief and the Emergency Medical Technician Instruction Coordinator and the men to improve ambulance service. The committee should consist of professionals with the knowledge and experience in emergency medical services."

"This committee should not be perceived as a watchdog committee but should act in an advisory capacity to the Fire Dept. The committee should not report to selectmen but work with the chief and then if there are problems, then they should talk it over with selectmen."

Mrs. McArthur feels the possibility of a public safety commissioner is a long range consideration but will not support merging the Police and Fire Depts. together.

"Firefighters shouldn't be doing police work and vice versa. There should be some cooperation as there is now and we are looking definitely at a civilian central dispatcher.

"As far as the public safety commissioner, that's a ways down the road. I will not advocate that now without greatly looking into it. I'm not ruling it out though."

HARDEST ASPECT

"It has to be communicating with people - the residents of Cohasset. With all due respect to the media, there are times when I read a newspaper account of our meeting and I wonder if I attended the same meeting which was reported.

"All too often citizens will form their opinions of the effectiveness of town government by what they read in a newspaper. This is most unfortunate."

"This is the reason I feel a periodic newsletter and informal dropin sessions are necessary. These sessions will give citizens an opportunity to express their opinions on issues, make suggestions and elect responses from their elected officials.

"Selectmen have to make difficult decisions based on what we feel our best judgement is for all the people. It is never our intent to raise a hardship on anyone. The board has tried to be fair and consistent in their policy and not to make exceptions to set a precedent," said McArthur.

Voters election guide...

The selectman explained that demands on the part-time selectmen are great, and he encouraged the concept of the outside consultant "to remove the study, so no political implications could be involved. But the mandate of the town meeting was for selectmen to conduct the study, and we are doing that. Our survey will look into management policies and practices, organization, staffing and equipment needs.

Executive Secretary

"Two things have occurred to affect the position of Executive Secretary. First, Mark Lanza was hired about a year ago, and then three months later, the Selectmen expanded to five members. During the past year, the brand new town officials had to define for themselves the kinds of services they expected from staff members. And the new Executive Secretary had to adjust to a new community, and a new Board of Selectmen at the same time. It has worked our fairly well despite these problems. The workload has increased with the five-member board, and we've gone through some growing pains. But I believe Cohasset is operating more smoothly and efficiently," DeBassio answered. That was the basic reason for the change in the structure of the town's government he added.

Ambulance Service Committee

"Selectmen and the ambulance study committee have agreed that the ambulance should remain in the fire department, but the service should be updated," he noted. "The current ambulance should be replaced and the quality of the EMT training should be upgraded. I would like to see our EMTs trained in cardiac treatment. Certain equipment must be improved. The committee has done a pretty thorough job in reviewing the current fire department regulations. Their members, who include some medical professionals, have looked into alternative services and training programs, and into all the medical services available here. They have come up with some solid recommendations," he said.

Public Safety

"I have advocated the concept of a Public Safety Commissioner - a single administrator hired to manage the fire and police departments. The town is not prepared for this idea. The idea came about as a result of talks some months ago when we were looking into a central dispatcher and the use of the 911 emergency number," DeBassio explained. "We were thinking of perhaps joining the fire and police department resources. Some people tend to relate that idea to its extreme, that police officers will do firefighters work, and the other way around. That's not the concept I brought forth. The idea is to have a common administrator, an experienced manager, supervising both departments. The administrator would be responsible for training, he would supervise management, and equipment needs, develop policies and procedures and schedule activities. The two departments are not that diverse that it would not be done. But the time was right to think about it when I resigned, along with the former fire chief and there are two vacancies. It's a mute point now," he added.

Issues

"I see the major issue in this race as one of management style," DeBassio continued. "I don't see many other specific issues per say. The race centers on the candidates' management style and the voters' perception of who will do a better job. Last year, with the sewers, there were some issues. I don't see this as an issue-oriented race."

Hardest Aspect

Pondering this question for several seconds, DeBassio thoughtfully explained, "the hardest aspect of this position is that most of the issues deal with people you know and like. Many times you would like to be able to take the most popular position. But if you serve with integrity, you must vote on those issues, based upon what is good for the majority of the community, not one particular faction.

"The other difficult aspect is the lack of time to effectively attend all the meetings and to keep yourself as well informed as you would like, in other areas of the community." DeBassio continued.

"The demands of the job are great - a little bit more than I expected when I first ran last year. But Cohasset is a very well-intentioned community, and the people here have made my wife and I feel a part of it since we first moved here. That's the reason wny I want to tackle this job again," he said.

Low Income Housing

"It is the task of the Housing Authority to develop a program in compliance with state standards. There are a number of options they can follow. The first option was the Government Island house, the second thing would be to petition the state to buy a number of homes and certify them as low income housing, and the third might be to gather some rental units and turn them over to the Housing Authority for the same purpose. I was against the Government Island property - one of the most valuable pieces of real estate in town, and because we would have to partition part of the property to the Housing Authority. That property has always been seen as recreational land, and I wouldn't want to change that use. The Housing Authority must continue to pursue the other available options, buy homes, rent apartments, whatever is necessary to meet the state guidelines." DeBassio concluded.

T.V. programming and a regional system to computerize library card catalogs and records to name two.

As a Trustee, I would work with the other Trustees to do what we could to increase the size of the library budget — since the real overriding concern which overshadows the rest is that the budget has not grown while inflation and the cost of books has. I think the Trustees could take a more active role in working for an increased budget, equitable pay for library employees, and in some long-range planning on facilities and services.

If elected, I will first take some time to review the current budget situation, policies, procedures, facilities, and services, so my approach to those issues will always be an informed approach.

MODERATOR
one position — three years
William D. Weeks
130 Border St.

1. I have served as Town Moderator since July, 1981, and believe that I have demonstrated the capacity to run the several town meetings we have had in the interim fairly, expeditiously and with a thorough knowledge of the rules governing meetings. In addition, my background and experience as a practicing attorney, former member of the Massachusetts Senate, and President and presiding officer of many organizations, both public and private, fully qualify me to continue serving as Town Moderator.

2. Our Open Town Meeting is a unique form of local government, in which all voters can participate. We need to devote continual efforts to strengthen and preserve the Town Meeting System. Turnouts at the meetings are lower than they should be, especially at Special Town Meetings. I shall continue to seek ways of increasing attendance at Town Meetings and urge the League to do likewise. I shall also strive to make the meetings interesting, enjoyable, and a worthwhile expenditure of time for all who attend.

The Moderator also plays a key role in the appointment process. I spend a considerable amount of time on the appointing authority seeking out, evaluating and appointing public-spirited townspeople to town boards and committees. In this way, the Moderator does much to ensure the continuation of volunteer participation in the public problems and concerns of our town.

PLANNING BOARD
one position — five years
Deborah Cook
281 King St.

1. As a former urban planner and a May, 1984 MBA candidate at Northeastern University, I can bring both planning and management training to the Planning Board. While I worked as a planner for the City of Houston, I developed a $40 million parks plan, along with a number of neighborhood improvement plans. I also served as a mayoral aide and assistant director of the Mayor's Office in Houston. I have written various grant applications and worked with state and federal agencies on a marina feasibility study for the Town of Hull. Furthermore, as a newspaper correspondent for the former Mirror Newspapers, I covered Cohasset's Planning Board for two years and learned first-hand how it operates.

My primary concerns are a belief in and dedication to maintaining Cohasset's unique character, while providing for controlled growth. I believe Cohasset's special beauty can only be preserved by careful long-range planning and strict adherence to the zoning bylaws.

2. The most significant problem I see facing the Town, and consequently the Planning Board, is to reconcile the pressure for growth on Cohasset and the desire to maintain it as a small semi-rural town.

Although the Planning Board's primary responsibility is to uphold the zoning bylaw, its routine weekly decisions should not prevent it from planning ahead five or ten years. The Planning Board should determine what Cohasset will be like in 1990 under our present zoning by-law. To do this, the first step must be a census of developable land, which will give an indication of future growth potential. If the projected growth seems unacceptable, the Planning Board should recommend modifications of the zoning by-law (in conformance with state regulations) to direct Cohasset to a more acceptable level of growth.

In sum, the Planning Board must not only react to planning issues as they occur, it must also anticipate problems by developing a long-range comprehensive plan for Cohasset.

Patrick A. Plante
798 Jerusalem Rd.

I have been an active member of the Planning Board for the past three years, and hope the citizens of Cohasset will give me the opportunity to continue serving our community. During this time, I have gained valuable experience from former dedicated members, John Bradley, Patricia Facey, and Barbara Power, which I feel is a great asset.

2. One of the most significant problems that I would address as a member of the Planning Board, is the cooperation of this board with other town boards, to find a satisfactory solution to the state-required low income housing.

I feel that this position affords me the opportunity to maintain a balance within our present board relative to this issue.

RECREATION COMMISSION
two positions — four years
Terese England Duggan
431 King St.

1. For the past two years I have been employed by a Boston law firm as an office manager in charge of the personnel and financial departments. I have a degree from the University of Massachusetts in Elementary Educations.

As a student at Cohasset High School, and a resident of the town for over a fourteen year period, I have participated in various town-wide recreation programs. At C.H.S., I played field hockey, softball, and basketball. For a two-year period I was the Swim Team Coach for the Cohasset Swim Center. I was also Swim Team Coach for the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club for one year.

My interest in recreation more recently was in 1982 and 1983 when I acted as a volunteer Soccer Coach for the Recreation Commission.

My sports background and ability, as well as my keen interest in recreational activities, in addition to the fact that my husband and I have made our home in Cohasset, should make me a stong candidate for the Recreation Commission.

2. Recreation areas and activities are essential to people of all ages. The Commission has done an outstanding job of offering and scheduling a variety of recreational programs. This job has been difficult at times, for the Recreation Commission has had to go through various channels to gain access to different recreational facilities. One central town authority in charge of delegating the use of public grounds would insure recreational areas are being used to their fullest extent and by all residents.

The Recreation Commission needs members who are willing to work hard by listening and pursuing Cohasset's recreational needs. I would like the opportunity to do so and would appreciate your vote.

SEWER COMMISSION
one position — three years
Edward M. Guild
365 Jerusalem Road

1. My most important qualification for the Office of Sewer Commissioner is my year of service on the Board of Sewer Commissioners. In the past year, the Board has made decisions which will have far reaching impact on our town. I believe that my familiarity with the developmenmt of the Alternate Step One Facilities Plan is extremely important for the effective performance of the duties of Sewer Commissioner over the next two to three years.

I am the only businessman on the current Board of Sewer Commissioners. At a time when millions of dollars of public money (local, state, and federal) will be committed, I believe that at least one member of the Board should have an extensive business background.

In my business experience, I have engaged in complex contract negotiations with governments, industry and consulting engineers and have been responsible for the specification and sale of complex systems for water treatment and purification worldwide.

Property owner and taxpayer.

2. In contrast to last year when I responded to the LWV questionnaire, today I foresee far more opportunities for our town than problems. A year ago, the question of alternative waste water treatment was the subject of intense debate. This question has now been resolved in three separate town meetings and in the election of a new majority to the Board of Sewer Commissioners. In each instance, the Town has stated its position unequivocally. Therefore, the problem of "what to do" has been resolved.

The opportunity that lies ahead is the implementation of an alternative plan to waste water disposition throughout the Town. I expect that this will require most of my upcoming three year term, and I look forward to bringing to fruition the work that has been commenced so successfully over the last 18 months.

My objective in implementing the Cohasset waste water plan is--as it was a year ago--coverage of the entire Town rather than a restricted area, while preserving the quality of life and the environment which mean so much to all of us. I shall endeavor to achieve these objectives at a cost which lies within the constraints of Proposition 2-1/2 and will not impair other essential Town services.

RECREATION COMMISSION
one position — five years
Alna Ekberg
66 Nichols Rd.

1. I have a bachelor's degree in physical education which included courses in development and management of community recreation programs. For the past five years I have been a member of the Recreation Commission to which I am seeking re-election.

2. The most significant problem for the Recreation Commission will be the ability to meet the needs of the community under the financial restraints placed on the department due to Proposition 2-1/2. The challenge will be to continue offering as many recreational opportunities as possible for townspeople of all ages with a budget that has been substantially reduced.

two positions — four years
Robin (Roberta) Suhrbier
178 South Main St.

1. As a candidate for the Recreation Commission, I feel that my extensive community involvement in Cohasset and other communities give me excellent experience for working with the Cohasset Recreation Commission, the town and its residents. I have the energy and enthusiasm for planning programs for the kids, teenagers and adults. My involvement in Cohasset includes spring and fall soccer programs, forming a ski racing program for Cohasset kids through Blue Hill, junior high representative on the PSO Board, Cohasset Boosters Club and other activities. I have previously served as a member of a recreation commission for a suburb of Minneapolis. I would like to continue my involvement with the town through the Cohasset Recreation Commission.

2. I feel the Cohasset Recreation Commission has accomplished a lot for the residents of Cohasset. Participation in its summer programs, its soccer teams, its skiing program are all evidence of the on going need for community recreation programs. I would like to continue to work for the current programs and toward an expansion of some of the programs. I would encourage a good mix of programs--athletic, special events, playground, non-athletic. I would work to maintain a close alliance between the town and the recreation department. One of the more significant problems the recreation commission faces is to continue to generate sufficient participation in its programs in light of the declining number of children at the elementary age over the next few years.

1. Superintendent of Tree and Park Department, ten years. Interested and involved with all sports activities at the schools during this period of time.

Cohasset Representative to Wampatuck State Park Advisory Board, three years.

2. Harbor area for recreational purposes.

SELECTMEN
two positions — three years
John A. DeBassio
6 Norfolk Road

1. As a candidate for re-election to a full three-year term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, I offer twenty-one years of municiple government experience and community service. During my tenure as Chief of the Cohasset Police Department and most recently as an elected member of the newly constituted five-man Board of Selectmen, I have spoken and acted publicly on a variety of issues of concern to the community and its residents. My record and my service have been founded on the law, and my goal and commitment continues to be on air, efficient and responsive government service to all of Cohasset's citizens.

2. The most significant challenge to be undertaken by the Town will be to effectively construct and/or refurbish the Town's buildings, develop common goals for the various boards and advisory groups and establish long term financial plans to facilitate the orderly growth of the Town.

In the wake of Proposition 2-1/2 we must continue to protect our environment and natural resources, reaffirm our commitment to quality education for our children, and complete sewer, clean water, landfill and harbor projects which are intended to ensure the quality of life of all of our citizens.

dedication to the Town of Cohasset. For over 23 years I have served the Town in many capacities, including the Advisory Committee, Capital Budget Committee, School Facilities Committee, Government Island Committee, Conservation Commission, and the Historical Commission. For the past three years I have served as a member of the Board of Selectmen and as Chairman of the Board for the past year. Based on my experience and extensive knowledge of town government I believe that I possess the qualities that are necessary for this position. I will continue to represent all the citizens and will continue to approach all issues even-handedly.

2. The Board of Selectmen will face many issues during the next three years. Some of the issues are current, such as the resolution of our sewer problem, finding a solution for our overcrowded office facility, housing for our public works department, meeting the requirements for adequate housing for our citizens, and the renovation of the Police and Fire headquarters.

Many issues are on-going such as long range planning for solid waste disposal, effective dog control, the enforcement of rules, regulations, and by-laws, and the need to constantly review new ideas which will promote a more efficient delivery of services to meet the needs of our citizens. Opportunities exist for improving communication, developing and updating policies and procedures, developing and instituting a performance appraisal approach for employees, integrating the use of the computer in town departments, including our public safety departments, and addressing problems in a planned and logical way rather than reacting only to crises.

Doris Golden
2 Bound Brook Lane

1. I have had extensive experience in the town governing process of Cohasset serving on the School Committee for six years, five of which I served as Chairman, having been elected by my peer group. I managed and was responsible for the expenditure of over 23 million of your hard earned tax dollars.

The managing of this department with over 210 in personnel and budget requirements making up over 50% of the town's annual budget is certainly a good example of my ability to plan and manage a large board. During my tenure on the Committee some of the most difficult problems in the history of the Cohasset School Committee were encountered. By exercising the qualities of leadership, group diplomacy accompanied by a lack of confrontation politics--these problems were resolved in a positive conclusive manner. While I was on the School Committee all of the varied facets of personnel management were encountered and harmoniously resolved.

2. The major problems confronting Cohasset during the next term of office are sewerage, the ever present dump problem, the sensible, orderly development of the town, the Fire Department skirmishes and Proposition 2-1/2 with its severe but fair financial restrictions. Some of these problems will be present throughout and beyond the next term of office. I propose that through intelligent leadership utilizing the many fine elected and appointed officials that decent workable alternatives and solutions to these problems can be realized. I intend to speak out on all of these vital issues even if I cannot directly determine their outcome.

We must encourage the voters to attend Town Meetings and exercise their democratic privilege by voting at said meetings and in the General Election.

In conclusion, any individual in this community can approach me on any problem that they are facing and I will treat them with the respect and dignity that they are entitled to.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE
one position — three years
Richard M. Conley
10 Holly Lane

1. My three years on the School Committee have given me the experience to make the crucial decisions when needed. I have the ability to listen to and hear what the people are saying and to get answers to their questions. My accessibility has made it easier for some parents and children to have their problems addressed. I have attended many seminars on budget planning, negotiations, public relations, and work shops on problem solving. Some of these ideas have been incorporated into our weekly meetings.

2. One of the most significant problems we will be facing is the declining enrollment. How we handle the staff reduction will have a far reaching effect on our educational problems. A budget that will meet the needs of our school system must be provided. Cable T.V. could provide us an opportunity to develop new ideas. Smaller class sizes could be a great educational benefit to our school. We must maintain the good working relationship that has been developed between the teachers, administrators, and the School Committee.

George L. Marlette, III
31 Rustic Drive

1. As a recent college graduate who worked closely with the Faculty and Administration while at Gettysburg College, and now, as a law student and member of the Student Bar Association Board of Governors at New England School of Law, I can bring to the School Committee the contemporary perspective, objectivity, and current awareness and insights of a non-parent very personally acquainted with college and graduate school admissions' standards and processes, as well as conversant with the job and career marketplace. In addition, my previous experience as a computer programmer for the Department of the Attorney General will enable me to provide facts and "tight logic" on the ongoing questions of compputer literacy for our students.

I have a history of community involvement in the Jaycee Program as well as the American Youth Soccer Organization which I served as a Coach for 4 years. Finally, I have the interest, ideas, energy and a commitment to a contemporized but traditional curriculum for the Cohasset Public Schools.

2. The greatest opportunity for an incoming School Committee member will lie in working with fellow members and Superintendent Crowell and his staff to develop the kinds of long range planning in both curriculum and operational management that is so essential to maintain the quality of education in our schools in the upcoming decade. In addition, the challenge of sustaining the widespread positive public image of our schools must not be overlooked--because this reputation enhances property values in Cohasset's real estate.

Judy Volungis
234 Forest Avenue

1. I believe I can provide a dual perspective on the School Committee, as both a parent and an experienced educator.

My professional background is as follows: I hold a B.A. in Government from the University of Mass-Amherst, an M.Ed. in Elementary Education from Worcester State College, with several post-graduate hours at the University of Missouri.

In addition to my educational training, I have nine years of active teaching experience in the elementary grades and also have trained and evaluated student teachers from several colleges. For the past seven years I have served as Secretary-Treasurer of Air Source Express, Inc. and have managed the accounting and record keeping for this corporation. I am Treasurer for the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, and Program Director of the Cohasset Community Center.

I have served as a volunteer in the schools for many years, was a representative to the Osgood Communication Council for three years, and Deer Hill representative on the Arts Enrichment Committee of the Parent School Organization.

I believe my election would introduce an element of professionalism to the School Committee. My experience as an educator, a parent, and in fiscal management could strengthen the committee and help us all achieve a superior system of education.

2. Without question, the biggest problem facing the School Committee in the next decade will be that of declining enrollment. Since 1973, enrollment in Cohasset has declined by 632 students. Although projections for the lower grades indicate in increase in the near future, small classes are just beginning to enter the junior high school, and enrollment at the high school will be decreasing for the next several years. The task of the School Committee will be to maintain the integrity of the core curriculum as well as provide diversification through electives, the arts, and athletics. Equally important, and inherently related, will be the task of maintaining teacher morale and motivation through these difficult years.

WATER COMMISSION
one position — three years
Jeffrie A. Bettinger
84 Summer Street

1. To the Board of Water Commissioners I can bring the benefit of over nine years experience in water chemistry and treatment. While in the U.S. Navy and college, I performed some of the same water chemistry analyses done at our water treatment plant. As a chemical engineering student at Michigan Technological University, my speciality was water and waste treatment design. This background combining operating experience and design knowledge will aid the Board when it considers technical questions.

Financial problems are also a major concern. My experience as an Engineer at Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation includes the development of capital and operating budgets for chemical processing facilities. I will apply this experience when developing operating budgets.

In addition, I can bring a new energy and enthusiasm to the Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners. My energy combined with my technical and budgetary experience would make me a truly effective member of the Board.

2. Without a comprehensive watershed protection plan, our water supply is in danger. My priority as a Water Commissioner will be the protection of our water supply. Presently we deal with potential sources of pollution on a case by case basis, but the key to future protection is planning.

The second most serious problem facing the Board of Water Commissioners is financial. Every year since the new treatment plant came on-line, the department has operated at a deficit. Tighter reins must be held over the budget. For example, last year approximately 14 percent of the billings were uncollected. This is unacceptable!! My first goal will be to reduce these outstanding bills.

In addition, I plan to continue working with the State to obtain all available grants to be used in improving our water distribution system to improve service to the Water Department customers, the residents of Cohasset.

Arne K. Gjesteby
81 Old Pasture Road

1. Practical business experience derived from being owner and manager of a Boston ship supply company.

The Water Department is a Town operated business. The same abilities that I have developed through the years in my own business, will be a great asset in implementing cost effective operations in the Water Department.

Business education.

Law degree from the University of Oslo, 1950. Completed studies for an MBA at Northeastern University, 1956.

Property owner and taxpayer in Cohasset since 1961.

2. Problems: apparent deterioration of quality of water reaching residents. The dangers arising from water pollution. Broken or obsolete water meters. Lack of market for treatment plants full capacity. Constantly increasing deficits and/or water rates. Uncollected water bills.

Opportunities: Continue improvement of distribution system as recommended in the S.E.A. report. Take action to prevent pollution of water supply. Expedite replacement of broken and obsolete water meters with outside meters. Investigate and evaluate the sale of water to surrounding towns. Examine, and if possible improve cost effectiveness of all operations. Increased effort to collect unpaid water bills.

William J. Montuori
47 Brewster Road

1. I am a Massachusetts licensed Professional Engineer in the Civil Engineering discipline, as well as a Registered Land Surveyor. All of the work related to Water Works requires expertise in the Civil Engineering discipline.

I am a member of the New England Water Works Association, Director of the Massachusetts Association of Land Surveyors and Civil Engineers, the Design Professionals Government Affairs Council, and serve on the Executive Board of the Engineering Societies of New England.

My expertise is in the design of Water Supply and Distribution Systems.

2. We are embarking on a major construction program. In the past due to the Department's lack of Construction Management expertise, large amounts of funds had to be expended for extras and claims unnecessarily made by the Contractor. I am the only person in the Department familiar with the laws related to Public Works Bidding and Construction. I was the person in the Department who determined that the Cohasset Height's Landfill was in the water shed of our supply system.

In the past one major problem has been the lack of understanding of the ownership and the transfer of control of new water lines constructed by developers. I have instituted procedures to eliminate the problem and I presently review all plans, easements and written descriptions. I acquaint the Department personnel and other members of the Commission on these matters.

This type of expertise, both Engineering and Land Surveying, which includes all the legal aspects of property easements, as related to ownership plans, would require the hiring of a Consultant at a considerable cost to the Department.

TOWN CLERK
one position — five years
Frances L. Marks
16 Hill Street

1. Under the unusual circumstances by which the tenured Town Clerk has been classified as a part-time person and the Assistant Town Clerk as a full-time person, I have handled all of the details of the Town Clerk's office for thirteen years. I am thoroughly familiar with all of the functions of the office which include the registration and election process, Town meetings, recording vital statistics, the annual census and the many other duties prescribed by the General Laws.

2. The significant problems are to re-structure, update, and improve office procedures to better handle the increasing work load; to make more efficient use of whatever clerical assistance is provided by the Town Meeting, and to continue to improve and expand the computerizing of voting lists, street lists, and other town records. The opportunity is to work as the elected Town Clerk with full authority to move toward the above goals and to make the office more responsive to the needs of the Town Government and the citizens as a whole.

Kingdom of the Kingfisher, a bird worth watching

By F. B. Dunn

Between Sanctuary Pond near North Main Street and Joy Place Marsh off Jerusalem Road lies a narrow flyway little more than a mile in length which joins the summer and winter domains of an American Belted Kingfisher.

Unquestionably others of the species live in Norfolk County, but this is Cohasset's own.

His age we do not know precisely, but it is at least four years. This is proved by the evidence of numerous nesting burrows in the area of Sanctuary Pond, some seasons' dwellings being in Pape's loam pits and last year's in a clay bank well fronted by brush on the southeast side of the pond.

The kingfisher under description is a male, and he has a mate — a long term one from all appearances — that summers with him, yet makes herself scarce in winter.

It is not certain that this female migrates south at the appropriate season because some female or other does join the male occasionally on bright, fair winter days for an hour's sky-larking around the marsh. Whatever the case, her absences are long; there is just the possibility that she spends these months chiefly near Bellarmine House in Cohasset Harbor.

I have seen one there every so often in winter, and there is no confusing the female with the male: she has a brown band on her breast below the blue one which both of them show there; in other ways they are identical.

I had trudged over the ditches and trod the grasses of the bird's winter residence for many weeks when it became clear that he had no intention of passing the summer in the marsh. There were too many daily departures to the southwest in March to doubt that, much as my friend liked the almost always open water of the brackish stream dividing the marsh, he had no intention of nesting in that vicinity.

Something to the southwest had a greater attraction when that project was in order, hence the pond, with its desirable terrain for tunneling.

The kingfisher is a single-minded bird: when it fishes it submerges completely, and when it builds a nest for its young it does it at the end of an earthen burrow ten feet long. It is, all in all, a considerable bird, this Cohasset denizen: capable, wary, brainy, and a superb flyer when it isn't loafing.

Like all raptors it does loaf a lot, saving its brilliancy for important events. In this, it is not dissimilar from a crafty prizefighter, who saves himself for the later rounds, or the racehorse that the rider "rates" until the closing moments of the contest.

The scientific names of birds, when translated, are not as descriptive as one would wish; the situation with the kingfisher is hopeless. Megaceryle means only "large kingfisher."

If, however, the technical terms painted this Jerusalem Road commuter, which anyone may see who has the time, as a hardy winterer of weather that even herring gulls shun, a patient thunderbolt of a hunter that connects as often as not, and a great-hearted herald of happy days that comes to cheer its watcher with angelic swoops then we'd be nearer the truth.

The most distinctive feature of the kingfisher is its voice. If you wait at the appropriate season at the marsh or along the short shore of Sanctuary Pond, within a reasonable time — for it's a faithful prey for the watcher or the photographer - and hear the sound of radio static, the bird is near. This call varies from a passable Morse-code signal to a furious cackling that is indistinguishable from that of a barnyard hen. The bird is notable in its physique too: it has a crest that is retracted in flight; and its legs are impossibly short. Its beak is the profile of a tailor's shears and is jet black. The dominant colors of the feathers are blue and white. Some books liken this aquatic raptor to a blue jay, but your real bird fancier cannot be deceived.

Go to Sanctuary Pond this summer, when the Commuter information stations formed

For those area residents still looking for alternatives to driving the Southeast Expressway every day, CARAVAN for Commuters, Inc. has brought the answers closer to home.

In over two dozen cities and towns throughout southeastern Massachusetts, CARAVAN's new "Commuter Information Stations" brings together all the information approrpiate to commuter transportation from each particular locality.

With the cooperation of local officials, CARAVAN has set up the displays in libraries and town halls for the convenience of residents.

The Commuter Information Stations variously include free handouts detailing private bus services, the MBTA system, commuter rail, the South Shore commuter boats, and Caravan's own vanpool operation and free carpool matching service.

Other materials list the free Park and Ride facilities provided by the state Department of Public Works; shuttles to rail, subway, or boat platforms; Massport's Logan Airport operation, and South Shore transit services to Logan.

Jean Amato, manager of employer and community services said commuters can still opt for the convenience of CARAVAN's direct hotline, (227-7665).

"Like the Information Stations, the hotline is designed to simplify the search for accurate information. 227-POOL gives the individual one easy number to dial for details of all the alternatives available for any particular route statewide." Callers can also request a free computerized readout of their choices, including a carpool or vanpool match list.

The corporation works with communities and companies throughout the state to promote its services. CARAVAN offers technical assistance to employers who want to survey or match their personnel, and can also help them arrange other modes of commuter-related travel: subscription bus, shared-ride taxi, or shuttle possibilities.

Other specialized programs include corporate relocation services, innercity job trainee transportation to suburban companies, and midday use of Caravan vans.

CARAVAN offers it services at no charge, receiving funding from the Federal Highway Admministration and Massachusetts Department of Public Works to promote commuter transportation alternatives.

For more details on Caravan's program, call Cohasset Public Library Director Richard Hayes at 383-1348 or Scituate Public Library Director Virginia Heffernan, at 545-6707.

opportunities for natural camouflage are good, and compare our friend of the strong wings set to the back and its flight easy, almost off-hand, with the noisy, nervous, and shallow-charactered blue jay. You will get a lesson in avian personality: the one, all integrity, the other, Beau Brummel.

I recall a writer who dislikes the kingfisher for its slovenly housekeeping. This bird, he says, fouls its nest, besmirches its entrance with scales and fish bones, and raises its young in the dark.

This is all true, and may be verified by any town esident active enough to climb stubbly banks and dig along tunnels, to say nothing of being brave enough to stand up to the parents with their scissor-beaks.

I was more than impressed once when I did sit close to a nest opening, observing things, when the female alighted between me and the hole and silently presented a side view of her head. I saw nothing but any angry mother armed with a dagger, and I decided that her young within did not need a foster parent.

The kingfisher may not after all be fastidious, but let that be. Only let me think of this bird that "halcyon days" was named after as a spirit coming toward my spot near the water with his vocal and aerial assurance that the weather's good, the fishing's fine, and everything is all right.

Board recommends library budget

The Advisory Board has recommended a library budget for next year (Fiscal 1984-85) which is 2.5 percent higher than this fiscal year (1983-84). The total figures are $161,431, about $4,000 more than this year's total of $157,543.

Library Director Richard Hayes said this will be a local tax increase of less than one percent because other library costs will be picked up by library trust funds or state aid.

The budget will not include cost of living increases for staff. Hayes said the staff numbers will remain the same and the library will continue to be closed Wednesday. The library will remain open Sunday except during the summer.

There will be a modest four percent increase in the book budget, Hayes said , the first increase in about three years. While the book budget was leveled funded for the first three years of Proposition 2½, book prices went up 26 percent while magazine prices also increased 48 percent.

Hayes said the library will purchase almost every book which could be widely used by the public such as general literature and adult non-fiction. Hayes said the library will not purchase highly specialized or professional materials such as law or medical books.

They didn't roll out the red carpet, much less have a brass band playing when the Marshfield Mariner made its debut 12 years ago. Six other community papers later, it would seem that our weekly round-up of the news was just what our little world here on the South Shore had been waiting for. My April 13 copy is actually yellowed now as I think back to the day when I was asked to write this column. No Julia Childs I, or home-ec grad, I was realistic enough to realize that the invitation was tendered only because as one of three staff members, I was not nearly as busy as our editors who were doing everything from writing most of the copy to delivering the finished product. About my only qualification was the pleasure I took in feeding five hungry Pinkhams that gathered at the dinner table each and every evening. One of the first recipes that graced our column was from Barbara Warren via Barbara Plummer and for many, it was love at first taste. Many a buffet table since has been favored with this dish, as it is delicious, serves 12 to 14 and is called

MUSHROOM BUSINESS

Use "lousy" bread, i.e., cheap, or day-old, 3 slices buttered and cubed to line bottom of large casserole
Combine: 1 lb. sauteed mushrooms
1/2 c. each of celery, onions, peppers, and mayonnaise
Salt and pepper to taste

Pour above mixture over first layer of bread. Top with 3 more slices of buttered and cubed bread.
Beat together:
1½ c. milk and
2 eggs

Pour into casserole and refrigerate for 1 hour or overnight.
Before baking add:
1 c. cream of mushroom soup
1 slice bread, buttered and cubed for topping.
Bake 65 min. in 325 degree oven. Used as a luncheon dish, serves 8 generously.

So many people take pride in serving nourishing, appetizing dishes and so many more love to partake of them, that soon after the advent of the column, our readers were sending in recipes for their family favorites. Thus, the column became a medium for swapping recipes, exchanging ideas, reviewing cookbooks, suggesting places to eat, or little shops to visit because of a certain novel flair for the unusual. So, when readers ask me how it is I have managed to come up with a new and different column each week, I give credit to our readers' input. Take, for instance, this recipe of Virginia Fisher's, one she shared with us several years ago when it was all the rage in California and which our family particularly enjoys when hot and buttery from the oven. It's fabulously easy to make and you can freeze one of the two loaves of Ginny's

BEER BREAD

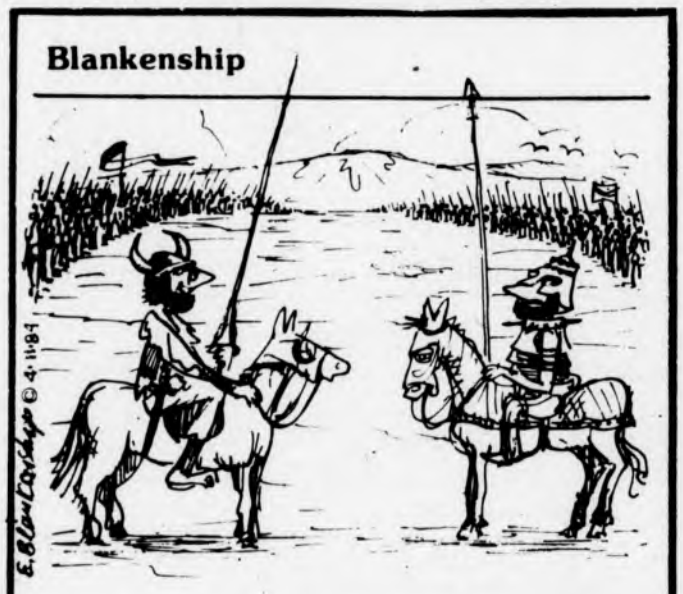
12 oz. can beer
3 c. self-rising flour, mixed with
2 T sugar. Add beer 1/3 at a time. Turn batter into two loaf pans. Drizzle with 1/2 c. butter. If you have no self-rising flour, add 3¾ tsp. baking powder and 3/4 tsp. salt to regular flour. Bake for 50 min. at 350 degrees.

* * *

The next question I'm usually asked is how I find time to test each recipe that appears in the column. Well, these recipes have not been tested by experts in their sunny spotless test kitchens, but in the homes of our readers and we know that without the approval of their families, would not have withstood their judicious testing, or been considered good enough to share. Another recipe that first ran in 1978 and has been a party favorite of ours ever since is Meri Paine's

SPINACH CANAPE

4 c. raw spinach, chopped
3 eggs, beaten
1 c. flour
1 c. milk
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
16 oz. shredded cheddar
1 tsp. baking powder



Mix well. Melt 2 T butter in 9 x 13 pan. Spread butter evenly and bake for 35 min. at 350 degrees.

* * *

We all have to cook and it's all too easy to become bored with what we eat, so for variety's sake, let's pool our recipes. Get out your batter-spattered file cards and send us a recipe we can all enjoy.

Insurance Companies Compete to Win Homeowners with Lower Rates.

"Now, homeowners can generally get increased coverage and pay less for it," according to Mary Porter of Whitman's Doran & Mason Insurance Agency.

Interviewed at her Bridgewater home, Ms. Porter said, "My job is to see that my clients have all the facts they need to buy insurance wisely. Right now, the fact is that you can probably duplicate your present homeowner's coverage at a lower cost — or — increase your coverage without increasing your cost."

"You can still get good, personal service with your low rates, too," Ms. Porter added. Doran & Mason has a team system. "Each of my clients can phone my office teammate any time a question arises or a problem occurs. We have enough people for that, and our size makes us important to the companies we represent. Even difficult claims can be handled more easily."

"I'll take the time to explain the details to you and I'll get to know you well enough to understand what insurance you need. I don't press;" she concluded, "if you have all the information you need, you'll make the right decisions." As an insurance professional in the Doran & Mason Agency, Mary Porter writes automobile, life, medical, business, boat and other forms of insurance as well as homeowner's.

Another harbinger of springtime in Cohasset is the annual AFS Auction. Angela Laitta and Denis Rossi are the co-chairpersons of this year's auction, which will be held Saturday, May 12, at 7:30 in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church.

Bidding items are: a round-trip private flight to Provincetown; a pair of Celtics tickets or Red Sox seats; Boston Pops or a Sheraton Weekend to New York.

Angela and Denis were in charge of rounding up over ninety acquisitions. Karin Bartow will catalogue it all. Chartis Langmaid and Anne Moore are the Recording Committee. Judy Collins and Sally Atkinson will co-chair the Hospitality committee, assisted by Barbara Spooner and Brenda Urmson.

Nancy Sandell and Regina Schultz are in charge of Publicity and the auctioneer's gavel will be manned by Linton Young and Jim Urmson. Members of the Cohasset AFS Chapter will serve as runners and salespeople.

SS Collaborative teaches communication skills

(This is the third in a multi-story series on the South Shore Collaborative. —Ed.)

By Theresa Sullivan

A small boy looked up smiling as his teacher added a star to the others he had earned for good behavior. She praised him and allowed him a few minutes of free time at the "reward table" where he used this privilege to read.

Meanwhile, other students learned the concept of weight as the teacher's aide put objects of varying weights on a scale and asked the children to determine which was heavier.

Next to these children, others learned addition with colored blocks. The teacher patiently repeated the lesson continually until the children caught on.

In a brightly decorated classroom in Osgood Elementary School, Cohasset, 11 students are taught speech and language skills in the Primary Language class.

The classroom, which serves children between 6 and 11, has hand-made teaching aids everywhere, from a chart with the color of the week to signs marked with the children's names. In every corner, on every wall there is a drawing, decoration or carefully-lettered word.

The Primary Language class, which is part of the South Shore Collaborative, is directed toward children who are "language delayed or disordered," Program Director Patricia Linari said.

Students in the class have difficulty communicating, she said. These children either have trouble receiving information and processing it in their minds or they find it hard to gather their thoughts and express themselves verbally.

Because they have a weakness in their communication skills, all areas of learning are affected, she said. In the Primary Language class, children learn the subject matter other children their ages are learning, but they learn at their own individual pace.

In a handbook for Primary Language students' parents, teacher Claire Sicard said each child's pace will be governed by "his ability, his interest and his motivation."

Sicard, who has a bachelor's degree in speech therapy and a master's degree in special education, has been the Primary Language class teacher since it began three years ago. Like the other collaborative teachers, aides and therapists, Sicard exhibited unfailing patience while teaching her students.

The instructors teach by repetition, Linari said, and "by breaking down information into the smallest part, by structuring the lesson so they are able to feed back the information at their level.

"For every activity (Sicard) breaks up the class according to skill in each area," Linari said. After a few weeks with students, Sicard is able to identify each student's skills and weaknesses, she said.

The South Shore Collaborative serves special needs children ages 3 to 22 in Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth. Students from Hanover are also served in the Primary Language class.

Like all the South Shore Collaborative programs, the tuition for the Primary Language class is flexible, depending on the exact number of students enrolled each month. Currently, each town pays $5,300 per pupil annually for the Primary Language class. A similar program elsewhere would average some $9,000, said Dr. Michael Savage, South Shore Collaborative executive director.

In addition to Sicard, the Primary Language class has a speech pathologist who services the classroom on an 80 percent basis (not quite full-time), two aides, a part-time occupational therapist and a vision consultant.

Some of the Primary Language class children will be able to go to the public school in their town and be in a special needs class, while others will continue to need the emphasis on communication the language class offers, she said.

Currently, students in the Primary Language class are taught math through cooking every week. Children also swim at the M.D.C. indoor pool once a month with their teachers as a way of learning swimming skills and improving dressing and social skills.

Because these children need individualized instruction, parents are encouraged to participate in their child's education through notebooks and classroom observation.

Each child has a notebook in which each professional who works with him keeps a daily account of the child's activities. Parents may also use this as a way of informing the teacher about their child's progress or regression at home.

Parents may also observe the class and discuss their observations with the teacher and specialists, continuing to work together for a common goal, helping children to unlock the mysteries of language.

Claire Sicard instructs student in Primary Language class.

William B. Golden

Golden announces his candidacy

William B. Golden announced his candidacy this week for the Massachusetts State Senate, Norfolk-Plymouth District. In launching his campaign, Golden seeks to succeed incumbent Alan R. McKinnon who will not seek re-election.

Golden, a resident of Weymouth, was born and raised in Cohasset and lived in Marshfield after he was married.

In announcing his candidacy, Golden made the following statement:

"I am running for the State Senate because I am deeply concerned about the future of the South Shore. My father's family came to the South Shore from Boston in 1927, and my mother's family has lived in Marshfield for generations. My grandparents and parents have worked hard to attain a high quality of life and economic opportunity which could be preserved and enhanced for future generations.

"This legacy was passed on to me, and today I am continuing this tradition by making a personal commitment to help pass on the same civic heritage and environmental beauty to our children. With a decrease in federal and local revenues, state government will have a greater role in addressing local and regional concerns. I ask you to join me in forging a strong regional identity for the future of the South Shore.

"As neighbors and as fellow citizens of the South Shore, we must overcome factional differences and petty disputes within and between our towns. We must concentrate instead on resolving common regional and local problems which we share. We must elect a strong legislative delegation which will fight hard on Beacon Hill to obtain our fair share of state resources."

Golden went on to say that for too long the South Shore has been treated as the poor stepsister of Boston. While state resources flow to the North Shore and to the suburbs west of Boston, the South Shore has not received the attention or resources which it needs and deserves.

"If we are to solve our transportation, educational, environmental and local fiscal problems, the next state senator must be committed to opening up the legislative process with rules reforms which are both practical and democratic. Your next state senator must also have experience at all levels of government to deal effectively with federal, state and county officials."

Golden's campaign for the State Senate is the continuation of many years of active political involvement on the South Shore. In 1978, he lost a close race to Patrick J. "Sonny" McDonough, receiving 47,395 to Sonny's 53,759 votes. In that contest, Golden won all the towns in the South Shore Senate district with the exception of Hull, which he lost by only 10 votes. Golden has a long term relationship with Governor Dukakis and many of his cabinet secretaries since, together with his wife, he coordinated Norfolk and Plymouth counties for Dukakis in his successful 1982 re-election. He has been elected as a delegate to three democratic state conventions and is currently an elected member of the Weymouth Democratic Town Committee.

Golden has worked in the federal government for the President's Advisory Council on Executive Organization where, as a member of its Natural Resources and Environmental Task Force, he assisted in drafting the bill that created the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. He also worked in Washington, D.C. for Ralph Nader in his study of Congress, dealing with transportation issues such as the Highway Trust Fund.

Golden has had state and county government experience as a National Science Foundation Scholar in the Massachusetts Department of Community Affairs and as a law clerk for a District Attorney.

Golden has been active in community work as a baseball and basketball coach, president of a community association and director of the senior high school fellowship program for the North Marshfield Community Church.

Golden emphasizes his long time family roots in the district. His paternal grandparents were the proprietors of the Black Rock House in Cohasset for over 40 years. His maternal grandparents lived in Marshfield where his grandfather, Phillip Oakman, was commissioner of roads. His father, Irwin Golden, has practiced law in Hingham for over 30 years. Golden's aunt, Anstrice Van Keuren, has been an elected member of the Weymouth Board of Health for many years.

A graduate of Yale University, Golden also holds degrees from Boston School of Law and from the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

He is married to Paula Mary Golden, who is Deputy Registrar and Chief Counsel to the Registry of Motor Vehicles. They have two children, Brigham, 15, and Bethany, 10.

SS Conservatory weekend of music

April 13,14, and 15 will be a weekend of music at the South Shore Conservatory on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. and on Sunday at 4 p.m., members of the faculty will play in Cox Recital Hall at the school, off Fort Hill Street in Hingham. The public is invited to these concerts free of charge to hear these professional musicians.

On Friday, April 13, the Arts Antigua trombone ensemble will perform.

The Ensemble will play music by Bach, Lo Presit, Corelli and Lund. They will also play a world premiere Trio by composer Richard Moylan, who will be present at the concert. Another guest will be composer Gertrude Lund, who is visiting Boston for the premiere of one of her works by the Harvard Band. The Lund composition,which the Ars Antigua, will play in Hingham was premiered by the group last year.

After the concert there will be a reception for artists and members of the audience.

On Saturday, April 14, pianists David Rose of the faculty and guest Brian Marble will give a two-piano recital. This concert was originally scheduled for March 9 and was cancelled because of snow. Their program will include music by Beethoven, Griffes, Babin and Debussy. Both artists are graduates of the New England Conservatory.

At 4 p.m. Sunday afternoon, April 15, another piano faculty member, Mark Goodman, will give a solo recital of piano music by Mozart, Bach, Brahms and Liszt. He teaches at both the Duxbury branches of the Conservatory.

Blueberry pies were wonderful in 1951 because...

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

Burning used to be big. I don't mean for arson, that's plenty big now I hear. I mean there used to be annual spring burning sessions outside.

There was brush to be cleared and often people used to freshen fields or whatever by burning.

The same was and is true, I guess, of blueberry land. In Maine my family has blueberry land. It sits atop a hill spread out over the land, abutted by deep woods to the rear and an overview of the bay on the front.

I think it's every couple of years one burns his blueberry land. And it used to be a big deal, one for which, surprisingly, I qualified as a family member.

To start with, learning the ropes of burning, I worked beside an older sibling or adult. By the time I was an adolescent, however, I had accomplished my apprenticeship at burning so well that one year I was accorded a full territory to burn all by myself.

Since my brothers had grown away from home and my sister had managed to have other duties that particular Saturday, the job of burning the blueberries was left to my father, Henry Perkins, Crosby Ladd, his contemporary longtime friend, and an old hand at any phase of blueberrying.

That year I was issued my very own water tank and hose.

You ought to know that self-reliance was an inherent ingredient in our upbringing. If it wasn't genetic, it would of necessity take roots through the environment. It was well and good to have softness of heart but it was equally vital to have resilience and ability to "get along," somehow through situations that suddenly turned on you. One could never be lost, for example, at least with any excuse, so long as she "had a tongue in her head" and could ask directions.

So it was that when I accepted the non government issue of my water tank and hose and my territorial burning rights, I also accepted the responsibility for keeping my blaze under control while getting done the job of burning clean and clear the blueberry land allotted to me.

When we started our fires Crosby and my father Henry were in sight just up there on the hill by the stone wall, but not over it to other parcels.

I burned along nicely, eliminating the runaway little flames that licked along the ground where I didn't want them to go. I'd aim my hose at them and deplete the blaze effectively. I saw to it that no bare spots showed themselves in the midst of my area. And I watched the wind with which I had worked in concert before lighting the short bush berry land.

Henry and Crosby were in charge of the over the hill land. I couldn't see them or hear them. There's a lot of space in Maine and several acres of it were between them and me.

It was about that time that I ran into my emergency. I was tracking a trail of fire toward the woods. That finger of flame was growing fatter and fatter until it was its own minor inferno. It had no business getting out of its assigned district near those woods. So I raced with my hose and tank to "handle it."

I pumped that devil for all I was worth watching the fire in anticipation of seeing it diminish under my power.

Instead I immediately noticed my right leg was very wet. My hose broke. I could have spit more effectively on the fire than the hose did.

That's when I started hollering and pumping and trying to put the miserable hose back on the tank. When that failed, I tried holding it just right so that pumping put the water through it on the fire.

No go.

History books would record, I knew at that moment, that a young woman singlehandedly burned Brookville, Maine to the ground one spring morning. The woods and the fire had only a few foot between them and my erstwhile supervisors were nowhere in sight. Just me, a broken hose and a town to burn flat while I bellowed for help. Furthermore my eyebrows were singed, my britches and I were soaked and my right booted foot was awash in a hapless puddle.

It was about then as I fought to save Rome that Nero and his companion appeared on the crest of the hill. In my mind they could barely see me, so engulfed was I in the roaring conflagration.

They saw things differently. The two of them, whose appearance brought both grateful and unladylike utterances, took one look at me and spent a wasteful 30 seconds bent over in laughter. Fine for them, I thought, what a swell sense of humor, nothing so funny as seeing someone burn down a town, if not all of Hancock County.

They gathered their hoses and their humor and rushed down the hill to quell my personal flames just as one section lapped at the edge of a fine fat fir.

I looked like I'd almost survived the Chicago Fire, smutty, sooty and soaked.

That year the blueberries had a banner crop. And there wasn't a time that August during the season that I was allowed to forget that the berries ripened in clear response to the professional quality of the burners in the spring.

Juried Photography Show

Photographer Steven Nelson of Milton took the Best of Show award for his piece "Christian Science Mother Church" at the center's first annual All New England Juried Photography Show.

Describing the work, jurors John Droege of Bridgewater State College; Sharon Fox, an instructor at Harvard; and author Henry Horenstein commented that Nelson's work "has nice texture, subtle color, simple, well composed, super technique."

Nelson also took first place in black and white for his piece "Iris" and an honorable mention for "Fiduciary Trust, Boston." The jurors described his first place black and white as having beautiful tonality, "quiet, yet grows on you."

The first place in color went to Fran Nichols of Duxbury for "Washday III." In selecting this piece the jurors commented that the "minimal color gives a strong impact; surprising subject matter makes strength more impressive."

Honorable mentions in black and white went to L.E. Woodburn of Middleboro for "Ames Estate," to Walter Frost of Scituate for "Lucien," to Jack Hennessey of Quincy for "No. 4 Slidewell," and to Michael Rinaldini of Cambridge for "Lotte Jacobi."

In color honorable mentions also went to Joan Appel of Cohasset for "Caldor and Pei," to Regina Berkeley of Brighton for "Mt. Pilate Switzerland" and for "Rome, Italy" and to Paula Gilman of Waltham for an untitled work.

The success of this first juried photography show covering all New England has laid the groundwork for future All New England Juried Photography exhibits at the center.

Pastel portrait course

The center's Pastel Portrait course for advanced students has been rescheduled to begin May 1 with both morning and afternoon sessions available.

Instructor Constance Pratt will work with students at the center from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and at a second session in the afternoon from 1 to 4 p.m. Advanced registration is required for this course. Classes will meet for six weeks during June 5.

Pratt brings to the Center her extensive background in portrait painting. She studied at the Massachusetts College of Art and is an award winning exhibitor on the East Coast. She is a member of the Pastel Society of America and she is an instructor at the Copeley Society and the Weston and Lexington Art Associations.

Saturday's election is over but who won?

By Jane Lane

It's doubtful there is anyone left in Cohasset who isn't aware of the town's latest crisis.

This week's news doesn't pertain to Fire Chief Martin Dooley, an inflated school budget, or backed-up septic systems.

The fact is, no one's sure who was elected to the Board of Selectmen. In an election in which 40 percent of the town participated, the results between two of the contestants is inconclusive.

John DeBassio, following a tradition established in his first political campaign last year, netted a solid 1333 votes. That would seem to ensure that the popular former police chief would retain his position on the board for three more years.

The latest Cohasset controversy revolves around the two other contestants for a three-year seat on that board. For the first time in recent memory, two candidates finished in a tie - 1000 votes a piece.

Selectmen Chairman Mary Jane McArthur, running as she did three years ago against Doris Golden, reasoned that a low voter turnout snatched victory away from her grasp. Residents whom her campaign workers had indicated were supporters did not show at the polls.

Once again, McArthur claimed, public apathy has placed the town in political turmoil. Failure to gather a quorum the second night of town meeting, and less than half the registered voters participating in a municipal election may prove costly for the town.

McArthur intends to petition for a formal recount of the balloting, and Golden is expected to do the same. If the recount indicates McArthur is the victor, Golden has indicated she will challenge the decision in court.

That procedure is complicated and longwinded. And it also adds to the confusion as to whom is sitting on the present board of selectmen.

There is speculation in town that if the secretary of state's office determines a special election is necessary, perhaps other candidates may enter the race. That is not likely, according to Assistant Town Counsel John Slater.

Also left in limbo is incumbent DeBassio, who had only begun to savor his victory when informed he may have to run again in a special election.

McArthur said she was hampered in this campaign because of her time-consuming responsibilities as chairman of the board of selectmen.

"Being chairman is my first and foremost reponsibility and priority. Attending an average of four meetings per week left little time for campaigning," she said. "I take the responsibility of selectmen chairman very seriously."

McArthur, who has been active in town government for 20 years and is a fulltime teacher, defeated Doris Golden in her previous campaign three years ago. She said voter apathy played a large part in this first-time election tie.

Looks like there were more sign holders than voters outside the polls Saturday. With a run-off possible, campaign workers better hold on to those placards.

No real surprises in low voter election

Seven local races helped produce a near 40 percent voter turnout at Saturday's election and for the most part, there were few surprises.

Bill Montouri was re-elected water commissioner, Dick Conley, School Committee, Warren Pratt, assessor, Patrick Plante was reelected to the planning board.

The new town officials are Terese England Duggan and Peter Laugelle to the Recreation Commission for four years and John McNabb. Jr., Sheila Evans and Doris McNulty were elected to the Library Board of Trustees for three years.

According to the McNabb family, John Jr. was the youngest official elected Saturday. He was the only one to defeat an incumbent, Cordelia Foell and it also marked the first time in over 20 years an incumbent library trustee was defeated.

This year's races marked the return of more than two candidates for a position and politically meant the third candidate was the spoiler.

In the race for school committee, Dick Conley won the race with 890 votes. Judy Volungis was second with 779 votes and George Marlette was third with 217 votes.

Water Commission chairman Bill Montouri beat second place finisher Jeffrie Bettinger by a 724-658 margin. Arne Gjesteby finished third with 522 votes.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

A jubilant Richard Conley, on the heels of his successful re-election bid said, "It was the good working relationship of the entire school board" that aided his victory.

Judy Volungis, unsuccessful in her second attempt for a school board seat, believed it was a low voter turnout which unraveled her plans for victory.

Volungis raised the low voter turnout issue which was echoed by other candidates.

"Saturday was the first day of school vacation. Even last Thursday, one-quarter of the high school population was absent. Many families were away this week. I think that was the major reason I did not win," she said.

Stressing the importance of leadership and fiscal responsibility in her campaign, Volungis said she is

Selectmen reconsider residential business policy

By Karen Brown

Selectmen may reconsider their licensing policy for business operation in residential areas.

This resulted after the board met with W.M. Hapeman, owner of Atlanticar, Wednesday night.

The board considered Hapeman's request to increase the stock in the dealership lot from 20 cars to 50 cars.

"The facility warrants it," said the owner.

Hapeman said there was adequate access for fire vehicles and the flooding that has plagued the lot in the past has "not been a problem."

"I have managed to keep it under control," said Hapeman.

A restriction was put on the license at the time of application in November of 1983 limiting the lot to ten cars.

That limit was later extended to 20.

"There have been days when you haven't been there," Selectman Laugelle told Hapeman. "I personally don't like to see any business in the town of Cohasset that lays there."

"I have improved the place," answered Hapeman. "I rent with an option to buy."

Hapeman leased the property in September and it remained "very active...until the cold weather made it

Building alteration approved

The appeals board recently approved an application to alter a pre-existing, non-conforming building at 42 and 44 Summer St.

The applicants were Raymond Livingstone II and William Livingstone.

The building is located within a flood plain and watershed protection district.

The Appeals Board noted the Board of Health and the Planning Board offered no objections to the approval of this application.

The board, after finding that the application in no way derogated from the intent of the Floodplain and Watershed Protection District of the town, unanimously approved this application.

Members approving the application were Myrna Putziger, Chairperson, Terence J. Farrell and Barbara M. Power.

Housing agreement is in

After a Saturday morning meeting, the Housing Authority and Executive Secretary Mark Lanza put the final touches on an application for state funding for low income housing. Local officials were afraid projects to repair local water mains would be put in jeopardy if the housing authority were to miss the deadline.

A site for low income housing has not been selected. Selectmen rejected to sell or lease town-owned apartments on Government Island for use as subsidized housing.

Another option is for the housing authority to advertise locally that state subsides are available for families below certain income levels and when responses come in, certify those who qualify.

Arts council award

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, 3rd Plymouth District Cohasset, announced that the three towns in her District have been awarded funds by the Arts Lottery Council.

Cohasset received a grant of $904.00 The applications were approved by these three towns Arts Lottery Council and have been certified by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council at the State House in Boston.

Rep. Murray noted that the current grants awarded statewide have topped one million dollars for the first time since the distribution began in July, 1982. "These funds will help to enhance the cultural life of our community" said Mary Jeanette. "With Arts Lottery grants we are able to encourage and support worthy arts and humanities projects offered in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull."

The next distribution of funds will be in July 1984. Applications for the next funding cycle are currently available at the town halls and libraries. The Arts Lottery Council of Cohasset, invites all artists and arts organizations in the community to avail themselves of this unique local arts and humanities funding opportunity.

Early day April 26

There will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools, Thursday, April 26. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Schools will leave: Junior/Senior High School at 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill School at 12:40 p.m.; and Joseph Osgood School at 1 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

Oppose Sewer Plant expansion

Fifteen residents of the Jacobs Meadow area do not agree with plans to expand the town's sewer plant. Doubling the plant capacity to 200,000 gallons per day is one of the options investigated by Ward Engineering, the town's sewer consultants.

Residents complained about the plant's smell and noise and the plant's effect on the wetlands.

Expansion would not mean enlarging the area of the existing plant but technology would be improved and a sand filtration system would be added. There would be no additional filling of the marshland.

Cohasset gardening couple featured

A Cohasset couple that reclaimed a portion of seaside tangle for a spectacular garden are featured in Better Homes and Gardens national magazine "Garden Ideas and Outdoor Living-1984."

Peter and Patty Abbott garden a 40x100 foot plot that Peter cleared of cedar, shad and wild grape with a chain saw and axe. Their gardening efforts won a national contest sponsored by public television's, "Crockett's Victory Garden."

Once the land was cleared. Peter halted erosion by spreading two and one-half feet of seaweed across the ground in the fall so it would decompose before the planting season. They also use salt marsh hay for mulch to keep weeds down.

Better Homes and Gardens "Garden Ideas and Outdoor Living/1984" will be on sale through the June wherever books and magazines are sold.

not feasible to stay open."

Abutter Harry Ritter said any potential increase in the volume of business of Atlanticar could adversely affect the surrounding property value.

"I have to protect the equity I have in my house," said Ritter.

Ritter also said a previous attempt to have his own land zoned for business was denied.

"With the amount of used car dealers on 3A, I could not go for 50 cars," said Laugelle.

"I think you're lucky you got the 20," said Selectman England.

"It's important for you to remember," Chairman Mary Jane McArthur told Hapeman, "that it is a non-conforming use in a residential area."

The board denied Hapeman's request.

However at the suggestion of Selectman Cliff Mitman, the board will review the non-conforming use of other businesses in Cohasset operating in residential areas which are not limited in their operations.

Mill River Bridge

In other business, the board discussed renovating and upgrading the Mill River Bridge.

The State Department of Public Works has suggested a galvanized railing for the bridge.

"If everything is done the way the state recommends," said Executive Secretary Lanza, "the state will cover the cost."

Engineering estimates for "a complete overhaul" of the bridge are $20,000 to restore it as it is and $200,000 for the construction costs.

McArthur suggested signs be posted near the bridge warning about the town ordinance forbidding jumping and swimming off the bridge.

There is a $200 fine for violation of a town by-law according to Executive Secretary Mark Lanza.

The board did not reach an agreement on a solution to the Mill River Bridge problem.

McArthur instructed Lanza to research further the costs for restoring the bridge and hiring a police officer to patrol the bridge.

Building Inspector Resigns

The board accepted "with regret" the resignation of Building Inspector Bob Dennis.

Lanza attributed Dennis' resignation to "a lack of adequate staffing and money as secondary."

England described the resignation as "a grievous loss to the town."

The board discussed hiring a full-time clerk-typist for the Selectmen's and Building Inspector's office.

"This is a problem we have to address. We've got to get a handle. We're always playing catch up," said McArthur.

"It's not too late to add it to the budget if we have to," said Lanza.

Special Town Meeting

The board set a tentative date, Monday, June 18, for the special town meeting.

How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space . . . a smaller basement suffices . . . and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages . . . excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects . . . lower heating and air conditioning costs . . . and excellent privacy between levels.

We have some very choice two-level attached single family condominium homes available at The Meadows, the very popular and successful Green Company community in Hingham. Most of the two- and three-bedroom units offer large private decks, walk-out basements with walls of glass which can be easily converted. There's a swimming pool, whirlpool, clubhouse and tennis courts.

The sales office and furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Two-level homes start at about $170,000. There are also a few single-level homes ranging from about $190,000 to $240,000 if you prefer. Selectmen's race tie . . .

"Candidates Night was poorly attended and we lost our quorum at town meeting. I think this is very indicative that people are not taking the interest in town government that they should," she added.

The scheduling of the election, which coincided with spring school vacation, was a classic case of poor timing, according to many individuals. Town bylaw states the town meeting must be held the first Saturday of April, followed by the municipal election the next Saturday.

It just happened that this year spring vacation, when many families travel out-of-town, occurred the same time. McArthur said many residents tagged as her supporters, did not vote last Saturday or obtain absentee ballots.

"If there had been a larger turnout, I would have been victorious. I feel I have a broader base of support than Mrs. Golden. In retrospect, I should have been on the phone to get that vote out on election day," she said.

Golden has retained a Boston attorney and submitted letters to several town officials Tuesday, including registrar Burtram Pratt, the board of selectmen, the executive secretary, and Atty. Slater. The content of the letter, according to Pratt, was official notification that Golden will be seeking a recount and will be pursuing all legal avenues to ensure validated election results.

She has been busy throughout the past few days seeking the necessary signatures for an official recount. The formal recount petition must be submitted to the town clerk within ten days of the election.

Golden has stated that if the recount results in her defeat, she will appeal the decision to Superior Court. Saying she owes it to herself, and the long hours of labor and committment of her campaign workers, Golden vowed to follow all legal recourses.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said he has never been involved in a recount process, but it is his experience that a court appeal could drag the issue on for months.

In the meantime, incumbent McArthur will remain a full, voting member of the board. Town bylaw stipulates that an elected official is a member of that board until a duly authorized election alters the status.

Not intending to challenge the office of the town clerk, nor its personnel, Golden said she was seeking the recount as a personal committment to her campaign staff.

Commentary

Election day thoughts

By Sallyanne Chatterton

"He's a 'shoo-in."

"She has made such a name for herself, she has it made."

"Without the 'townie vote' behind him, he doesn't have a chance!"

"That guy made so many 'iffy" decisions, how can anyone cast their vote for him?"

Those are but a few comments that were heard around the Town Hall as voters hit the polls Saturday.

The weather wasn't too bad, so that helped the vote.

The issues were not as fiery as in other years, that hurt the vote.

So many chose to think their vote wouldn't matter, they didn't bother to cast their ballot. A lot of the latter must be scratching their heads in wonderment now!

Who would have thought that one vote could have made the difference?

During that long day (Saturday is always a long day for the candidate), amidst the good wishes and the handshakes, the candidates know their "w· ·k is done."

The coffees are over, the hard work and long hours that they and their committees have put forth are behind them, and the time of reckoning is at hand.

All they have to do is stand outside the polls with a few "influential" friends for a day, then wait for the results.

The polls closed at 6 p.m.; the gathering of the various committees then begins:

"How big was the vote?"

"Hope Doris' illness didn't hurt her (Doris was "sidelined with the flu during the latter part of the race.)"

"It's so hard to beat an incumbant who has worked as hard for the town as Mary Jane has, it's in the bag."

"Wonder who won the race for water commissioner?"

People start looking at one another..."what's taking so long? When are they going to announce the vote? Why does Bill Weeks look so troubled? We're always out of here by now! What do you suppose could have happened?"

In a barely audible voice, Moderator Weeks begins to announce the vote..."In the selectmen's race, John DeBassio receives 1,047, Mary Jane McArthur 1,000 and Doris Golden 1,000.. A tie! In Cohasset!

Two committees really start talking now! Why didn't we call more people? Are they positive the vote was counted correctly? What happens next?

What does happen next? Stay tuned folks, the elections aren't over yet! Oh, by the way, did you vote?!!

A Special Thank You

I would like to compliment all of those voters who were concerned enough about town government and went to the polls and voted for the Candidate of their Choice on Election Day.

I am particularly thankful for those individuals who voted for my candidacy as Selectman and felt that I would bring leadership and a new dimension to the Board of Selectmen.

Finally, mere words cannot fully project my heart-felt gratitude for those magnificant friends and supporters who formed my committee and worked tirelessly in my spirited and visual campaign.

Whatever the final election outcome, I shall never forget your kindness, loyalty, love and cooperation.

Very truly yours,

Doris C. Golden

☐ The Cohasset Village Fair organization will hold a "Spring Day" sale in the Unitarian Parish House, Saturday, April 28, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Unique as an ecumenical benefit, the Cohasset Village Fair brings together workers from the Greek Panagia Church, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, St. Stephen's Episcopal, The First Parish Unitarian and the Second Congregational Church.

The "Spring Day" event will offer a Bargain Bazaar/Flea Market, as well as a sale of baked goods, plants and books. Proceeds of the sale will be used for advance funding of the big Village Fair in December.

Mrs. Jean Syrmopoulos of the Greek Church, is general chairman of the Fair.

☐ marine Cpl. Stephen M. Breen, son of Carrie E. Breen, was recently awarded the U.S. Marine Corps Good Conduct Medal.

The award, which signifies honest and faithful service over a three-year period, was established by the Secretary of the Navy in July 1896 to recognize good behavior and conduct in the Marine Corps.

☐ Received a nice note from Alice Nisula last week, and it contained some particularly exciting news! Alice and her husband, Arthur, are grandparents. April 7, daughter Mary (Nisula) Chesarone and her husband Vincent had a baby son named Philip Arthur Chesarone named after both grandfathers. As grandmother reported, "He was a bouncer - 9 lbs. 2 oz!" The family is all fine and they live in Norwell. Mary is a 1966 C.H.S. graduate.

☐ Cohasset Central Market wanted to be sure to thank the budding artists in the Kindergarten class of the Osgood School. The pictures they drew for the windows make a fine display, for the passersby as well as the store.

☐ Happy to report that John Elliot is home and feeling much better after his recent surgery. Also glad that Dr. Ed Seadale is back, after his bout with his cat. It seems for no reason they can pinpoint, the cat just lept on him and scratched him pretty badly, causing an infection. Dr. Seadale is on the mend now.

☐ Sandra Dunn, Cynthia Conklin, Nancy Lincoln, William Gorvine, Michael McNamara, David Caffrey, John Colocousis, John Kornet, Corina Minnar, Chris Kneeland, Kathleen and Stephan Fries, Jackie Fahey, Cynthia Bell, Janice Weaver, Judith Weaver, and Elizabeth Minnar are going to be known as Cohasset's world travellers after this vacation week is over! They are students in Mr. Fortin's French class that left last Saturday night to spend a week in France.

Kim Kelly, a first grader from the Osgood School, listens attentively to the fifth grade Deer Hill students tell stories to her class.

☐ Rita and Tom Burke had a wonderful trip recently. They started out by having a week of golf with their friends in Sedona, Arizona, and then went on to visit two of their offspring in sunny California. First they met Joanne (1966 CHS grad), who formerly taught at Hingham Central Junior High in the Art Dept., and is now an art consultant with Creative Galleries in Santa Monica. Then they went on to visit Mae (1970 CHS Grad) who is head of pediatric intensive care at Long Beach Memorial Hospital. Mae's husband Jim was able to be with them. He is an orthopedic surgeon for the United States Olympic staff. Now that they are home, Rita and Tom are looking forward to another event, opening night at Harvard's Leverett House where their daughter, a member of Harvard's sophomore class, will play the lead in "The Curse of Kulyenchikov," a Neil Simon play now a musical. Mae recently returned from a year with "Circus in Tune" rock band.

☐ Congratulations to Peter and Michell-Onwood Laney of 190 Jerusalem Road on the birth of their son who made his entrance March 22.

☐ "In Stitches" is surely getting a large reputation for their lovely workmanship. I received a call from Florida asking for a needlepoint piece, and that was the only place the woman had ever seen it! Most locals know that they can design anything, but to have the knowledge spread that far . . .

☐ Speaking of a work of art, anyone who hasn't tried Joan Pinkham's "Brownie Pudding" must! Since it appeared in her article a few weeks ago, those that have made it have received "rave reviews" from their families.

☐ Although the Bruins are through for the season, our local star certainly deserves plenty of applause. Mike O'Connell won the Seventh Player Award, as everyone knows, and to see a shiny new truck around town is a constant happy reminder of that fact.

☐ For the eighth year, the Rec. Dept. will hold its Easter Egg Hunt. It is for children three to 12-years old and will be held Saturday, April 21 at 1 p.m. at the Deer Hill School field. There will be different groups (according to ages) and a few rules to go over. In case of rain it will be the following Saturday at the same field.

☐ Congratulations to all of the talented guys and gals who were selected to the various music festivals this year. Nancy Donahue and Heather Davenport captured two selections, Senior High District and All State Recommendation. Nancy was selected for choral and Heather was selected for instrumental.

☐ A great percentage of the high school student population is in Florida during this vacation week, and they couldn't have picked a better week to go! Not only is there a large group of students from all over the country, the sun is there! What a lucky crew.

☐ Keep your news coming!

Editorial

Farewell, but not final

To Cohasset readers:

This will be my final editorial as Cohasset Community Editor as Jane Lane will assume the editor's position for the next issue.

It's a little ironic that my final issue goes out with a bang as the selectmen's race is up in the air and with possible court action may still be unresolved for quite some time.

But this signifies what has happened in Cohasset during the last 18 months. Some may say it's a sign of more legal expensive battles but I maintain it's a sign that the average Cohasset resident cares about local government.

The chances of a tie vote approach the chances of winning Megabucks but it happened. The constant media barrage tells the average voter, "your vote counts" and the average voter says 'no way.' But it happened here in Cohasset.

The past 18 months that I have been editor have been turbulent times for Cohasset. A new five member board of selectmen, new executive secretary, fire and police chief, building inspector, town counsel and the issues of the ways things used to be versus new management methods.

The sewer issues continued and will continue and the schools needed more money.

These were difficult times but again the face of Cohasset is changing and it is expected there will be tough issues to face in the future.

My job as Cohasset's community editor was also shared with the position of the Scituate Mariner community editor. In short I was the community editor of two weekly newspapers.

Often times it was amusing to compare the two towns. Yes, they are different. For one, Cohasset has Chief Dooley and Scituate has Chief Driscoll. But both towns still have sewer problems.

I will be leaving the post as Cohasset's community editor to become the assistant executive editor of the seven-newspaper Mariner company. I still will remain editor of the Scituate Mariner and also help Jane to ease into the position.

I wouldn't have taken the new position unless Publisher David Cutler had hired the right person and I firmly believe Jane Lane is the right person for this job.

Some of you may recognize her for her excellent reporting and writing of the selectmen meetings and other town government board meetings.

But we have recognized Jane as a fine person, someone who is fair and honest and treats people the same way they would like to be treated.

The Mariner is different from the The Patriot Ledger in style, content and editorial philosophy. As David Cutler firmly believes, Jane will continue to stress local, local and more local, ie. the best coverage of a selectmen and school committee meeting, indepth reporting and interesting features.

Cohasset needs a full-time editor for full-time issues and Jane is the right person.

When I assumed the position in October of 1982, I realized many people felt the Mariner was still controlled by former editor Tanna Kasperowicz. I spent much of the 18 months trying to dispell this notion.

Tanna might still call to talk but again David Cutler gave me a free rein on editorials and news coverage. Jane will inherit the same.

I would also like to thank several Cohasset residents who at some time were also employed by the Mariner. These include Pat Walsh (Sewer Commission and other town boards secretary), Karin Bartow (PSO and the arts), Bill Hayward (now the Norwell correspondent for the Patriot Ledger) and now Gerald McNabb as an intern and off course Around Town's Sallyanne Chatterton. All of your contributions were greatly appreciated by me.

There were some tought times but also some very enjoyable ones such as "Eddie and the Cruisers" and the climb from a 1-17 team to one victory shy of a Division III South title.

But through it all I knew Cohasset is blessed with people who care very deeply about the town and especially its schools.

I will still be around to listen and to help.

Sincerely and best wishes
Mike Berger, Editor.

A final salute to Allan

By Claire McDonough

"I'm supposed to write something funny," I told the Dragon, "but all I can think of is how different the State Senate is going to be without Allan McKinnon in it."

"Write about that," he suggested. "You were always coming home laughing about something funny that happened in the office."

"Yes, but we didn't always tell the boss about the funny things, and I'm still not sure I want him to read them in the paper."

"You mean like the time you told Norma Nathan that Senator McKinnon..."

"Exactly," I interrupted hastily.

"We did have some great times, though. He worked his staff hard, but he worked so much harder himself that we really couldn't complain.

"Even when the League of Women Voters came in and caught me sewing a button on his jacket, nobody complained, and all the League women have had their consciousnesses raised."

"Didn't I read that he lacked charisma?" the Dragon asked.

"Could someone without charisma get me to sew a button on his jacket? And anyway, he had a different kind of charisma. It was sort of a quiet charisma. He wasn't great shakes as a headline grabber, but he went about the day-to-day business of the Senate guided by something that's pretty rare in any field today, let alone the political arena.

"He had a conscience. People often disagreed with a stand he took on a given issue, but nobody ever questioned his integrity."

"I wouldn't mind having that for my epitaph," the Dragon acknowledged, "but what about the charisma?"

"Well," I explained, "when it was time to campaign, he campaigned hard, but he never ducked a question. Whether the issue was abortion, or low cost housing, or the environment, or education, or taxation, he always considered the queston seriously and answered it honestly.

"He didn't look for fights, and basically he was an easy guy to get along with. He didn't grandstand on the Senate floor, because he felt there was important work to do, and he didn't want to bog things down with a lot of rhetoric.

"But when there was a serious problem, when he felt the Legislature was engaging in what the press called a "feeding frenzy,' passing an incredible number of special interest bills that he felt cheated the taxpayers, he took the floor and, knowing that it wouldn't be popular with leadership or with many of his colleagues, he made a stinging statement of condemnation.

"He used old-fashioned words like 'honor' and 'fairness,' and 'trust.' He didn't exactly endear himself to many of his fellow legislators, and for the next few weeks he was pretty subdued, but he served as a rallying point for other legislators who felt the way he did. And the feeding frenzy stopped."

"That is charisma," the Dragon agreed, "and I guess he will be missed in the Senate, but after 14 years he must be ready to move on to something else."

"Right," I replied.

"And you know that whatever he does, he'll do it well, and he'll be a laborer who is worthy of his hire, and he'll be the same great guy he is now."

"Right," I replied.

"Well then," he asked, "what's the problem."

"The problem is," I told him, "if everything you say is true, and it is, how come I feel like crying?"

The best town meeting of all . . .

By Tanna Kasperowicz
former Cohasset Mariner Editor

Gilbert Tower was a Fox. He used his age to get female editors to get his letters, his many, many letters on everything, published.

He didn't just make a point. He made it over and over again. But he was tricky. His lead-ins were lengthy, and always different...making busy editors think he was now addressing a fresh new issue. But if you read into the article far enough, you discovered the same old message, hidden quite a few paragraphs down in the copy.

Gilbert was a promoter...one of the best. He didn't get his way, but that didn't deter him from trying, over and over again.

One week, as former Cohasset Mariner editor, I was overloaded with news, features and decided to not print Gilbert's latest lengthy missive. He had seventeen letters in our paper in less than two months, and I felt it was time to give him a little jolt.

Publisher David Cutler said: "But if we don't publish this, he'll call, and I'll get the call." We braced ourselves and prepared for the call that week. It never came. This interested us greatly. We felt pretty sure Gilbert never overlooked anything. We knew for a fact his daughter (she told us so) read him the Mariner weekly, first to check on whether his letter was in, and secondly to see what else was happening.

The second week, we did it again. We didn't print any of Gilbert's letters. In the third week the call came.

I explained to Gilbert that he was a promoter and that while I appreciated his interest in the various issues of the day, I could not permit him to make his point, weekly, in a publication that was always short on space.

"Why don't you write a column on your boyhood, Gilbert?" I suggested. "I'll publish all and any articles you write about your boyhood in the early 1900's, in Cohasset."

Gilbert responded:

"But I'm not concerned with the past. I'm concerned with the future."

He also observed, and quite correctly:

"Besides, I don't see how my letters keep other letterwriters out of your newspaper, you don't have that many."

The following week I received an article about Gilbert's boyhood, which started off interestingly enough, but which quickly deteriorated into his major dissertation on why the town should build the sewer plant on Whale Meadows. We printed it anyway.

And then sometime before I retired from the newspaper, Gilbert's letters were not as frequent. And as much as I had looked upon them as a nuisance, and had gotten phone calls from him when I cut a few paragraphs, for space...I missed them, and him.

At Monday night's second session of annual town meeting, I was reminded of Gilbert Tower very much. For an hour and a half nobody was on that mike. Gilbert would have persuaded Moderator Bill Weeks to "let me have the mike for a few minutes," and he would have had us all as a captive audience, on whatever issue he was championing.

Alas, there was no town meeting, for lack of a quorum, for lack of the Gilbert Towers of the world.

Gilbert was not a conservationist. I remember him writing to us of his idea to fill in the land behind the legion, tar it and turn it into a well-needed parking lot. And he was in complete favor of the sewer plant. He didn't care what was spawned in the oceans or the wetlands. "Tar it over, use it!"

Gilbert was a one-man band. He had the courage of his convictions—but that's too trite of a statemnt to make of a man who had much more than courage or convictions.

He was Cohasset's Man of Letters...and we loved him in spite of his issues. We loved his enthusiasm.

After Monday night's meeting, one woman said: "Years ago, we had 800 and 900 in attendance at town meeting. What's happened?" she asked no one in particular. She added: "I hope The Ledger or the Mariner or someone is here who will write about this" (lack of a quorum).

I said, "Why don't you write about this?"

Gilbert would have. So I did. For Gilbert.

No pre-selected candidate should run

To the Editor:

Here we have a situation where, last April, the William Golden family moved from Quincy to Weymouth.

I join every other Weymouthite in welcoming this family, and everyone else, who comes to our town.

However, when hardly a year later, the former Quincy, now Braintree, attorney announces that he intends to be our new State Senator, ...after apparently having been recruited, selected, annointed and endorsed by the present Senator, ...I object.

The cleverness, presumptiveness, arrogance and down-right nerve of this contrived "move in" is unparalled. (The obvious political strategy and thought here is that, to win this Senatorial seat, one must live in Weymouth, the largest town in the district.)

The "political mind" most often motivates the incumbent to seek some like person to succeed himself in what he regards as "his" seat.

The pure fact is that these seats in the legislature do not belong to the incumbent, they belong to the people of the district.

The people of Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury own this State Senatorial seat. It ought not be "given" to any preselected candidate.

Most people, I would think, ...in all fairness and justice ... would want a State Senator who has continuously lived in and served in the district.

I hope that the people in all of the towns in this district will reject this contrived plan to bring in our new Senator from a public career in the City of Quincy.

How brazen it would be if some Weymouth present or former public official were to move into Quincy to take Senator Paul Harold's place, ...if he were, also, about to receive a political appointment from Governor Dukakis.

The citizens of Quincy would, undoubtedly, think of it as equally preposterous compared to the present scheme, as it is now unfolding.

South Shore needs rail service

To the Editor:

As a southeastern Massachusetts resident who works in Boston, I feel that it is time the commuters on the South Shore speak out on the current transit situation. Specifically, I am writing to point out the need for commuter rail service to South Station.

Currently, most commuters from the South Shore have only two viable routes to downtown Boston; the Southeast Expressway and the MBTA Red Line. The Southeast Expressway, as everyone knows, cannot handle the volume of traffic currently using the roadway.

Letters

While the highway will undergo major reconstruction over the next couple of years, the work will not increase the road's capacity. The Red Line is currently characterized by poorly maintained equipment and frequent breakdowns. During peak hours, the subway trains are crowded, and there appears to be little room for expanded service from Braintree.

There is an option, however, which could significantly improve transit from the South Shore. Commuter rail service between South Station and the South Shore could alleviate the bottlenecks encountered on the expressway and the Red Line. Laying rail between South Station and Braintree should not be physically difficult, since a single track right of way currently exists along the Red Line all the way to Braintree. The single most difficult part of the project would be building a new Neposet River rail bridge parallel to the current Red Line bridge. South of Braintree, the rail lines already exist, branching toward Plymouth and Cape Cod.

When one cosiders the many millions of dollars currently being spent of the Orange Line relocation and the Red Line extension in greater Boston, it would seem that the costs involved in restoring South Shore commuter rail service should be well within reason. I strongly encourage all southeastern Massachusetts residents to write to their legislators and let them know that we deserve commuter rail.

Sincerely,
Bill Reidy

Mystery House Week 7

It's Week 7 and past the midpoint of the Historical Mystery House Tour.

Last week's correct answer was 159 South Main Street located at the intersection of South Main Street, Summer and Spring Streets. Eleven of 12 people were correct.

This house is known as the Capt. George Cousen's house and was built in the latter 18th century by Housewright Caleb Nichols.

This Cape Cod cottage has had a large dormer added on the back roof. Its carriage shed has been converted to residential use. The architecture is that of a traditional New England "saltbox."

A mailbox door and windows are found on the end where the original carriage house once adjoined the main house.

The current occupants are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ross.

For many years the home was the residence of a early Cohasset seafarer, Capt. George Cousens (born in 1803 and died in 1876.)

Caleb Nichols (the original builder) was also the builder of the existing steeple on the First Parish meetinghouse at the Common.

Those people submitting correct answers were the Galt Grant family, A. J. Antoine Jr., Lynette Lyndan, Betty Enders, Robert Leonard Sr., Lillian Pierce, Charles Wheelright, Hamilton Tewksbury, Warren Pratt, Jean Rosano and Mary Fleming.

Two omissions were made last week. Mary Fleming and Warren Pratt each mailed in correct answers and their names were inadvertently omitted.

After six weeks, the Galt Grant family, Robert Leonard Sr. and Warren Pratt are still fighting for first place with five correct answers and there are two people fighting for second place.

With four correct answers are A. J. Antoine Jr. and Betty Enders.

Jean Rosano, Lynette Lyndan, Lillian Pierce, Charles Wheelright and Hamilton Tewksbury each have three correct answers.

These people are vying for the retail prizes which will be a $100 gift certificate at the Linen Chest, $50 gift certificate at Hugo's and a $25 gift certificate at Fleming's of Cohasset.

This will be Week 7 of the ten-week Mystery House Tour.If need be, two houses will be provided for playoffs.

Once you find the home, write down the address of the homes, exact number and street along with your name, address and phone number and send it to the "Mystery House Tour", care of the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025 or drop off the answers in an envelope at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or at Hennessey's News, both in Cohasset Village.

The deadline for weekly entries will be 9:30 a.m. sharp Tuesday.

The following week we will disclose the correct address with a picture of how the home looks today with a little history brief about each house.

Remember, only one guess per week.

This week's clue is: this building was once a private school and also used as the site of town meetings. There are some very famous Cohasset people in this picture.

undecided whether to pursue a career in town politics.

Marlette on the other hand seemed pleased with the number of votes he garnered in his first political contest.

Acknowledging not a seasoned politician or well known personality, Marlette said, "I am committed to serving on the school committee and I will work tirelessly to gain the confidence and support of my fellow residents."

A full-time law student, Marlette stressed the need for long range planning in curriculum development and plant management. He entered the race as an acknowledged "dark horse yet the outcome instilled a confidence in me. I had no resources or organized support until the end of the campaign. And I still have my ideas," he said.

Conley said, "It's been a good three years and it's very satisfying to me that the people had faith in me. I look forward to the next three years, continuing our basic issue to do what's best for the kids of Cohasset," he said.

WATER COMMISSION

Montouri acknowledges he didn't advertise much and he had a tough competitor in Jeff Bettinger.

But he feels his professional engineering background and his experience "at this particular time" gave him the edge. Montouri added the Water Commission is all he wants to serve and has no plans to run for any other office.

He has a high regard for Bettinger and feels he should be involved on some other town board or committee.

Two days before the election, The Patriot Ledger published a news report about Montorui's business relationship with one of the firms which will be awarded the contract to determine if the Cohasset Heights landfill is polluting Lily Pond.

Montouri said he alerted the board more than a month ago to the potential problem and said when the final award is made, he will determine if he should participate in the final decision.

Examining elderly institutional care

By Patricia Desmond

There was a time when people expected to spend their declining years in the homes of their children.

That isn't today true, and, according to some health care workers, it may be just as well.

People don't get along better as they grow older, they just grow older, one person said.

But, "It's a myth that every elderly person can expect to need institutional care," one nursing home official said.

"The figures that have been quoted for years are that five percent of the elderly population will need institutional care and the elderly population is growing rapidly."

Most elderly people are able to live in their own homes or apartments. Locally, however, the five percent figure doesn't seem to hold up.

Finding a nursing home bed in this area is difficult.

"Part of the reason is that people are living longer," another nursing home employee said.

According to Richard Starr, whose family owns the Deering and Queen Anne nursing homes in Hingham, people aren't opposed to nursing home care the way they used to be.

"I remember years ago when I was first in the nursing home business, people would say 'I'll never go to a nursing home.'

"Now when they turn 60, they start thinking about where they want to go for elderly housing and then when they move to elderly housing they start thinking about which nursing home they think they would like. There are no more three generational homes."

Starr doesn't see the state program of home care services changing the need for nursing home care. What he sees is less need for the care a rest home (called Level 4 by the state) might provide.

Both Deering and Queen Anne have all the patients they can handle at this time.

"There is a very long waiting list," Starr said.

An official of Cohasset Knoll Facilicare said there are no available beds at that nursing home.

Nor are there available beds at other nursing homes contacted.

One nursing home official said the reason for the absence of empty beds in this area has more to do with the quality of the homes and with the overall quality of the area.

"Even if you've lived your whole life in Boston or Somerville, if your relatives are in the suburbs that's what your choice would be for nursing home care," she said.

In the towns of Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate there are nine nursing and/or rest homes.

That includes: Norwell Knoll and Stetson Manor in Norwell, Cardigan and Ocean Manor in Scituate, Cohasset Knoll and Ripley Road in Cohasset, Queen Anne, Deering and the New England Friends Home in Hingham. There are proposals for two new nursing homes in Hingham.

In those towns the elderly population is increasing dramatically.

According to the 1980 census, there were 729 people over 65 in Norwell out of a total population of 9,182. In Scituate there were 1,180 people over 65 out of a population of 17,317. In Cohasset there were 869 people over 65 out of 7,174. In Hingham there were 2,050 people over 65 out of a population of 20,339.

That means that in those towns the number of people over 65 is: 10.07 percent in Hingham, 12.11 percent in Cohasset, 10.45 percent in Scituate and 7.93 percent in Norwell.

According to Hannah Adams, who keeps records for the Hingham Council on Aging, the numbers of people over 60 are far larger. Her latest count shows that there are 3,059 people over 60 living in Hingham.

"Between 1975 and 1980 there was a seven percent increase in the number over 60," she said. Her numbers show that the increase seems to have leveled off but the change over a 10-year period has been high.

"The change in Hingham hasn't been as rapid as in other towns nearby," she said. She guessed that is because the number of new homes in Hingham increased during the same time period, increasing the number of younger people in town.

"The numbers are increasing in Hingham, it's just the percentage isn't changing as quickly," she said.

Fourteen percent of the population of Hingham is over 60.

According to a report released late last year by South Shore Elder Services, there has been a 25 percent increase in the number of people over 60 in Cohasset from 1975 to 1980. In the same time there has been a 31 percent increase in the number of people over 60 living in Scituate.

No one seems to know the reason for the increase.

"People are living longer, having fewer children and all," one nursing home worker theorized. "But I think a large part of the change comes from changing expectations—people expect to find things to do with their time after their retirement. Companies even run programs to get people ready for retirement. I've been working in nursing homes 20 years and I'm not saying the people here lead what a younger person would consider a productive life but there are social programs, crafts, reasons to keep going. Twenty years ago it seemed people would give up hope when they'd come to a nursing home. You can't really generalize but there's just more reason to live...

There are also more checks on nursing home care today.

Mildred Kirsh is the coordinator of the nursing home Ombudsman program for South Shore Elder Services. The program's purpose is to help solve problems for the patients of nursing homes. A visitor, who is a trained volunteer, acts as an advocate for the patients.

The area served by South Shore Elder Services covers 38 nursing homes or other longterm placement facility. The visiting program already covers 24 of the facilities.

Kirsh was reluctant to comment on whether any serious problems have been uncovered so far.

"It's impossible to explain the program in a word or two," she said. "The training for our volunteers is five hours a day for five days. It's a complicated program."

Starr called the population change "the geriatric explosion."

But aside from the increasing numbers of the older generation, there are two reasons the elderly today are less likely to live with their grown children.

The first is the mobility of families these days. As families move more, the chances are the older generation will be living in a different part of the state or country.

The second reason is the increase in working women and two-job households.

As one nursing home worker said, "No one would be doing an older person a favor by taking them into their house and then leaving them alone with a T.V. set for 40 to 50 hours a week— and that's supposing the family doesn't have an active social life. At least in a (nursing) home there is always someone a few steps away when they're needed."

Another worker at a retirement home said she thought the decision about how an older person should live depends on the person and the family.

"If folks haven't gotten along with their children when they were younger, they might be better off in a retirement home," she said.

"And some folks just want time to be alone and read. They don't want children around all the time, although they might want to live close enough so they can see their children often.

"It all depends on the person."

Basketball league thanks

The Cohasset Recreation Commission extends their sincere gratitude to the volunteer coaches and the Basketball Boosters club members for their support of this year's Basketball League.

Should it not be for the efforts of the numerous volunteers, the program would be essentially impossible to conduct.

This year 300 youngsters participated in the program.

EASTER ACTIVITIES

April 19, Maundy Thursday Service of Communion. For the past fifteen years a small group of persons has gathered in the Meeting House on Thursday evening before Easter to observe a Service of Communion read from our old hymnbooks, "Hymns of the Spirit." It is a simple service of remembrance open to all to recall Jesus' last meal with his disciples.

April 22, Easter Sunday Sunrise Service. Again this year we will offer a brief service at Sandy Beach on Easter Sunday morning to greet the returning sun. Sunrise is at 4:53 a.m. which we realize is a very early hour to expect attendance, but in this case the choice of time is nature's and not our own.

SS Collaborative steers pre-schoolers' growth

(This is the fourth in a multi-story series on the South Shore Collaborative. Ed.).

By Theresa Sullivan

They're cute, affectionate and responsive to their teachers and each other.

Some can speak; some can't, but they all are able to communicate joy, frustration and friendship.

The six preschool-age children in the South Shore Collaborative's Pre-school program at Plymouth River School in Hingham are taught the same skills other children their age are taught, but each individual child is taught at his own pace.

Like the other South Shore Collaborative programs, the class is able to give the individual attention necessary for the children's growth. "The classroom uses a developmental approach," said Pat Linari, program director.

"Even though they are behind in their development, you try to push them up to what the 'normal' child would do (at a given age)," she said.

Depending on each child's needs, a speech therapist, a physical therapist and an occupational therapist are available.

Most of the children will advance to a special needs class in the public school in their own town. Others will need the intensified training in communication skills offered through the collaborative's Primary Language class, Linari said.

The Pre-school class has one teacher and one part-time aide. The younger children come for only half the day; so not all six students are there five full days a week.

The Pre-school children are taught dressing, feeding and toileting skills. "We are trying to move the kids along to their next level. We go swimming once a month; this is an opportunity for them to practice dressing skills," while learning to swim and having fun, Linari said.

"As part of the self-care program, we have a snack and work on feeding."

The children are taught "readiness skills," or pre-academic skills.

Like the other collaborative classrooms, teachers and aides use love and affection within their curriculum. And they're encouraged through attention and "motivation" devices. For example, the children in the Pre-school class are given "happy faces" to wear if they are well-behaved.

The teachers are also dedicated. Many of the collaborative's teachers are taking courses at the Boston School for the Deaf at their own expense, Linari said. The teachers try to communicate with the children in any way they can and any way that works.

The parents of the Pre-school children, like the parents of the Primary Language and Community Program children, are in daily communication with the teacher through notes. Each day, the teacher writes to the parents about each child's day at school.

This year the Pre-school program costs $9,000 per pupil because the class is so small. Next year the class will include nine students and the per pupil cost will drop to $5,400, Dr. Michael Savage, the collaborative's executive director, said. A program comparable to the Pre-school program would average $9,300 elsewhere, he said.

The South Shore Collaborative includes Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

Pat Linari

Non-member towns are able to send their students to the collaborative's programs for the same cost as the member towns. Currently students from Hanover, Abington and Brockton are enrolled in the South Shore Collaborative's programs.

Community Program student Kristin, age 8, enjoys swimming with the help of Connie Smith.

Rec. Dept report

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the 8th annual Easter Egg Hunt, for children three to 12 years, Saturday, April 21, at 1:00 p.m. at the Deer Hill School field.

This year there is a distinct possibility that the Easter Bunny and some of his helpers will be on hand to help with the Hunt.

Children will be divided into three separate chronological groups.

They are: Group 1 three to five years old (with parents), Group 2. six to eight years old; and Group 3 nine to twelve years old.

Please gather around your designated age area sign before 1 p.m.

Individualy wrapped chocolate eggs will be scattered about the designated areas. In each group three or four of the eggs will be wrapped with masking tape and will have a number on the tape. Should the contestant find one of the numbered eggs, hold on to it as you will receive a prize from the Easter Bunny.

This year's program sponsors are: Cohasset Rotary Club, American Legion Post 118, and the Cohasset Police Association.

The rain date will be Saturday, April 28, at 1 p.m. at the Deer Hill School field.

The faculty will consist of experienced teachers trained in the Orton-Gillingham approach and certified by Massachusetts General Hospital. Enrollment is limited. A brochure is available upon request. Contact Marcia H. Murphy for more information at 383-0839.

Cancer crusaders begin

Cohasset's 1984 Cancer Crusaders will begin making their calls to residents within the next few days.

"We are suggesting to our Crusaders that they get an early start so that they can make their final clean-up Tuesday, April 24," David Chittim, Residential Chairman for Cohasset said. "Realistically, it is probably not possible for all the calls to be made on that single evening."

Kits with important information about cancer which the Crusaders will leave at each home, are being distributed to the Crusaders this week by Area Captains. They will then make sure that the contributions solicited at the time of the visits are returned to the Cushing Plaza office of Rockland Trust Company.

Over 135 Cohasset residents have responded to telephone invitations to be Crusaders and make calls upon their neighbors. Their efforts will be directed by Precinct and Area Captains working with Mr. Chittim. In Precinct 1, Bob Ciciotte is Chairman, and Ozzie Ingram hears the Precinct 2 group of Captains.

Precinct 1 Captains are Maria Plante, Dick and Ginny Abbadessa, Holly Holway, Taffy Nothnagle, Marilyn Fessler, Lucia Woods and Beverly Quilty. In Precinct 2, the Captain are Betty and Bob Ripley, Al Odermatt, Don McAllister, Regina Schultz, Nancy Ripley, Jean Higgins, Margaret Young, and Ann Mitchell.

Though Easter is a joyful celebration for us all, it is the biggest and best of the year for those of Greek heritage. For the 40 days of Lent, vegetables, legumes and fruit replace meat and dairy products and as their fast draws to a close, housewives begin to prepare traditional holiday foods. Neighbors help each other in making cookies, breads and dying eggs and the day before Easter the villagers are up early to prepare the lambriotis, the milk-fed lamb each village family raises to roast in the outdoor beehive oven. Grandma also gets involved in the difficult task of assembling and cooking the lambroscouppa, a delicious soup to be eaten after the Saturday midnight Mass. For most of us ham is a tradition at Eastertime and thanks to Katherine Dwight, we have this recipe from the King's Arms Tavern in Williamsburg, Va. which could easily become a family tradition and is called simply

SWEET POTATOES

3 lbs. sweet potatoes
3/4 c. light brown sugar, packed firmly
3 T butter
1/2 tsp. each cinnamon and nutmeg
1/4 tsp. salt
1 c. milk

Cook potatoes in boiling, salted water until done. Peel and mash. Stir in remaining ingredients except 2 T of the sugar, which is to be sprinkled on top of casserole. Turn mixture into 1½ qt. casserole and bake in 400 degree oven for 30 min.

After a busy Holy Saturday, families dressed in their Easter best and holding unlit candles set off for the long Mass of Holy Saturday. On the stroke of midnight the priest proclaims Christ has risen and bells ring, fireworks and guns sound, while the candles are lit and brought home to decorate the family's first meat meal eater after the long fast. You don't have to be Greek to enjoy Ann Batman's recipe for

GREEK SPINACH PIE

4 eggs
1 2 lb. butter
1/2 lb. Crisco
2 lb. spinach
1 lb. Greek white cheese

Melt butter and Crisco together and allow to cool. Beat 4 eggs in small pan. Wash spinach and cut into small pieces. Wrap in towel to remove excess water. Crumble white cheese. Place spinach in large pan. Add cheese and mix together. Then add eggs and melted shortening. Mix well. Make regular pie crust rolled out thin for 9 x 11" pan. Grease pan. Place sheet of crust in bottom. Pour spinach mixture in place and top with pie crust. Brush with egg yolk mixed with a little water. Bake in 350 degree oven for about 1 hour, or until crust is golden brown.

The following day, after the short church service called the Mass of Love, it's home to what families call their Pascal meal, beginning with the joyous ritual of egg cracking in which each person taps the tips of his eggs together until one is broken, then offering good wishes to all around the dinner table before the feast begins.

Equally charming is Lilyan Seiss's way with eggs at Eastertime. Eggs to be used are pricked with a pin to allow the contents to drain out. (Save for scrambled eggs). Rinse off egg in cold water and turn upside down to drain in an empty egg carton. When completely dry, take a sharp paring knife and enlarge the pinhole to about the size of a dime. Then with a funnel, fill each shell with different flavors of jello which have been cooked and cooled slightly. Shell when ready to use. Nestle in a bed of watercress or parsley, or decorate the edge of the ham platter with these multi-colored jelly Easter eggs.

While leafing through an old copy of "Gourmet" I found this simple way of preparing

BAKED ASPARAGUS PIEDMONT

Break off and discard tough ends of 2 lds. asparagus and peel stalks. Rinse and drain and wrap in large sheet of foil, sealing ends tightly. Bake at 425 degrees for 25-30 min. Serves six.

Guidance tests

On Saturday, May 12, the Guidance Department will administer to interested students the Differential Aptitude Test (D.A.T.) and the Strong-Campbell Interest Inventory.

These tests will generate a detailed analysis of a student's interests and aptitudes which will be of some assistance to determine future careers and college majors.

Although this testing is available to all students in Grades 9 - 12, it could be helpful to 10th and 11th grade students as they begin to plan future career and educational plans.

The test will be administered in the Cohasset High School cafeteria beginning at 8:30 a.m. and ending about 3 p.m. -- with a one hour lunch break.

Students are asked to bring lunch or make other arrangements, since the cafeteria will be closed during that period of time.

The testing fee is $10 and students must register in the Guidance Office before April 27.

NEWSLETTER

Research skills, interview techniques and rules for thinking have been the focus of our type II training classes.

RESEARCH SKILLS

Once each student selected a topic and developed search words, we scheduled field trips to the Paul Pratt Library. Mrs. Jo Anne Mitchell introduced our researchers to the Reader's Guide. After recording a number of appropriate articles, the students were asked to follow through with notetaking as a homework assignment.

We also tapped newspapers as a resource. Students have been encouraged to scan titles, clip out pertinent articles and note bibliographical information.

Follow-up: Classroom teachers are being asked to require enrichment students to use these resources whenever it is appropriate to the curriculum.

INTERVIEW TECHNIQUES

The announcement that each student would be required to conduct a personal interview, was met with more than a little trepidation. Interviewing me was their first training exercise. We brainstormed potential resources, wrote letters, scheduled appointments and became familiar with tape recorders. Our students have interfaced with teachers, businessmen, judges and politicians. The growth each student has displayed in specific skills and self-confidence, is quite impressive.

Parent Follow-Up: Please encourage your children to use the phone to make their own appointments and to realize the wealth of information human resources can provide.

HOW "TO THINK"

This theme is ongoing. We learn that thinking like any other ability can be improved by practicing certain "rules." The beginning point has been to focus on knowing ourselves and sharpening our observations.

MINI-COURSES

A special thank-you to Kathryn Corvettt, a Cohasset Senior, who volunteered her time to introduce interested students to the Spanish language.

Mrs. Jean O'Malley introduced the techniques of portraiture. On a recent field trip to the South Shore Art Center, the students participated in an ongoing class and were given a demonstration lesson by Mrs. Connie Pratt.

CAREERS

Why do people work? How does the job market change? What do I like and what are my strengths? were a few of the questions pursued in this course. We used multimedia for exploration that included guest speakers, public T.V., computer programs, and printed material.

TYPE 1

Jane Goudecke, President of the A.F.S., arranged to have three students share their experiences with us. The slides and artifacts fascinated and stimulated a long barrage of questions. The enthusiastic response was very gratifying.

SUMMER THOUGHTS

Our area offers a variety of summer programs for Gifted and Talented youngsters. If you would like to explore these options, please contact me.

Museum of Science trip

Wednesday, March 28, the Grade 5 students went on an exciting trip to the Museum of Science. One exhibit we thought was very interesting was the Ban Chiang exhibit of a skeleton in cement. Ban Chiang is a village in Thailand.

Another fascinating exhibit was the big dinosaur. Its structure, height, and width were extraordinary. We wondered how they put it together. It was given as a gift from Filenes.

"Mathematics" was also interesting with its electronic devices and geometric pictures. Another amazing display in "Mathematics" was the cube of lights. It was run by mulitplication. We also liked the celestial mechanics. We made an arch out of styrofoam blocks. We recommend it highly to anyone who drops by the museum.

The last place we went to was the planetarium. There we learned about the stars.

I think we all enjoyed that exhibit because when the lights went out you looked up at the ceiling. It was like looking up at the sky on a clear summer night and seeing thousands of stars.

We thank Mrs. McNamara and the PSO for getting the buses and arranging the trip. We also thank Mrs. Weisenfluh, Mrs. Marsac, Mrs. Pyle, and Mrs. Rousseau for taking their time to accompany us.

Computer opportunities

By Doris Lahage

"A head start for college."
"It's hard, but I'm glad I took it."
"I know I'll need it, and I like it."
"I thought it would be boring, but it's fun."

Are these students talking about schoolwork? Yes, they are, and they are excited about it. What's the subject? Well, it's COBOL (a programming langauge).

The comments above were made by Sarah Seavey, Susan Reddie, Nancy Donahue and Ricky Rourke, part of the Business Department's COBOL class at Cohasset High School. The positive attitude of these students while learning how to use the computers is amazing.

These students are learning how to program. Others are learning word processing.

Peggy Litchfield said, "People don't even know what word processing is. It is great to be able to type a letter on the computer, edit it, delete and insert words, and have a good finished copy. I'd much rather use word processing than type on a typewriter. It's faster, and the results are much better."

Some students are learning how to do accounting projects on the computer. Randy Salvador has taken to the computer as a duck takes to water.

He commented, "Accounting projects on the computer have made accounting more interesting and have helped me understand accounting better."

Michael Bergenheim is learning in the business math class how to do a complete payroll system—earning records, payroll register, checks—both manually and on the computer.

Today's students are aware that when they go into the work force, computer literacy and computer usage will be demanded of them. They know that by 1985 (just around the corner) the number of businesses relying on computers is expected to double.

Their friends and family members in the business world are working with and talking about computers, and these students know enough to participate in the conversations.

During the past three years, through a Federal Vocational Grant, the Business Department at Cohas-

Tugboats to schooners have marked town's history

By David Wadsworth

Throughout American maritime history, the name of Cohasset has appeared upon a number of ships ranging from tugboats to four-masted schooners.

Naval vessels carrying the name of our town have served in four wars, carrying Cohasset's name to far corners of the world. Additionally, several ships have carried the "Indian" variant of the name, Conohasset or Konohassett, alternative spellings derived from the original Algonquin "Quonahasset", the name found by Capt. John Smith when that explorer visited our harbor in the year 1614.

Recently, Cohasset's naval historian Commander Tyrone Martin, U.S.N. (Ret.) made a study of the U.S. Navy's use of the name Cohasset and found several Naval vessels have carried the town's name, beginning in the Civil War and extending to the 1960's. The first Naval ship named Cohasset was a Civil War despatch or "picket" boat built in Providence, R.I. in 1860.

That vessel served with the Union's Naval blockading squadron in the Chesapeake Bay and participated in Naval expeditions going up the rivers of Virginia.

Subsequently, that first "Cohasset" became a harbor patrol vessel on the North Carolina Coast, then, after the war was assigned to Naval duties in Boston. In 1892 the first U.S.S. "Cohasset" was retired from Navy service. World War I saw another "Cohasset" enter service.

Just eight days before the Armistice that ended the war in November 1918, a 3,600 ton freighter some 406 feet in length, was launched from the Bethlehem Steel's Fore River yard in Quincy. Its name was "Cohasset", and it soon joined its sistership "Nantasket" as part of the Navy's supply fleet operated by the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

After several trips to Europe carrying military supplies, "Cohasset" was transferred to the U. S. Shipping Board, Boston, and remained in service until 1933. At its launching in 1918, the vessel was christened by Mrs. Harry E. Mapes, wife of the Chairman of Cohasset's Selectmen. Cohasset residents raised by subscription a fund to present the ship with a handsome brass ship's clock which hung in the vessel's wardroom.

World War II saw the name Cohasset assigned to another warship, the Tank Landing Ship "Cohasset" LST-129. Part of the Navy's amphibious landing fleet, LST-129 carried Marines for the landings made to capture the Pacific islands of Saipan and Tinian, then in the operation to occupy the island of Palau, all of which had been major strongholds for Japanese military forces.

"Cohasset" LST-129, earned three battle stars for its action in the Pacific war. Originally built at an inland shipyard in Indiana, LST-129 was finally removed from the Naval Register in 1946 as the Second World War ended. Another Naval vessel of the World War Two era, the large harbor tugboat "Conahasset" constructed in 1944, was placed in mothballs following the end of the war, and served again during the Korean conflict, "Conahasset" eventually was decommisioned by the Navy at Portsmouth, N.H. in 1960.

During America's great "Age of Sail" the name of Cohasset is known to have been given to several sailing vessels. An early "Cohasset", a packet boat, owned by Cohasset shipbuilder Levi Tower and built here perhaps in 1814, was captured by British warships during the War of 1812. Capt. John Wilson of Cohasset and the ship's crew also were taken.

Owner Levi Tower, one of Cohasset's leading mariners, was able to regain his vessel by the payment of a ransom, the usual way of reclaiming one's captured property during that war.

Later, a 42 ton schooner named "Cohasset" was recorded as having been built here in 1834 and owned by a group of local residents. Captain Peter Pratt was Master of the ship. Little is known about that particular vessel, but it appears to have been launched at Cohasset Harbor on November 1, 1834.

The same year saw the construction of another and larger vessel at Cohasset shipyards, the ship "Konohasset", a 124 foot three-master of 426 tons. Owned first by a trio of New York shipowners, the "Konohassett" soon passsed into the hands of the Sears family of Boston.

"Konohassett", originally registered in the Port of New York, soon appeared on the list of Boston registered vessels under the command of Capt. John Foster. Perhaps the largest sailing vessel to carry the name of Cohasset was a four-masted lumber carrying schooner of 1,446 tons, 184 feet in length built in Bath, Maine during 1903 and owned by Daniel S. Emory of Boston.

Its captain was F. W. Gorham. This great vessel was partially destroyed by fire on January 23, 1907 at Canton, Maryland. The burned-out hull of the schooner was salvaged, rebuilt, refitted and in 1910, was renamed "Anna M. Heidritter" of Baltimore, Maryland.

Under its new name the schooner served until lost in 1942 at Ocracoke Inlet, North Carolina. There may have been other ships which went to sea bearing the name of Cohasset, but these are the ones whose names appear in records of the Cohasset Historical Society.

School News . . . computer opportunities . . .

set High School has been able to purchase four computers, a letter-quality printer for word processing, a dot-matrix printer, and a large library of software for business applications.

The grant was written to provide a computer-based office training program for business students. The computers have been implemented into the regular business curriculum—a good way of showing the students how electronic data processing has changed the overall operation of businesses.

All advanced typing students and Speedwriting (an alphabetic shorthand) students are learning word processing. Each can type, edit, save and produce a perfect printed copy in record time. Preparing papers for other courses is a fringe benefit of knowing word processing.

Each person in the accounting class has already this year completed an entire month's worth of business for a company, done all the financial transactions, prepared closing entries, prepared an income statement and a balance sheet.

Most of the students in accounting go on to college and know that the time they have spent learning how to do their accounting projects on the computer has been worth the time and effort.

Collette Ford in business math said about the use of the computer in her class, "At first I was nervous, but now I really like it and know what I'm doing."

The students who have taken business courses, but who do not plan to go on to college have an excellent opportunity to prepare themselves for entry-level positions by development of their computer skills.

They learn data entry by keeping accounts receivable records, payroll records and an inventory control system. Word processing is an excellent skill for the student who is not going on to college. Having good computer skills would help these students secure entry-level office positions.

We believe every student in every business course should have an extensive hands-on unit in data processing. Unfortunately, this will take more equipment. We have made a presentation to the School Committee and requested funding for the purchase of two more computers, another letter-quality printer and an electronic typewriter with memory.

If we are going to prepare our students in the latest technology in the computer field, we must have enough equipment for each student to have sufficient hands-on time to really become skilled in the use of word processing, accounting software packages, and knowledge of at least one business programming language, such as COBOL.

One of our goals is to introduce our business management students to the use of electronic spreadsheets for making management decisions. Another goal is to have all typing students, not just advanced students, be able to use word processing. Again, this will require additional equipment.

As the teacher involved in development of the data processing program in the business department at CHS, I have found it both exciting and rewarding. It has taken a great deal of time and study, but it has certainly been worth it.

The students who work on the computer, by and large, have a feeling of satisfaction at what they have learned. Along the way, there may be some frustration, but there is a great deal of learning going on and a motivation to learn more.

They feel as though they are in the forefront of the wave of the future. We need more equipment because typically business application requires large amounts of computer time to input and output the data. There are not enough computers to satisfy the increasing student use and interest in learning its various capabilities.

We are looking forward to getting more funds to keep the expansion of the computer facilities current with what they will find in college and the business world. Finally, it should be noted that we have already had a small number of students get positions because of the training they have had on the computers in the business department at Cohasset High School.

Sharon Souther sums up most students' feelings about using the computers, "I think it's 'awesome'; I'm looking into a career in travel and know I'll be working on computers."

Town Meeting briefs . . .

Marks given standing ovation

Retired Town Clerk Charles Marks received a heartfelt standing ovation from the 200 persons attending Saturday morning's session of Town Meeting.

Selectmen Chairman Mary Jane McArthur presented a resolution proclaiming the town's "keen appreciation of the distinguished services by Charles Marks from 1957 to 1984," and honoring his "conscientious effort and proficiency" in his duties as the Town Clerk

Marks resigned in February after serving in the town clerk's office for almost 40 years. He was parttime Town Clerk for the past 13 years. A heart attack last summer forced the Weymouth resident to resign the position after recuperating for several months at home. Noting the duties delegated to the position requires a fulltime commitment, Marks made the decision to retire from public office.

Seated at the rear of the high school auditorium Saturday afternoon, Marks made a few comments following the passage of the resolution.

"For 39 years it was a pleasure - I enjoyed every minute," he said. "I know my capable assistant (sister-in-law Frances Marks) will carry on as well as I did."

Sewer engineering study review

Charles DeSantis, chairman of the sewer commission, took a few minutes away from the Town Meeting warrant to review the status of the sewer engineering study conducted by Ward Associates.

The initial draft of the townwide sewer study was to be prepared and available to the public by April 11. Fifty copies will be distributed to the library, Town Clerk's office, and the sewer commission office on Elm Street.

The next important date, he added, is May 24, when a public hearing will be held to discuss the draft of the engineering study. Within two weeks of that date, a final version of the sewer alternative study will be prepared.

The most important date to keep available on your calendar, DeSantis reminded voters, is sometime in mid-June. A special town meeting will be scheduled about that time. Among the more important items which will lure voters to that meeting will be the decision whether to approve the engineering study and appropriate funds for implementation.

DeSantis said the members of the sewer advisory committee will be available and willing to talk with residents about the engineering draft and final report as they are prepared.

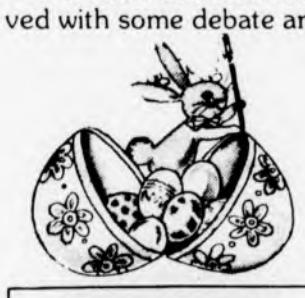
Annual budget approved

By Jane Lane

Town meeting progressed at its usual languid pace with more than half the warrant articles completed.

The expectation, as about 200 persons exited the auditorium to the news of a wide-spread power outage, was that the 1984 Town Meeting would be history after Monday night, April 9.

The town's annual budget of $8,270,545 was approved with some debate and little controversy.



Advisory committee chairman James Lagrotteria recommended approval of budget, including more than $4 million for school appropriations. Until recently the school committee and advisory board were at odds regarding the school budget. That proposal was $222,000 greater than what the advisory committee recommended. A change of heart by the advisors leaves the town with only $207,000 in available funds for the remaining 29 warrant articles, Lagrotteria cautioned.

The board did not recommend deficit spending by the town, he added, by approving $6000 more than the school department annual allotment. There is a possibility of increased available funds, he noted, with additional town permits and other fees to offset the increased school allocation.

Serious deviation from other budget articles would "cause the town to seek funds from other sources and could cause havoc with our financial resources," he added.

A bit of controversy arose quickly into the meeting Saturday afternoon, April 7, when chairman of the Government Structure Committee, Donna Magee,

Birthin' babies has changed, Miss Scarlett

By the time that doctor got through talking with me, I knew I was either 50 years ahead of my time or 50 behind it. Because there's a heck of a lot more than one generation in the gap of obstetrics.

Let us be clear here: I was interviewing an obstetrician as opposed to using his services. In fact one of the reasons my unawareness of how they're having babies these days has bloomed, is that my friends have not been doing that lately. And I am, unless letters to the contrary have failed to reach me, still in the pre-grandmother stage.

By Lois Martin

PATCHES

Those of you who are busy building families won't find this newsy. But the rest of us who did that about 20 years ago will be amazed.

No, they haven't reverted to bearing young in the cornfields. But today it appears that the young mothers and fathers are calling the shots in how they want a child to be born. And they want them together in as natural a situation as possible.

In my day they practically boiled the mother before allowing her in the delivery room. That was after a dormitory style labor room. There were the preparations to be made back then that made you wish you could have left your body off and done errands.

Today they don't 'prep' the mothers. And the labor room and delivery room, I'm told, have given way to the birthing room. That comes with a reclining chair and television. The doctor told me it is more like a pleasant bedroom than a hospital room and that most mothers prefer that.

In the olden days the expectant father had not learned how to breathe properly during delivery. Now they do. They are skilled at in-house language and they are included in the appearance of a new son or daughter. They want to be. This obstetrician has about 100 percent attendance of fathers at delivery. And in some cases brothers or sisters are there when the new sibling arrives.

Great Scott. I'd have felt compelled to get up and put on a pot of coffee or at least switch a load of wash if the entire family were there. I'd figure the grandmothers would wrap up the crocheting of a bonnet when they were certain of the sex of the new grandchild.

I don't remember having any desire for gatherings in the delivery room. But we weren't in that phase. We were of the sterile era where a mother was best served when controlled/sent away through drugs. I remember coming to after the first delivery barely knowing what my native tongue might be. So the second time around I asked for reduction of drug use so I could say I'd been there when the baby was born.

That's when I had an encounter with a man who should be delivering today and probably is. Because he was an advocate of natural childbirth.

My conclusion after the natural route was that if the doctor liked to have natural delivery, he could and I wouldn't. I liked the gentle compromise of easing anesthetic without being rendered unconscious. Who better deserved to be the first to know what had been born, after all, than the mother.

Today, said the doctor, women want "non intervention." That means no drugs, little or nothing that interferes with nature's own schedule and creation. And he says he deals with 'consumerism.' There's a new one.

Today the mothers/patients are more than that. They bring their choices to the doctors. Some choose midwives and some still opt for delivery room forum. But they are the consumers. They are saying what they want . . . and when. And the doctors, at least this one, appear to be working with them to make the birth process one of choices not just hospital procedure. Bravo.

Anyway it was an education. I asked the interviewee where we would go from here, since modes of maternity care sometime go in cycles. We agreed there may be a swing back from the natural times to the full hospital format. Two generations ago many women had their babies at home and now we're back to that type of naturalness again.

One thing that has not and will not change, is the excitement of a new baby. It is 10 million Christmases to get one. Even if that thrill is replaced by dulling fatigue as the tiny new person learns how to run the household.

Even as we meet here together there are men and women who are in a birthing room waiting for nature to say when. Welcome and good luck, naturally.

Annual town budget approved

proposed the addition of $5000 to the budget for the employment of a fulltime assistant town clerk.

Noting that most surrounding towns employ fulltime assistants, Magee argued the need for such help in that busy office. Currently, the town clerk and assistant are half-time positions.

The advisory committee and selectmen stood in opposition to the proposal, saying they favored a later warrant article to fund a fulltime Town Clerk.

Retired Town Clerk Charles Marks, who earlier received a standing ovation from the audience, said he favored two fulltime staff members in the Town Hall office.

The proposed budget amendment was defeated.

Magee later suggested Article 35, which proposed a $12,000 budget addition for the fulltime Town Clerk position, be advanced in the order of the warrant.

Advisory and selectmen members favored the change in the Town Clerk status, and the article was approved. Although the Town Clerk will now be a 35-hour position, the weekly wage will remain $119 until the new fiscal year begins July 1.

The Water Department presented lengthy arguments for three articles. The first, approved by voters, appropriated $270,000 for water distribution improvements to sections of Border Street, Joy Place, Beach Street, and Jerusalem Road.

And residents may now expect an overall 13 percent increase in their water bills after town meeting approved the rate hike.

Single persons and elderly residents, who frequently do not use more than the minimum allotment, will experience no increase. But residents who use more than the 1500 cubic feet minimum, will feel the crunch.

Because water department expenses now exceed revenues, the rate increase is a necessity, commissioner William Montuori explained. With the rate increase, departmental revenues will exceed expenditures by 1990, he added.

Commissioner Peter Pratt further explained that heavy water consumers are actually encouraged by the department. During hot summer months, the department's revenues are greater than expenses, he said, because of the increased use.

After the minimum cubic feet useage, Montuori said, the resident pays a lesser charge per gallon than before the minimum useage level.

Voters approved the rate increase, along with an appropriation $30,000 for the purchase of a back hoe loader of for the water department. This vehicle will replace a 20-year piece of machinery currently owned by the department.

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield went from Saturday's session a satisfied man. His request for $58,000 for a new street sweeper was approved. This purchase request was not recommended two years ago by the advisory committee, which now supported the proposal or FY85.

The town also allotted $50,000 for street resurfacing, although only $4000 of town funds will be needed because of the availability of state grants, Litchfield explained.

Town meeting also authorized $12,000 to purchase the cab and chassis of a truck for the Tree and Park Department.

Most of the remaining articles reviewed Saturday were annual appropriations included in each fiscal year's warrant.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Graduatiang seniors who have been accepted by a school of fine arts or an accredited art school are invited to apply for one of three scholarships awarded annually by the South Shore Art center.

The awards to be made by the center, 103 Ripley Rd., are the $1,000 Fred E. Bergfors Scholarship, the $600 Marion Huse Scholarship, and the $200 MacIvor Reddie Award.

Portfolios of original work are to be submitted to the center Saturday, May 5, between noon and 1 p.m. Students may pick up their portfolios Wednesday, May 9, between noon and 4 p.m.

As in the past, the scholarships are awarded to "assist and encourage students who live on the South Shore and who show the most promise in the field of art to further their art education," according to Nancy Brady, this year's chairperson of the scholarship committee for the center.

Selection of scholarship recipients will be based on a student's application and portfolio. The selection for the Bergfors scholarship, named for lifelong Quincy resident, businessman and civil leader Fred. E. Bergfors, will be made by Mrs. Constance Bergfors Rice, one of the trustees of the Bergfors Fund. The selection of the recipients of the other two scholarships will be made by jurors Beverly Stanley, art historian, and Irena Roman, freelance illustrator.

Stanley received her MA in art history at Tufts and a BFA from the Boston Museum School. Roman received her BFA in illustration from Massachusetts College of Art and has attended the New England School of Art and the Art Institute.

Portfolio requirements for all three South Shore Art Center scholarships are eight examples of the student's best work inciuding a self-portrait or portrait done from life, a still-life drawing from actual objects and a composition drawing or painting using representational subject matter in any medium.

Quality slides or pictures of three-dimensional work will be accepted. Slides of photographs of work must be marked with applicant's name, title of work, medium, actual size and arrows to indicate top of slide or photograph.

Work should not exceed 18" by 24" and must be matted but not framed.

All applicants will be informed of the jury's decisions by the center and the winners of the scholarships will be announced at graduation exercises. The scholarships will be paid directly to the winners' schools at the beginning of the second semester and will be applied to tuition costs.

Any questions regarding the scholarships may be directed to the center, 383-9548.

The Mack team suffered a tough defeat against a powerful Duxbury team losing 123-22 boys and 88-30 girls.

"Even though we lost I am happy about the couple firsts we had," said Coach Anderson. Those who finished first were Janet Bagley, shotput; Caitlin Staunton, 100 yard dash; Cathleen Buckley, high jump; John Rattenbury, high jump; and David Rice, 100 yard dash.

Others who placed were Michael Desantis, David Shultz, Rich McCarthy, John Reidy, Jackie Plant, Katie Duffy, Cindy Dormer, Elizabeth O'Leary, and Julie Hoogeveen.

Baseball

Although the boy's baseball team has not been outdoors much, they have been working very hard since March 19.

This years new va sity coach, Joe Bouchard, said even though the team consists mainly of young ballplayers, they will be successful and open alot of eyes in the league.

"I think we have a representative team, and I am impressed with the seniors' leadership enthusiasm, and attitude," said Coach Bouchard.

This years seniors include David Ormiston, Bret Wetzell, Kip Trainor, Lee Reed, Chris Kuhn, and Ted Carroll. While the rest of the team includes Jay Contis, Chris Kulturides, Peter Corbett, Bob Corkery, Jamie Roy, Sean Corkery, Philip Mahoney, and Todd Fitzpatrick.

They will open up their first game at home against East Bridgewater.

Girls Softball

The Cohasset Girls Softball team started the season off with a victory over Sacred Heart 10-6.

Cohasset scored five runs in the second and four in the third to blow open a close game. From the third inning on, Cohasset controlled the game.

"We hit well," remarked Coach Fallon, "collecting 10 hits off a very fast pitcher."

"Our defense was fair," continued Fallon, "but there is plenty of room for improvement."

Janet DiGirolamo had three hits and two runs batted in while teammate Carla Lucas contributed two hits and two runs batted in. Senior Kim Whittet smacked a two run double to add to the win.

Against Jeremiah Burke, Cohasset shut them out 6-0 on a great defensive effort.

Kerry O'Brien pitched a very good game allowing a one hit while striking out five.

Jill Nedrow played very well defensively and batted in two runs. While Carla Lucas added two hits and one run batted in for the win.

"Overall, it was a very good team effort on defense," remarked coach Fallon, "but our real test will come this week."

The Cohasset Girls Softball team lost to a very tough veteran East Bridgewater team 11-1.

Cohasset just didn't play well. An excess of errors and walks cost them a game. Also, the lack of hitting added to the loss.

By the end of the second, Cohasset was up 1-0 when six walks and a hit given up by Cohasset caused East Bridgewater to gain the lead 6-1. It finally cost Cohasset with an 11-1 defeat.

Cohasset, in a non-league contest against Mansfield, won 8-7.

The winning run was scored on a delay-double steal in the bottom of the seventh.

Cohasset didn't play bad on defense, but their hitting was lacking in tight situations.

Yet, Cohasset did come back from a one-run deficit to tie, and then capture the win.

Against Hull, Cohasset fell short 7-1.

The Cohasset hitting attack was exceptional but Hull played very well defensively and offensively to overpower Cohasset.

Cohasset played fair on defense, but once again too many walks and mental errors cost them the game.

Lilly Carboni and Carla Lucas had the only two pair of hits for Cohasset.

GOLF

The golf team started their season with a 9-0 victory over Middleboro, Monday, April 9.

According to their coach, Jim Franeu, the team played "outstanding".

Because of the poor weather conditions, they were unable to play their other two scheduled matches that week. The players are John Orago, Troy Chatterton, Chris Powers, Jeff Hartwell, Jim Rooney, Charlie Brady, Mike Cunning, Steve McMahon, and Mike McNeil.

BOY'S BASEBALL

The boys had a tough time this week losing both of their games, 11-1 against East Bridgewater, and 13-1 against Hull.

Chris Kuhn had a double which brought Lee Reid home, and Jamie Roy also connected for a hit against a powerful Hull team. The boys' next game will be on Tuesday, April 24 at home against Abington.

BOY'S TENNIS

The young boy's tennis team suffered two defeats this week against strong teams. Despite the adverse weather conditions, the boys played admirably, losing 4-1 to Scituate and 4-1 to Hull.

Against Scituate the team was missing their valuable No. 3 Alex Choi. Their coach, Toni Jillson, feels certain they will beat Scituate the next time around.

At Hull two of the matches were lost in tie breakers. Jillson said with a little more experience and confidence the team will be competitive.

The co-captains are Brian Ramsey and John Colocousis.

The rest of the team includes Rich Redick, Aiex Choi, Chris Neelon, Curtis Erickson, David Lord, Rich Tinory, David Leptich, Derek Lacks, Steve Muers, Greg Wallingford, and Jason Marsac.

The boys' next match will be Monday, April 23 at home against Hanover.

SS Commuters welcome new member to fleet

By Judy Gilman

Thursday, April 12, saw a new boon to South Shore commuters dock at the Hingham Shipyard as the M/V Dragonfish arrived to offer more trips and seats to the Boston-bound.

And state and local officials rode the 4:30 p.m. boat from Boston to Hingham and back again to hear the concerns of those commuters. For those who have discovered the boating way of commuting, it's like a new religion.

"Why would anyone drive?" was the question that kept coming up.

Why indeed? Why not have a relaxing ride with good conversation complete, if one wishes, in the morning with hot coffee and doughnuts and in the evening with a soft drink or cocktail?

The Dragonfish joins the Gracious Lady and the Nantascot in offering South Shore residents not only a speedy ride but also a constantly-changing view of Boston Harbor on the trip in and out.

Castle Island rears up on the left as the boat sped along. There a tug guides a freighter into the harbor. And commuters' thoughts turn back to the sea, as their ancestors' did, when shipping and travel was the fastest and least expensive way to go.

The Dragonfish, owned by Dana Goodell of Nahant, was built in 1973 in Louisiana by Camcraft. Earlier this year it was modified for commuter use at Cape Canaveral, Florida, before the journey north.

A 95-foot all-aluminum hull, the $500,000 boat has a maximum speed of 23 knots and travels in Boston Harbor, when clear of docking facilities, at 20 knots, keeping strictly to its 30-minute travel time each way between Hingham and Boston.

There are 149 seats inside, including a lower deck cocktail lounge, an outside deck where commuters can stroll in fine weather, and additional outdoor seats aft.

MBTA subsidy of Dragonfish and Gracious Lady has made expansion of the service possible. That subsidy is based on a per-seat basis per trip, to make an alternative to driving into Boston during the reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway viable in terms of convenience for the commuter.

The schedule now calls for nine trips into Boston each morning by boat, and eight out at night.

The Dragonfish leaves Hingham mornings at 6:20, 7:35 and 8:45 a.m. to Boston. The Gracious Lady leaves at 5:50, 7, 8:05, 9:30, and 11 a.m. The Nantascot departs Hingham at 7:10 a.m.

Returning at night, the Dragonfish leaves Boston at 4:30, 5:45, and 7 p.m. The Gracious Lady leaves at 2:30, 4:20, 5:30, 6:30 and 7:45 p.m. The Nantascot makes its return trip at 5:20 p.m.

The Gracious Lady also makes mid-day trips into Boston, leaving at 1:45, 3:05, 4:55, 6, and 7:10 p.m. The Dragonfish travels to Boston also at 5:05 and 6:20 p.m.

The Nantascot charges $2.25 for a single ticket (one way) or $18 for a book fo 10 tickets.

The Dragonfish and Gracious Lady each charge $3 for a single fare, $27.50 for a commuter book of 10 tickets. Tickets are interchangeable between the Dragonfish and Gracious Lady, so commuters may take one into Boston and the other back.

On the Boston side, double-decker buses meet the boats. And the Aquarium station of the Blue Line, which connects with Government Center and Logan Airport, is a short walk away.

On the Hingham side, Plymouth & Brockton and South Shore Bus both offer service down Route 3A to commuters. And the ample parking lot at the shipyard is now finished, so commuters don't have to sprint from the far end of the lot to catch the next boat out.

Thursday afternoon a variety of state and local officials took the Dragonfish. Department of Public Works Commissioner Robert Tierney, Sen. Allan McKinnon, Associate DPW Commissioner Martha Reardon, Joseph Cahill, manager of passenger services for the MBTA and Cecile Papazian, marine transit coordinator, Executive Office of Transportation, and Nicholas Cockinos, Hingham harbor development commission chairman, experienced for themselves the smooth and speedy ride provided by the three turbo-charged engines of the Dragonfish.

The Dragonfish leaves Hingham shipyard for Boston.

And owner Goodell was on hand to personally hand off each passenger to the dock. An old hand in the passenger business with 14 years' experience, Goodell has held the Boston Harbor water taxi service among the islands for the last four years.

Now he can acquaint even more people with the ever-changing scene of Boston Harbor and its islands and get them to and from work at the same time.

Ambulance committee plan adds fuel to the fire

By Jane Lane

A recommendation made by the Ambulance Study Committee to form an Emergency Medical Services Committee has the fire department fuming.

As if the differences between the firefighters and the study committee weren't vast enough, this suggestion has added fuel to that inferno. The study committee, which recently issued a lengthy report regarding the town's ambulance service, recommended that a new advisory committee be formed. This citizens' group, comprised of medical professionals and other residents, would provide input into the operation and management of the ambulance service.

Selectmen agreed to the idea in February, although the suggestion has not yet been implemented. No one has yet to be appointed, and town officials say they are still discussing the recommendation.

The discussions are through within the fire department, and the concensus is unanimous. Chief Martin Dooley and Capt. James Gurry deplore the idea of another citizens' committee investigating their operation.

"It's unnecessary," Gurry simply states. The director of the town's ambulance service, Gurry bristles at the thought of another committee looking into a service he says, "has never received one complaint since 1976."

Not one to tread softly when discussing this topic, he can't understand why a study was ever made into the ambulance service when no complaints had ever been issued. And the notion of another group providing additional input into his department infuriates him.

"Why are they doing this?" he questions. "Do selectmen form a committee to investigate the highway department every time they want to purchase a backhoe?"

Gurry was referring to the development of the Ambulance Study Committee in response to the proposed acquisition of a new ambulance. That item will be discussed as a warrant article at the special town meeting in June.

Bernard Salvador suggested last year that selectmen investigate the most cost-efficient method to operate the ambulance service. A call firefighter for many years, Salvador says he is a "large taxpayer, and I wanted some questions answered."

Adding that he was unaware of any problems with the service, he wondered "if it would be more economical for the town to look into a private service rather than the public service."

There was no other reason for my suggestion," Salvador says."I just wanted to see if any tax dollars could be saved. It was a matter of dollars and cents."

The study committee concluded that the present public service would be more cost-efficient, but several recommendations were made to improve the emergency medical service.

While Chief Dooley is more diplomatic regarding the study committee's report, saying it was a thoroughly-researched project and contained several valid recommendations, he draws the line at the advisory committee.

"I know it is the citizens of this town who pay the bills here, and they have every right to know how their money is spent. But this citizens' review board is hard to accept, because we've never had any complaints or problems with the ambulance service," he says.

Several suggestions forwarded by the study committee were accepted more graciously by the department and have been implemented. A 24-hour military log system; a thorough, written equipment checklist system per shift is now mandated; and an updated rules and regulations manual has been submitted to selectmen by Capt. Gurry.

"I know it may be interpreted as 'you can't be shown anything new,' but I just don't go along with the idea of another review committee," the chief continues. "I would think such a committee might be formed if there were complaints about the system. But there just haven't been any. So why is another committee needed?"

Gurry sees no validity in the formation of another committee. Stating the department is governed by the state general laws, departmental rules and regulations, and the Office of Emergency Medical Services, he labels the local group "unnecessary."

Candidates in limbo until recount

One seat on the board of selectmen remains in limbo this week, although there are signs a winner may yet be declared. The board of registrars will be meeting to decide when a recount will take place.

Candidates Doris Golden and Mary Jane McArthur are anxious to resolve the town's first-time election tie.

Their petition signatures were handed to Town Clerk Frances Marks Tuesday afternoon, shortly before the 5 p.m. deadline. It's now in the hands of the registrars to decide when the official recount will occurr.

According to bylaw, the registrars must notify the candidates three days prior to the recount. An attorney for each candidate is expected to attend the ballot recount of the April 14 election, along with an observer for the contestant.

Golden, who remains in the midst of her second campaign for the board of selectmen, gathered her recount petition signatures in a unique manner. One night this week, her attorney came to her house, while more than 50 people entered to sign the form. A Notary Public observed the proceedings.

"It was easier that way," according to Golden, who said it was more convenient for herself and her attorney to complete the project in one night. She received more than the required ten voter signatures from each precinct.

McArthur said she and some campaign staff members gathered more than the legally-required number of signatures throughout the week. She said she would have an attorney and an observer present during the official recount.

Both candidates had ten days after the election to gather the 20 necessary signatures. Once the town clerk's office received the petition, the scheduling of the recount remains under the jurisdiction of the registrars.

Selectmen were expected Wednesday night to appoint temporary third member of the board of registrars. Burtram Pratt disqualified himself from the recount proceedings last week, because of his personal friendship with McArthur, and his support of her candidacy.

The names of two nominees were submitted to selectmen this week by the Republican Town Committee, and a decision was expected Wednesday night. After a full board of registrars convenes, a recount date is expected to be set.

Should the West Corner garage be saved ?

Jim Lagroterria wants to know what the town is going to do about the delapidated Tree and Park Dept. building in the West Corner.

As a private citizen and taxpayer who is helping to pay for a new $58,000 street sweeper which will be garaged there, Lagrotteria wants to know if this building will be ignored indefinitely.

He was expected to talk with selectmen Wednesday night about the future of the building he labeled, "a disgrace."

Once used as a satellite fire station which housed a truck and one firefighter, Lagrotteria said the building is decaying rapidly. An eight-foot section of the exterior wall has collapsed, exposing the interior of the structure.

The garage now contains various Tree and Park Dept. equipment, some fire department equipment and tires, and the town's lawn mowers. Plans are for the newly-appropriated $58,000 street sweeper to be stored in this building located at Straits Pond.

If the town doesn't intend to maintain the property which has not been painted for almost 30 years, then perhaps it could be utilized for another purpose, Lagrotteria added.

Because this property contains the only acess to Straits Pond, it has potential as a pumping station if voters eventually approved a proposal to connect to Hull's sewer facility, he suggested.

"Whatever we decide to do, sell the land or maintain the building, we have to decide now. If we wait another five years, it will cost a fortune for repairs if we decide to keep it," he said.

Is the West Corner garage going to crumble away? Or should it be saved? (Cundari photo)

Cohasset's week . . .

Mosquito spraying notice

In a letter to selectmen last week, the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project said that aerial spraying will begin in the county the week of April 16, and continue into May.

No aerial spraying will be done over dry land or residences, according to superintendent Gary Benzon. A notice will appear in major daily newspapers at least two days before the start of every aerial spraying operation and will include location and material details. According to Benzon, Abate 4E, "a highly sensitive mosquite larvacide that is relatively non toxic to humans and wildlife, will be the chemical of choice."

Roadside spraying for the control of adult mosquitos will commence when they become bothersome, and continue as necessary throughout the summer, Benzon stated. The mosquito control project will continue to honor telephone requests for exclusion from the spraying program.

Shopping plaza hearing May 2

The Cohasset Planning Board will hold a public hearing May 2 at 8 p.m. at 43 Elm Street for a site plan review of the shopping plaza proposed by Donald Stasko of Cohasset Development Trust.

Cohasset Plaza, a retail neighborhood shopping plaza, is proposed by Stasko and Barbara L. O'Pray of Cohasset Development Trust, at the intersection of Sohier Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Old Mill Bridge reviewed

The dilemma concerning what to do about the scenic, but decaying Old Mill Bridge remains unsolved.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza told selectmen last week that if the same ornate concrete design is requested, the state DPW will not fund the design, nor the construction. And the state, and Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield, have recommended strongly against the repair, rather than reconstruction of the bridge railings.

The state DPW would recommend funding for the reconstruction of the bridge reinforcements, but not the repair of the railings. The cost of redesigning the railings would be between $20,000 and $12,000, according to Lanza.

Earlier this month, selectmen proposed that as part of the state-funded reconstruction package, a wire fence and awning be installed atop the concrete railing. This would prevent the constant barrage of kids from jumping off the bridge into the tidal water below.

Pratt resigns as registrar

Burtram Pratt, a longtime member of the Cohasset Board of Registrars, has disqualified himself from the election recount of the selectman's race.

Citing his personal friendship with candidate Mary Jane McArthur, and his support of her campaign, Pratt said in a letter to selectmen that it was in the best interest of the town to appoint a temporary registrar for the recount.

Pratt also stated that an "untrue statement" in the press last week, that he directed the ballot counting during the April 14 election, "may have altered the public's perception of a sensitive issue."

The board of registrars requested a temporary be named by selectmen as soon as possible. Mark Lanza will contact the Republican Town Committee for a list of nominees.

Special Town Meeting Date

Selectmen voted last week to hold the special town meeting June 18 at 7:30 p.m. That date has been discussed and agreed to by Moderator William Weeks. The warrant for the special town meeting, which will include about 15 articles from the April meeting, opened last Thursday, April 19, and will close May 4.

McArthur resigns chairmanship

At least until the election results are finalized, selectmen chairman Mary Jane McArthur has stepped down from the post she has held for a year.

Because of the pending ballot recount of the contest between herself and Doris Golden, McArthur decided to "excuse myself from acting as chairman of the Board of Selectmen."

Vice chairman Cliff Mitman was automatically ascended into the vacated position , although McArthur will still remain a voting member of the board, at least until the recount is completed.

McArthur emphasized she was not relieving herself from the chairmanship on the advice of an attorney. It was a personal decision she made,"in light of the uncertainty created by the recent election, and given the pendency of legal opinions to be rendered by Town Counsel related to that election."

Town warrant changes

In an effort to make the intracacies of municipal government more comprehensible, Jim Lagrotteria is going to ask for some changes in the special town meeting warrant.

In his discussions with various residents, advisory chairman Lagrotteria said many people don't understand what a stabilization fund or a surplus revenue fund means.

He would like to see a simple definition of such terms entered into the town meeting warrant. Scituate provides a similar explanation in its warrant, he said. Such a simple change would assist a great number of people who vote on the municipal budgets, he added.

Lagrotteria was scheduled to discuss the request with selectmen Wednesday night.

Devine begins campaign

Dr. Richard Devine, PhD., a clinical sociologist in private practice in New Bedford, has announced his intention to run as an Independent for the Tenth Congressional District against U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds.

Dr. Devine, a 10 year resident of the District, said he will "run an upbeat campaign stressing the issues rather than personalities."

Devine teaches psychology and sociology at Bristol Community College and social psychology at the University of Rhode Island. He said key issues include economic development; promoting regional appreciation and tourism; fishing and coastal management issues; and promoting the interests of New England in the congress so that "New Englanders will have at least equitable representation with the so-called Sun Belt which is getting so much favorite treatment by the Reagan administration."

Dr. Devine now lives with his wife and two children in New Bedford.

Decorator featured in showhouse tour

Philip H. Smith of Designer's Creations, 25 South Main Street, is one of the featured interior designers whose work will be included in the Decorators Showhouse and Garden Tour '84.

The house tour and interior design show will be held from April 19 until May 20, at the 1802 Norfolk Inn, 19 Court Street in Dedham.

Advance sale tickets at $7 are available at Flemings of Cohasset. Tickets will be sold for $8 at the door during the show.

The 14th annual house tour and garden show will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Saturdays. There will be additional evening hours Tuesdays, Wednesday and Thursdays from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Sunday hours will be from 1 to 4 p.m. Admission is for children over eight years, and no cameras will be allowed. There will be a boutique and cafe open throughout the event.

This will be the ninth consecutive year that Smith's work has been featured in the house tour show, produced by the Junior League of Boston. An associate member of the Association of American Society of Interior Designers, Smith's work is displayed in Room 21 of the Norfolk Inn. His design, according to the Showhouse brochure, is "a study of the western frontier" depicted in a boy's bedroom. The spirit of the West is captured through Western and Indian artifacts, an antique bunk bed, combined with more modern motifs of sport stars pictures, and the new frontier of space exploration. According to the League, Smith's work "represents current and past American artists."

There are 38 rooms decorated within the Dedham Inn. The Norfolk Inn, which functioned as a tavern and inn from 1801 until 1865, housed many famous persons, including Abraham Lincoln, John Quincy Adams, Layfayette, Andrew Jackson, and Horace Mann. The inn was the focal point of many social and political activities from Dedham to Boston.

Watch out! It gets hard from here

The party's over and the easy stuff is also over. From now on these house pictures will be difficult.

This is what Historical Society Curator David Wadsworth promises for Weeks 8, 9, 10 and the eventual playoffs.

All eleven people submitting answers last week were correct as they named 29 Beach Street.

Those submitting correct answers were Betty Enders, Jean Rosano, Charles Wheelwright, the Galt Grant family, Mary Fleming, A. J. Antoine, Robert Leonard Sr., Lynette Lydon, Hamilton Tewksbury, Lillian Pierce and Warren Pratt.

Built in 1797, this building originally was located on Highland Avenue, where the Town Hall now stands.

Known as "Cohasset Academy," this building was known for some years as a private school run by a group of Proprietors for Cohasset youth as an alternative school to the small district schools run by the town.

In about 1812, interest in the private school began to lessen and later it was used as the site of town meetings and assemblies.

When the Town Hall was constructed, the building was sold by the Proprietors to Capt. Abraham Tower, father of Daniel Tower, shown in the photograph last week.

The building was moved to its present location on Beach Street.

Last week's photo showed the home with different landscaping and a different front entryway.

The other young child shown in the photograph is the late Gilbert Tower.

Regarding the standings, the Galt Grant family, Robert Leonard Sr. and Warren Pratt are tied for first with six of seven correct answers.

With five correct answers and tied for second place are A. J. Antoine and Betty Enders.

Those people having four correct answers are Jean Rosano, Lynette Lyndon, Lillian Pierce, Charles Wheelwright, Hamilton Tewksbury and Verna Martini.

A late entry, Mary Fleming has hit three correct answers in a row.

These people are all vying for retail prizes which will be a $100 gift certificate at the Linen Chest, $50 gift certificate at Hugo's and a $25 gift certificate at Fleming's of Cohasset.

This will be Week 8 of the ten-week Mystery House Tour.If need be, two houses will be provided for playoffs.

Once you find the home, write down the address of the homes, exact number and street along with your name, address and phone number and send it to the "Mystery House Tour", care of the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025 or drop off the answers in an envelope at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or at Hennessey's News, both in Cohasset Village.

The deadline for weekly entries will be 9:30 a.m. sharp Tuesday.

The following week we will disclose the correct address with a picture of how the home looks today with a little history brief about each house.

Remember, only one guess per week.

This week's clue is: An early owner's ancestors were Minutemen.

Studds talks foreign policy

Central America was on the minds of the thirty odd people as they met with Congressman Gerry Studds recently at Town Hall.

Studds referred to the mining of Nicaragua's harbors and the State department's defense as "beyond incredulity."

"Under their argument of collective self-defense Cuba could have mined Miami's harbors in response to Grenada."

"We mustn't forget that we are a nation built on naval traditions. We fought our first two wars for freedom of the seas. By mining we ignore those traditions." Studds said.

One woman asked about the administration's motives. "It used to be that they could trace our foreign policy (in Central America) by what The United Fruit industry was up to. Now its not so simple. It's no longer solely economical; it's more ideological. They simply see the situation as being the good guys against the bad guys, said Studds.

Continued aid to El Salvador was also discussed.

One man in the audience was curious about the president's use of the stand-by funds. "No one was surprised at the president's action." He added the House of Representatives had attempted to pass some emergency aid to ease hunger in Africa and the Senate had attached to the bill military appropriations for El Salvador. "That's about as close as you come to legislative obscenity," he said.

Studds assured the audience the military appropriations would not pass the house. "We have not had the means to debate this issue, but now a debate will be forced as well as a vote."

The superfund, a special fund set up to deal with toxic waste sites, was also discussed.

Studds said that substantially more money was needed. He also favored the fund should be extended to cover health studies and compensation for damage already done. "We lost the first skirmish concerning the fund but we're still fighting. I can't think of a better bill to place on the president's desk this spring than this one."

This fund has impact on the tenth district because 400 toxic sites have been found in the district.

The defense budget was also discussed. Studds blamed the unbalanced budget on the increased defense budget and added that the increases in military spending far outweigh the cuts made to the non-military budget.

He said: "You must remember that when I mention cutting the defense budget what I mean is cutting the President's proposed increase." The president is asking for around a 13 percent increase: a compromise will probably be made around six or seven percent.

The congressman also reminded the audience of the future costs of weapon systems already contracted, such as the MX missile. Those are commitments that have to be honored," and added the costs will dramatically increase. In addition the president is still asking for more weapon systems. If Reagan's increase passes he will have succeeded in increasing the defense budget 100 percent.

Studds politely refused to answer a question concerning his campaign. "This is not the time for that," he said. Also discussed at the meeting was the unlikelihood of Ed Meese's nomination, cable television, FDA labelling, Boston's third harbor tunnel and federal aid to students.

Fuel to the fire . . .

The captain also takes considerable umbrage at the study committee's report, saying it was "inaccurate and biased." He has made no secret of his distaste of the citizens group's criticism of the ambulance service.

"Our ambulance service is comparable to the surrounding communities. The only thing the committee suggested that I would love to see implemented is the upgrading of our EMT training," he says.

But according to Gurry, who is the department's EMTIC (emergency medical service instructor coordinator), such specialized training is cost-prohibitive. It would cost the EMT $850 to obtain the next level of training. Currently, there are no firefighters with training above the basic EMT level.

The study committee report recommended, and Gurry concurs, that Cohasset should have ambulance personnel trained in EMT cardiac. From a geographic standpoint, Cohasset should have advanced emergency care available when transporting someone to the hospital.

Roy Fitzsimmons, chairman of the study committee that compiled the report, says his group is in favor of the emergency services advisory board. Intending the recommendation as a positive suggestion to improve the present system, Fitzsimmons says the new committee would provide factual, up-to-date information and training for the ambulance department.

It is included in the recommendation that a minimum of three persons on the board be medical professionals.

"It's a good service," Fitzsimmons says."But it is a limited service. We made recommendations to improve it and we hope they're followed through.

But Gurry sees the study committee's report as a non-productive critique of the department.

"The morale here is very bad," he adds. "and I don't particularly like continually going to selectmen, or having to join study committees to defend ourselves (Capt. Mark Trask is an ambulance study committee member). I have better things to do with my time."

Historical Commission applies for funds

The Cohasset Historical Commission would like to begin some major spring cleaning around the common, hopefully with some help from the state.

At their meeting last month, commission members kicked around ideas for improving one of the most admired sites in town. It would be great if the electrical and telephone wires surrounding the green could be buried, they thought, but the cost would be prohibitive.

Some financial assistance may be available, however, from a new state program sponsored by the Department of Environmental Management. Member David Wadsworth is in the midst of writing a letter to the agency, informing them of Cohasset's intense interest in the program.

"I'm doing that right now," Wadsworth said this week. "We would love to get the money to bury those wires around the common, and maybe do a few other things. Cohasset's history of receiving state monies has not been the best. But maybe we'll get lucky this time."

Commission chairman Noel Ripley said the group has not yet estimated the cost of such a project, although he said it would probably be about $200,000 -$300,000 - something the commission could not accomplish without financial assistance.

The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission hasn't discussed the possible project, and the matter is not scheduled on next week's agenda. Gordon Stevenson said no one from the historical commission had formally contacted his group about the proposed project "and it's likely we'll get a variety of viewpoints when we do talk about it," he said.

The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission has jurisdiction over improvements and changes made to the common and the surrounding residential neighborhood.

The historical commission discussed many options which could be followed if the state grant materialized. Possibilties such as a cobblestone walk around the common, improvements to the fish pond, or the installation of old gas lamps were bantered about by the members last month.

World of Weather . . . April is the stormiest month

With the wintry month of March behind us many people are lulled into a complacent mood in regard to the weather. But beware! A National Weather Service study indicates that April is the month with the greatest number of storms, especially in New England. Some of the greatest storms in North Atlantic weather history have occurred in April. A roaring Easterly gale on April 16, 1851, known as the "Lighthouse Storm," destroyed the newly constructed tower of Minot Ledge Light, off Cohasset, with the loss of two lives.

More recently, the Blizzard of April 6, 1982, paralyzed coastal Massachusetts. So remember, there is more than the "April showers that bring May flowers" to look forward to.

Thinking of showers, you have heard the expression "It's raining cats and dogs," but have you ever heard of it raining fertilizer? Do you think that sounds silly? Not so, for it does just that during a lightning storm.

To be sure, Mother Nature's lawn spreader is quite different from ours. She uses a towering cumulonibus cloud, bristling with great flashes of lightning and reverberating in a crescendo of thunder.

As Mother Nature works, the darkened skies erupt in an atmospheric marvel that can make a strong man cringe, and send the dog scurrying for safety beneath a bed. Lightning, besides being horrifying, is an essential ingredient in nature's production of fertilizer.

Four-fifths of the earth's atmosphere is composed of nitrogen, a colorless, tasteless and odorless gaseous element. Atmospheric nitrogen, as such, is unusable. It must be converted into a form suitable for plant growth, and this is where lightning comes into play.

With a lightning stroke there is an explosive superheating of the air which causes the nitrogen to combine with the oxygen in the atmosphere, which in turn forms nitrogen oxides. The rain associated with the thunderstorm dissolves the oxides and together they fall to earth as diluted nitric acid. This enters the soil where it is converted, with the aid of bacteria, into forms suitable for plant growth.

The white hot heat of the lightning flash also splits water molecules, causing the formation of ammonia compounds which are eagerly gobbled up by the nutrient thirsty soil. So as your grass grows green this spring, remember you didn't do it all. You owe a word of thanks to Mother Nature.

March Summary

March came in like a lamb but left like a ferocious lion. It was a very stormy and wet month with below average temperature and sunshine. There were three major storms, the most noteworthy on the 29th. This powerful spring storm spread death and destruction along the Atlantic Coast, unleashing more than two dozen tornadoes in the Carolinas that killed more than seventy persons and injured eight hundred. Damage from New England to South Carolina was estimated in the billions of dollars.

Felled branches, trees and telephone poles caused power outages and kept work crews busy for days. Coastal damage was minimal because the astronomically high tides had occurred on the 17th, at the time of the full moon. During the storm, a gust of 108 m.p.h. was recorded at the Blue Hills Observatory, while wind gusts of 60 to 80 m.p.h. were generally experienced throughout Eastern Massachusetts.

It was the worst March storm since March 16, 1956 when the 441-foot Italian vessel, Etrusco, on a voyage from Germany to Boston, was blown ashore at Lighthouse Point in Scituate in 80 m.p.h. winds. Ironically, during the storm of 1984, the 473-foot Maltese freightor Eldia went aground 20 yards off Nauset Beach in Orleans on Cape Cod. Like the Etrusco, the Eldia standing in perfect balance, has become an instant tourist attraction.

Total melted precipitation for March, at my station in Marshfield, was 6.45 inches, 2.51 inches above normal. There was 13.25 inches of snow, 5.55 inches above normal. The maximum 24-hour precipitation (melted) was 1.50 inches on the 29th. Maximum 24-hour snowfall was 6 inches on the 9th. Rain, .01 inch or more, occurred on 14 days with a trace on two days. Snow, 1.0 inch or more, occurred on four days with a lesser amount on four days. Total precipitation this year has been 17.60 inches, 6.39 inches above normal. The mean temperature in March was 27.8 degrees, 9.8 degrees below normal. The average daily maximum reading was 35.3 degrees, while the average daily minimum was 20.3 degrees. The low temperature for the month was zero degrees on the 10th, with a high reading of 49 degrees on the 27th.

There were five clear days, eleven partly cloudy days, and fifteen cloudy days. The average wind speed was 16.5 m.p.h.; normal is 14.1 m.p.h. The highest gust was 65 m.p.h. on the 29th. My anemometer cups had snow loading and the peak gust was probably higher.

April Outlook

April is famous for its vagaries and showers. It is a climatologically transitional month with resulting atmospheric instability which makes forecasting more difficult than usual for meteorologists. An important storm is indicated between the 5th and 7th with high winds and rain. It will be basically fair between the 8th and 15th with some light shower activity associated with frontal passages. The 16th through 21st will be unsettled with changeable weather patterns. The basic air mass will be unstable and there is the chance of a stationary front bringing a prolonged period of precipitation. The 22nd to 30th will continue to be cloudy with some heavy showers indicated.

Weather Q and A

Q. What is the "Easter Sun Dance?"

A. A centuries old superstition says that the sun shines brighter on Easter Day than on any other day of the year. Astronomically, there is no foundation for this belief, yet it persists.

Have a good day and a nice forever!

SS Regional not to rehire Bousquin

The South Shore Regional School Committee unanimously voted recently not to rehire a non-tenured culinary arts teacher without discussion.

Some 25 students, parents and teachers attended the meeting to express support for teacher Albert Bousquin, but they were not asked for their input until after the vote.

A motion was made to fire the teacher; there was no discussion and the vote was taken. Evidently the students did not know that they could speak after the motion was made.

The committee voted 3-2 to rehire another culinary arts teacher after meeting in executive session. This vote was also not given explanation.

Bousquin may request a hearing on his dismissal. Although the committee is not legally required to honor the request because he is a non-tenured teacher, Supt./Dir. Dr. Cliff Easton said he expects the committee to agree to hearing.

Parents who wanted to know why Bousquin was fired were told the committee was following the recommendation of the superintendent. Easton did not give his reasons for recommending Bousquin's firing.

He said this was to protect the teacher's reputation and rights.

The culinary arts teacher has 25 years experience as a baker and has taught at South Shore Vocational Technical High School for two years. Culinary arts students spoke in support of their teacher following the vote.

He is the only non-tenured teacher out of Vo-Tech's 18 non-tenured teachers who will not be rehired.

Parents complained that the school committee voted on something affecting their children without listening to them and without explaining their reasoning.

Parents were told their written input to the committee concerning teachers is welcome.

around town

☐ Ran into Steve Dunn last week, he looks super! Steve now lives in Hull with his family. Steve's younger brother Kevin also lives there, and they are now partners in business. Their business is construction, both inside and outside as well as landscape and energy. They call their efforts Dunn Design...Steve also reported that his Mom and Dad, Helen and Bob, were coming to the area for Easter. They are New Jersey residents now. Bet they loved looking at the sea from Steve's huge waterfront windows.

☐ Also spotted several people "sprucing up" their lawns after the dreadful weather we've been having, among them Tom Reardon. Tom had the perfect answer when asked if he thought that the work would ever be done. "After being thoroughly raked, prepared and seeded, if it doesn't work, we're going to put pavement down!"

☐ Bruce Cameron and crew got a real jump on the Holiday by going out for a jog bright and early Easter morning. That's dedication for you!

☐ Have heard a lot of whispers about the Music Circus schedule that is soon to be released. Tons of stars are going to hit the spotlight this summer...Joan Rivers, Anne Murray, Air Supply, Perry Como, Bill Cosby, to name but a few. Always sounds so good to hear people talking Music Circus, means that summer is right around the corner.

☐ Had a long chat with Mary (Shyne) Massimino last week. She looks exactly the same, wonderful. Mary, a 1963 CHS grad, lives in Hanover now, and told me that her husband, Tony, is running for selectman this year. She read all about our elections, and couldn't believe the tie...Mary has two daughters, one a freshman at B.C., the other an eighth grader in Hanover.

☐ Speaking of elections, who isn't? Sure is a topic that all are discussing at length, everyone's awaiting a verdict.

☐ Glad to see that Cohasset received a grant of $904 from the Arts Lottery Council, which is given to help support arts and humanities projects in our town and is offered to all arts and artists to avail themselves of.

☐ And, glad to see that Peter and Patty Abbot were in Better Homes and Gardens special edition of Garden Ideas and Outdoor Living, after their feature story in the monthly version of Better Homes last year. Their ideas have to be outstanding to make the famous magazine twice...

☐ Happy birthday Craig Mulcahy.

☐ Next weekend marks the annual event in Cohasset that everyone looks forward to, the Senior Class play. This year they are presenting "Guys and Dolls", and will hold performances on May 3, 4, and 5. It's always such fun to watch the kids dance and sing, which Joanne Fichtner always manages to get them to do with unbelievable success. Be sure to see a member of the senior class, and order your ticket.

☐ People are calling Fort Lauderdale the "Cohasset Extension," so many students went there for the Spring vacation!

☐ High School sports are off-and-running this week, weather provided of course. Be sure to catch an event or two, there is something going almost everyday. Support our teams and watch for excellent results.

☐ Lots of people have been tuning in to "Wheel of Fortune" so that they can play along with Pat Litchfield when she appears on the show. Date and time to be announced...

☐ It sure seems nice to go to Cushing Plaza and find it hard to park...the plaza is really a nice place to shop, with all the stores available, and more to come.

☐ Another harbinger of spring appeared in Cohasset...J.J.'s opened recently.

Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn alias Allen Pooler and Dick Drake paint a fence on North Main Street. (Rose Cundari photo)

☐ Michael T. Keegan, a junior at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is currently working as a student intern at Economic Research Associates of Boston. Keegan is the son of John and Mary Keegan of Greenfield Lane, Scituate.

Keegan is working on a project dealing with real estate, commercial, recreation, transportation and economic development for the Boston consulting firm.

An economics major at UMass Amherst, Keegan graduated from Scituate High School in 1981.

☐ Mr. Ripley had a comment worthy of repeating recently...when told by someone how great he looked, he told them that it was "thanks to his new sparkplug". No matter what, Bill Ripley always has a sense of humor!

☐ Let me know what is news in your family. After vacation week there should be tons of it.

☐ Maureen Buckley, daughter of John and Cleida Buckley of 26 Old Coach Rd., and a freshman at Maine's Bates College appeared recently in a theater production at the liberal arts school.

Buckley had a major role in "The Wake of Jamey Foster," a play by Pulitzer Prize-winner Beth Henley.

A dean's list student at Bates, Buckley is a 1983 graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐ Blythe Berents has a leading role in the annual Thayer Academy musical, "Godspell." The play will be presented Fri., May 4 and Sat., May 5 at 8 p.m. in Frothingham Hall.

Admissions for patrons is $5; adults, $1.50; and students, $1.

☐ A certificate of Appreciation from Old Mills District was awarded to both Pat Baird and Sally Avery, Saturday, April 14, at the District Dinner.

Both Sally and Pat have been den leaders three years for Pack 38.

Congratulations to you both.

☐ Celia Mullen is a finalist in the Piano Competition sponsored by the South Shore Conservatory of Music. The twelve finalists will compete for awards, Sunday, May 6. Celia's teacher is Husno Onaran. The public is welcome to hear the musicians at 3 p.m. in Cox Hall, off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham.

Here's a challenge

Some people despise the expression "townie." You know, those people native to a small community.

I think I hate that expression, too.

But truth is, every time I speak with these folk about town government - be it schools, the fire department, or elections - you see something in their eyes.

It's like a lantern beckoning through their thoughts. Their eyes burn with a silent devotion to this town. They unabashedly adore Cohasset.

Now, I'm no native, not even a resident. But I believe I am beginning to understand that essence within. People who are willing to battle every issue they feel is wrong for their town.

One of my favorite expressions might be an appropriate slogan for this town. After hours of listening to debates, arguments and tireless monologue during a recent meeting, selectman John DeBassio succintly surmised, "nothing ever comes easy to Cohasset."

Be it sewers, roaming canines, a new ambulance, a shopping plaza proposal, or beach sticker rules, this town provides a unique forum for its many citizens who demand an opinion. And everyone in Cohasset has an opinion. Sometimes, everyone in Cohasset has a different opinion.

But that insatiable interest and insistent involvement separates Cohasset from other Mariner towns. While other editors scurry through the week, praying that God will deliver unto them some news, a Cohasset editor need only sit for a spell and one issue after another will miraculously appear.

Certainly it is never that easy - even in Cohasset. But what I'm attempting to say is that this community is unique and constantly striving for better. I'm happy to part of that as the new Cohasset Community Editor.

I truly want to make this the best weekly newspaper for Cohasset residents. You deserve my most earnest efforts, and that I will promise.

Let me know what you think of the Mariner each week. I can take criticism (not well), and I need to know what you want from your community newspaper.

Publisher David Cutler has taken the first step in establishing full-time coverage for Cohasset. You deserve and demand the best, right? Now it's up to you and me to show him we can create the best written, most creative, most newsworthy weekly publication.

That's quite a challenge. But I'm ready for it. How about you?

—Jane Lane

Coping with cable competition

By Claire McDonough

Dear Ann Landers:

I have a rival for my husband's affection, and I need your help.

No, it isn't another woman. Somehow, Ann, I think I could cope with that.

No, Ann, my problem is that my husband is in love with cable television.

There was a time when our house rang with scintilating conversation — at least when "Charlie's Angels" weren't cavorting across the 23-inch screen.

We used to talk to each other, Ann. We discussed our kids, our grandkids, and our plans for the future.

No more. You see, Ann, there's this local channel on cable, and it has my husband fascinated. He says it's opened up a whole new world.

He can see photographs of the Blizzard of '78.

He can take in the entire health education program.

He can watch school committee meetings and conservation commission hearings in living color, and if someone says something he doesn't like, he can yell at them and no one gets mad at him.

It's not just the local channel, either. There's also a news channel that broadcasts a program call "Crossfire." Every night there's a liberal host, a conservative host, and a guest, and things get pretty heavy. My husband sits in front of the television and hurls insults and expletives that would attract the attention of the C.I.A., the F.B.I. and the Moral Majority if anyone outside our immediate family could hear him.

When the program is over, he gets up, stretches, grins, and says:

"That was a wonderful catharsis. I feel much better now."

Ann, he used to feel better after he talked to me. How can I cope with this rival for his affection?

Puzzled

Dear Puzzled:

Wake up and smell the coffee. Your husband is looking for an outlet for his emotions, and you're being an insensitive clod.

If you show up on cable television dressed like an important figure in the town's history, you will definitely get your husband's attention.

Just one word of warning. Don't go on "Crossfire." Nobody hears what your husband says in his own house, but everyone will know what you say on television. It'd be a shame if he had to go on the second honeymoon without you.

Purchase those photos !

You like our photos? If you'd like to have one of our prints for your very own, they're available right in town. Just go down to that beehive of activity - the Cohasset Community Center. Photos from the previous week's Mariner will be at the center each Monday morning. Proceeds from the sale of the prints will go toward the many activities of the community center.

Letters

Objections to Connell's letter

To the Editor:

I was somewhat startled to read former state Representative William Connell's letter in the April edition of the Mariner.

It would appear that Mr. Connell has two objections to Bill Golden's announcement that he will seek the Senate seat presently held by Allan R. McKinnon, and for the life of me, I don't understand either one.

Mr. Connell's first objection is that Bill is an "outsider." Forget for the moment that the term reeks of snobbery, and ask yourself how Mr. Connell defines "outsider." Bill's roots in the South Shore are deep. He was born and raised in Cohasset, our neighbor to the north, and spent much of his boyhood sailing off Scituate.

He has many life-long friends in this town who recognize his concern for good government, the environment and the myriad problems that plague people who choose to live south of Boston.

As a matter of fact, when Bill ran for Governor's Council against the late Patrick "Sonny" McDonough, he won handily in Scituate, the Councillor's own summer backyard.

Mr. Connell's second concern is that Senator McKinnon "recruited, selected, annointed and endorsed" Bill Golden — a fancy way, I guess, of saying that the senator supports Golden's candidacy.

Now wouldn't it be a sad, sad thing if a man could represent a district for 14 years, working on its problems, filing its legislation, meeting, knowing and caring about its citizens, and then walk away without giving a darn about who would replace him?

Wouldn't you think a man of Allan McKinnon's calibre would hope that someone who could serve in the tradition he himself had established and followed for over a decade would seek the office? And if he saw someone who did, wouldn't you think he'd tell us about it?

Despite Mr. Connell's fixation on who lives where and for what duration, I myself long for an issue oriented campaign. I am impressed by Bill Golden's concern for the environment, and I admire his gumption. Not only did he take on the Big Daddy of all Boston Politicians when he challenged an entrenched Governor's Councillor, he also squared off against the M.D.C., taking that agency to court because it was polluting Boston Harbor and the South Shore waters. (By the way, this remarkable young man convinced Judge Garrity that a timetable should be set for cleaning those same waters, and the M.D.C. was forced to comply.)

Bill Golden has demonstrated a real concern for the Norfolk/Plymouth District and its residents. If Mr. Connell or other candidates have similar concerns, I would be interested in hearing them.

With federal funding cuts, unemployment, the Expressway reconstruction, a declining quality of education and, indeed, a threat to the South Shore's quality of life looming on the horizon, I suggest that we ask any candidates for state Senate exactly where their priorities lie. The house tour can wait until we've cleaned our house.

Bill Golden is no outsider

To the Editor:

I read Mr. Connell's letter in last week's Mariner and I was moved to write and inform him that Bill Golden has spent most of his life in the Norfolk-Plymouth District.

The Goldens first came to Cohasset in the 1930's when Albert and Edith Golden, Bills' grandparents, restored and operated the Black Rock Hotel. In her declining years Mrs. Golden had great pride and joy in her grandson.

Bills' mother and father were also very active members of the community, and engendered civic responsibility into their son. Bill himself was born and brought up in Cohasset. I remember he had a paper route, was an active member of the Audobon society, and was a credit to his family and his school.

Bill and I have been very good friends ever since he was my pupil in the fourth grade at the Deer Hill School. I have been very proud of all his accomplishments, including his successful suit to force the MDC to clean up Boston Harbor.

While I respect Mr. Connell's right to voice his opinions, I feel obliged to correct his impressions of Bill Golden, who is no outsider to the South Shore and who will be an outstanding State Senator from this area.

Pratt temporarily leaves board

(This is a letter written to The Board of Selectmen, —Ed.)

Mrs. McArthur and Gentlemen:

This is to inform you of my intention of disqualifying myself from participation in the forthcoming recount proceedings.

My personal friendship with Mary Jane McArthur and the social relationship between our two families is well known as is my unequivocal support of her political goals.

The thrust of the recount must be to guard the rights of all contestants and to determine the intent of the voters. I have no doubt of my ability to carry out this public duty in a fair and impartial manner. However, my involvement with one of the candidates, coupled with an untruthful statement in the press concerning my role

Spring brings an astonishing display of bloom

By Mary-Jean Miner

Commentary

It's hard to remember exactly when I changed my mind about flowers. When I was growing up, in Maine, the arrival of spring always brought an astonishing display of bloom.

Perhaps their arrival was especially satisfying because there was such a long wait, in Maine, for the snow cover to melt and the mud season to be over.

There was one very special spring, when we had just bought a house and hadn't yet moved in and the established gardens were overflowing with tulips and daffodils and jonquils.

I was allowed to pick an armload to take to my teacher — I would be in a different school the next fall, and Miss McLean would be all the way across town. I rode my bike there for the last few weeks of school and can still remember the wicker basket full of color.

When school let out, I could pick bluets — the sweet little Quaker ladies — and violets, to put in Mother's tiny china toothpick holder, which was just the right size. Lilacs filled the stately vases and the scent was the promise of summer.

Then I often spent weeks visiting my aunt, and the gardens there were not formal. She knew where the forget-me-nots would be and the bird bath stood in a bed of nasturtiums, so it was easy to place a leaf under the water to see the silver.

One day, she showed me where the pulpits grew, behind the spirea bush, accompanied by Solomon's seal and other woodland companions. These we did not pick — they stayed in their sheltered place in fern and moss, mysterious and cool and green.

And although Auntie always had a fresh pink rose in a slim vase behind her mother's picture, I began to prefer the flowers where they grew. I studied them, lying on my stomach in the grass, I would peer into the violets to see their details.

Soon I learned the places where the Dutchman's breeches grew in the ditches and the masses of yellow violets in the wet places by the riverbank. I went there each year, mostly to be sure they came back.

When I bought my first house, in Massachusetts, I once rescued the pink lady's slippers from the backhoes just before the new development was built in the woods across the street. For the years that we lived there, I had my own woodland places to show the children — beautiful wild orchids, protected by law and the law only slightly bent to allow their rescue.

I think it was then I began to teach my children the special beauty of flowers blooming where they are. "Take me to the place where they grow, and we can enjoy them there, together."

Even my own gardens, once grown to provide plants for cutting, seem to be evolving into groupings designed to please the passerby or the gardener arriving home again, turning into the driveway lined with nodding daisies and daylilies.

Spring is still special, and for much the same reasons. But now it means travelling to Cohasset by way of North Scituate, so I can again be overwhelmed at that entire yard full of daffs. There are several places on the back road to Pembroke where the Quaker ladies are spread across lawns that don't get mowed until the flowers go by. My own lawn is full of violets, both white and blue, and that's the part we don't mow until later. The first spring I lived here had that special anticipation. What flowers were already here to welcome me, officially, to Scituate? Each year I add to the greeters, but haven't ever disturbed the crocus by the back door or the scilla by the wall.

And yes, I still have flowers in vases, and often bring the Queen Anne's lace and tansy home from the marsh to add to my lilies for the altar at church. But they just don't have the special joy that I feel as I look for an excuse to go to Pembroke, slowing down for the Quaker ladies. Maybe it's the anticipation — are they out yet? — or the vastness of the display, which can't be matched on a dining room table. But I think it's caring enough to allow the full season to go by without interruption. It's never quite long enough. But it does continue in the nicest ways. My little grandson, now quite two, has seen his own spring arriving. "See that? That's for-sy-thi-a!"

Murray's memos

REPORT FROM THE STATE HOUSE

By Mary Jeanette Murray

There is no need for MassBank.

The unveiling of Governor Dukakis' $300 million infrastructure proposal is another indication that the current government is not doing its job and needs help. But instead of fixing its current ills, the Governor insists on adding a new agency, and as a result, a new layer of bureaucracy.

We have the mechanism in place now to deal with the Commonwealth's infrastructure. We do not need another agency.

WHAT WILL IT MEAN

New Jersey tried an approach similar to MassBank in January 1983, and it was defeated in its Legislature. Why are we pursuing a project that can only expand government and take more tax money out of our pockets?

While businesses will be taxed to set up MassBank, the cost is going to be passed onto every citizen in Massachusetts.

These are the new taxes that Governor Dukakis is proposing to fund MassBank. These are an increase in corporate income tax; increase in savings bank deposit tax; increase in commercial bank net income tax; increase in utility income tax; increase in insurance premium tax; and an increase in insurance company gross investment tax.

The expected revenue from these increases will amount to $45.1 million in Fiscal Year 1985, $95.8 million in Fiscal Year 1986 and $101.5 million Fiscal Year 1987. More importantly, it's going to affect us.

For instance, Boston Edison estimates the new taxes will cost an additional $500,000 a year of which 90 percent would be passed on directly to its customers.

The Dukakis Administration is sticking it to us again with its philosophy of spend, spend and look for more to spend. The Governor submitted a bloated budget for all of his pet projects and now he's got the nerve to ask for more taxes to fund a new agency which is not even remotely needed.

Yes, we need to deal with the Commonwealth's roads, bridges and other infrastructure problems. But certainly not in this manner.

No Johnny-come-lately

To the editor:

As one who has known the family of William Golden for many years I reacted with dismay to Mr. William Connell, Jr.'s recent letter (April 19) suggesting that Bill Golden is a Johnny-come-lately to the Norfolk-Plymouth State Senatorial District. Apparently Mr. Connell is seriously mistaken about Bill's background and ties in this district.

Firstly, Bill Golden grew up in Cohasset. As a typical South Shore child, he participated in boating activities in Hingham Harbor and held a membership in the Audubon Society. For 35 years Bill's father has practiced law in Hingham, and his mother's family has been in Marshfield for 13 generations. Bill and his wife, Paula, lived in Marshfield in the early years of their marriage; their two children's first memories are of life in Marshfield.

Not only has Bill spent virtually all his life in this district, he has spent a great share of his time and considerable talent demonstrably caring for this region and those things we consider important: people, the natural environment, and the provision for a future which improves on the past. For two years those concerns led Bill to Washington, D.C. where he was a member of the President's Advisory Council Task Force which drafted the legislation creating the Environmental Protection Agency.

More recently he has shown a regional awareness in two major endeavors. In 1978 he ran against Patrick J. "Sonny" McDonough to defy the late McDonough's no-show style of representation for the South Shore. At that time, Bill took all the South Shore towns except Hull (which he narrowly lost by 10 votes.) Secondly, it was Bill Golden in his role as City Solicitor of Quincy who initiated and carried the action against the MDC to ensure the clean-up of Boston Harbor and our own coastal waters.

Transportation is an issue for many of us, and Bill has long been an advocate of regional transportation planning, supporting the commuter boats as one remedy.

I can only guess that Mr. Connell has not informed himself of Mr. Golden's qualifications to run for the State Senatorial seat. Otherwise his letter can be taken as a suggestion that one must have been a life-long resident of Weymouth, never having ventured beyond, in order to serve this district.

I hope that this non-issue will be set to rest and that we will be offered an opportunity to consider each candidate's record of action, capability, and expressed interests in the role of State Senator for the entire district, including Hingham, Marshfield, Cohasset, Hull, Duxbury, Scituate and Weymouth.

in the election process, may have altered the public perception of this sensitive issue.

There can be no hint of conflict, either real or perceived, in this proceeding. Therefore in the best interests of all concerned, and after consultation with counsel, it is my decision to step aside.

The law provides for the Board of Selectmen, in cases of this kind, to appoint a temporary Registrar.

Advice to Golden

To the Editor:

If Doris Golden truly has the best interest of the town at heart, she would not be considering taking the town to court. This would be expensive for the town, and the ensuing delay would not lead to efficient government. What she should do, if defeated, is to accept the outcome graciously and in a sportsmanlike manner, and then run for office next year.

Court update

Christopher Knight, 20, of 471 Beechwood Street, was charged April 5 in Quincy District Court with operating to endanger. He admitted to sufficient facts and the case was continued without a finding for six months. Knight was charged $100 in court costs. A second charge of leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage was dismissed. The charges stem from a motorcycle accident, Dec. 21, 1983 on Beechwood Street.

A charge of larceny of a drug was reduced to larceny, against Michael Speer, 38, of 29 Marrion Road, Green Harbor, April 11 in Quincy District Court. Speer was found guilty, and sentenced to one year's probation, with an order to attend a drug evaluation program. He was also ordered to pay $72.79 in restitution. The charge was issued after a Nov. 17, 1983 incident at Medi Mart in Cohasset. Speer appealed the verdict to a six-man jury at Dedham District Court.

"Let's go a-Maying" was the cry that went up in Merry Olde England after the long winter, but frowned on by the staid Puritans of our South Shore. According to local historians, when a group in Quincy, probably giddy at the first sight of a robin or Mayflower, danced around a crude Maypole to the tune of music, howling and laughter, a certain Governor John Endicott cut down the Maypole with his sword. Sitting here writing this column with rains from yet another storm pelting the windows, I just hope that we'll have something to celebrate on our May Day next week. How about a glass of May Wine if the sun comes out and the jonquils come up, together with these

Bacon slices (about 12) cut in halves

Business before pleasure though, so Ginny Whitmore has sent us this timely recipe as town meetings spring up along with lady slippers and forsythia. Have you seen your first robin yet? I have and what a welcome sight! But where are the sunny skies, jonquils and balmy winds, his traditional setting? We had hoped that school vacation week would be more spring-like, but couldn't help wondering when the sun finally shone; don't little girls jump rope and play jacks anymore? Where are the little boys and their marble bags playing for keepsies? Am I dating myself, or have they all vanished along with kite flying on a windy spring day? Perhaps when we're all able to be outdoors more, our appetites will be keener and we'll all ask for seconds of this dish from our good friend, Margaret Ward called

SICILIAN SUPPER

1 pound ground beef
1/2 c. chopped onion
1 can tomato paste, 6 oz.
3/4 c. water
1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. pepper
3/4 c. milk
1 pkg. cream cheese, cubed, 8 oz.
1/2 c. each grated Parmesan cheese and chopped green pepper
1/2 tsp. garlic salt
2 c. noodles, cooked, drained

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Brown meat; drain. Add onion; cook until tender. Add tomato paste, water and seasonings. Simmer 5 min. Heat milk and cream cheese over low heat, stirring until smooth. Stir in 1/4 c. Parmesan, green pepper, garlic salt and noodles. In 1½ qt. greased casserole, layer half of noodle mixture and meat sauce; repeat layers. Bake at 350 degrees, 20 min. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Serves six.

So why not give May baskets and maybe even dance around a Maypole? Let's do something, if only to watch a fern unfurl, or get out the grille for the season's first barbecue.

School Committee briefs

Langmaid honored

School Committee Vice-chairman Jack Langmaid was honored recently when he received an award from the Plymouth County Teachers' Association.

Langmaid was nominated by the Cohasset Teachers' Association as its representative. Selection of a school committee member for such a position is rare. Committee member Dick Conley said Langmaid was given the award "for his outstanding service to schools."

Out of the some 600 people there, very few of them were school committee members, Langmaid said. "They gave out many awards, both to teachers and to community people like myself," he said.

House Bill 5000

A future agenda item for School Committee discussion will be House Bill 5000, a proposed bill in the House of Representatives calling for an overhall in the state's school system.

Chairman Joe Nedrow said he will ask the Cohasset Teachers' Association for copies of an explanation of the bill they received. The Mass. Association of School Committees sent the committee a 10-page analysis.

Nedrow said he'd like the committee to read the information put out by the Mass. Teachers' Association as well "so we can get a balanced view. I think we ought to have the benefit of the other side."

Nedrow new chairman

The School Committee unanimously voted school committee member Joe Nedrow chairman Monday night. The committee also unanimously re-elected committeeman Jack Langmaid as vice-chairman and committee member Diana Kornet as secretary.

Former chairman Dick Conley moved that Nedrow be nominated chairman. After Kornet seconded the motion, Conley moved that the nominations be closed.

Conley similarly nominated Langmaid and Kornet for their respective positions. Kornet seconded the motion to appoint Langmaid vice-chairman, and committee member Martha Gjesteby seconded the nomination of Kornet.

In each case, Conley moved that nominations be closed immediately after his first motion was seconded.

Nedrow is entering his third year on the committee and his term expires in April of 1985.

Accepting his chairmanship Nedrow said, "I can't think of any public service more valuable . . . Dick, you're going to be a tough act to follow."

Bids sought for roofs

The School Committee took the first step Monday night in getting Deer Hill and Junior/Senior High School roofs repaired.

The committee voted to advertise for approved architectural firms to submit bids for the first phase of design for school roofs. No work can be done until July 1 because money will not be available for the project until then, Asst. Supt. Steve Hart said.

The architectural firm of Knight, Bagge and Anderson of Boston has done roofing work for the Cohasset schools in the past, but Town Councel recommended the town put the project out to bid, Hart said. "The prudent way to go is to advertise it," he said.

The committee also voted to involve a Building Committee in the school roof project. The superintendent, asst. superintendent, school committee chairman and a member of the town's School Facilities Committee will serve on the building committee.

School committee member Martha Gjesteby recommended a school facilities committee representative serve on the building committee for the school roofs project.

Baseball coach appointed

The School Committee appointed Joseph Bouchard varsity baseball coach Monday night. Bouchard is the former junior varsity baseball coach.

School sailing program

The School Committee discussed Monday night a sailing program for the Junior/Senior High School but made no commitments to such a program.

Committee members said they'd like to see sailing offered because sailing is a sport someone who is not a super-athlete can excell in. However, they said they would not consider sailing as a school sport until it had been a school club for a few years.

Committee members Diana Kornet and Dick Conley were appointed to an ad hoc committee to investigate sailing as a school organized activity.

They will explore student interest and the cost of such a program. Kornet and Conley will report back to the committee at a later date.

Conley signs payroll checks

School Committee member Dick Conley will continue to sign the payroll checks following approval of the school committee Monday night. Conley, who is the former committee chairman, has signed the checks for the last two years, he said.

He is an acting captain in the Cohasset Fire Dept. and is therefore available during the day to sign the checks, committee members said.

OVERVIEW (1974 - 1984)

The present EMS in Cohasset was formulated in the mid 1970's.

Prior to this time, EMS was provided by the Police Department. Under the Police Department system, a patrol car responded to the Police garage and picked-up the ambulance (A 1966 Pontiac Superior "Hearse Style") and responded to the scene.

Minimal Emergency Medical Training existed. Patients were loaded into the ambulance and driven to the hospital by a police officer. No attendant was provided to monitor the patient's condition.

Demand for a more qualified and professional service led to the introduction of the present service. A 1976 Ford, modulance, obtained through a joint purchase plan with the State, was put into service on January 1, 1977.

Initially, the system was set-up as a Fire/Police combination service. Logistical problems and questions of interdepartmental cooperation, areas of responsibility and availability of personnel plagued the system. As a result, the Fire Chief petitioned the 1977 annual town meeting and received four personnel to:

a. increase the firefighting force and its capabilities;

b. provide for complete manning of the ambulance service by one department. (This brought the table of organization of the Cohasset Fire Department to a total of 29. This included 1 chief, 4 officers, and 24 firefighters manning three pumpers, 1 ladder, 1 ambulance and dispatching functions out of three stations).

Presently, all services are provided out of one station. (The present table of organization is a total of 25. This includes one chief, 3 officers, and 1 acting officer and 20 firefighters manning 2 pumpers, 1 ladder, 1 ambulance and dispatching functions).

Fifteen (15) members of the current force are EMT-BASIC.

In 1982, the Board of Selectmen adopted the policy of hiring only Firefighter-EMT's with the stipulation that EMT certification be maintained. There are four personnel who have been hired under these requirements.

Also, in 1982, the Cohasset Permanent Firefighters bargaining unit sought (through contract negotiations) and received the position of EMT I/C. Appointment was made in the spring of 1983.

The big question—is it spring yet?

Psychic healing cures what ails the South Shore

By Patricia Desmond

I went to Omni's panel on Psychic Healing looking for some sort of supernatural expe.ience.

I wasn't sure whether I would find a sneak peak into the future, see an aura, or just learn about the ways of mind healing.

The panel happened Friday night at the New England Friends Home on Turkey Hill. Three representatives of the psychic healing forces appeared before a packed room.

There were some things the panel agreed upon.

"We are all healers. We all have psychic powers," each one said in a slightly different way.

The evening began with a tape recorded interview of Karmu, one of the panel of three, that was done for Channel 56.

Karmu cannot be summed up. His humor and energy do not translate into words for the printed page.

He is a force for positivity. A man who heals by the laying on of hands. An herbalist. An advocate of Bible readings. A man of generosity and hope.

Karmu invited people to visit him in his home at 526 Green St. to learn more about his methods and healing.

The first event of the evening was a healing done by Karmu on a man from Scituate who said he suffered from allergies. Karmu had asked for volunteers from the audience to sit before him and be healed.

It is too early to tell whether a cure was effected by the procedure.

And there was no one in the audience with the sort of condition that could be healed immediately. We were a relatively healthy lot.

As the audience watched with interest, the Scituate man sat on a chair pulled close to where Karmu sat. Karmu massaged the head, neck and back of the man with enough energy to crack a vertebra.

He instructed the man to drink a cup of vile-smelling stuff called the black medicine. The man did. And he hugged Karmu with firmness when Karmu told him to hold him.

Karmu said his healing depends on diet, exercise and herbs.

"Read the Bible," he said. Passages he favors are Psalms 1 to 8 and Matthew 18 to 29.

He promised his system can lead to success and physical health.

"You're the handsomest man in this room," Karmu said later to the man who was first to come forward for healing.

"I can see you getting younger as the night goes on."

Karmu didn't tell the man he was cured forever. But he said that if he would continue to take his herbal medicine, he would be cured.

Karmu claims to have healed 200,000 people over the course of 75 years. He doesn't look 75, but then, he talked about being 100.

He doesn't have documentation for all the healing. But he did hand out a booklet called "Karmu Healer, A Guide to Natural Healing," which contains tributes written by people who went to Karmu suffering from cancer, pneumonia, paralysis and other illnesses—people who report they were cured.

One woman offered her husband to Karmu for a healing. She said the man who walked to the front without saying anything has had bronchitis since childhood.

As Karmu rubbed the man's chest and back, I could see the skin turning pink from the pressure.

Karmu had the man with bronchitis inhale the same medicine the man with allergies had been told to swallow.

"Breathe deep," Karmu instructed.

"I can't breathe deep. I have bronchitis," the man said. But he tried.

"I'm America's best-kept secret," Karmu said.

He has given demonstrations at Massachusetts General Hospital and taught students from Harvard.

Some of what he says about disease puts the emphasis on healing on the mind.

"Cancer is a disease of people who are experiencing tragedy, frustration, pollution and not the proper food," Karmu said.

"My healing comes by my penetrating the energy centers.

"Life is eternal."

Of course, I was one of the people who got involved in the healing.

Karmu asked me what I wanted healed and I told him. He pressed hard into my head and back. He told me I had a healthy body. All the while I felt pings of electrical energy in parts of my body he hadn't touched. And I could see bright sparks of light in my mind.

When he finished I felt great. There was not the slightest semblance of tension left in my body.

I could feel warm blood surging through my neck and the back of my head. The feeling of surging blood lasted for a full 24 hours.

It was an interesting experience. Karmu advised me to pray and read the Bible.

He told the group he can effect a cure from a piece of metal that has been in the possession of the sick person for at least three days.

One of the women from Omni read from Karmu's booklet about cures and sharing. She said she knows his door is always open.

she described seemed to feel she was right.

Murphy belongs to the Spiritualist Church in Plymouth. She tried to help the members of the audience see auras. An aura is a light, invisible to most people, that shines around a person.

Some people in the audience thought they could see an aura using the directions Murphy gave. I didn't see the light.

Richard Lanza, an acupuncturist who does psychic readings, talked about his power which he said everyone has.

"Some people call this intuition and say intuition isn't to be trusted," Lanza said.

"Being a psychic is a matter of allowing that information to come through."

Rita Roberts, the director of Omni, explained the group wasn't there to discredit the AMA but to learn about other ways of healing.

Omni is the South Shore Center for Life and the Arts. Its orientation is toward holistic events and ideas.

Registration for its spring series of classes, offered at the New England Friends Home on Turkey Hill Lane in Hingham is underway, with classes beginning April 29.

The week before classes officially begin there will be free sample classes to encourage registration.

P&B survey says passengers satisfied

Commuters on the Plymouth and Brockton buses are generally satisfied with the service, according to the results of a survey distributed recently to passengers.

The survey was conducted by the P&B Bus Co.

The over-all "opinion of service" category revealed that over 61 percent of passengers rate the service in general as good.

From 56 percent to 71 percent of surveys returned said that service and equipment are "usually" on time, clean and well-maintained, and personnel courteous.

"We feel that the survey gave us very significant data, since over 40 percent of the questionnaires were returned," said George S. Anzuoni, president of the privately held company. "The high percentage of returns indicates a high degree of interest in us and our operations," he said, "and we have already implemented some of the suggestions in terms of scheduling."

New runs have been added to Plymouth/Kingston, Scituate, South Duxbury/Marshfield, Brockton and Pembroke Center/Hanover. Trips added are both earlier in the morning and later in the evening. Exact times have been announced in newspaper advertisements and with fliers distributed on the buses. The schedules are subject to change depending on expressway delays.

For exact information riders can call a local number in each town which is posted on the poles at all stops

Many replies to the survey indicated a general lack of awareness or understanding of how the carrier operates, its government-mandated procedures and other problems beyond the control of the company, according to Anzuoni. "We are taking steps to inform our passengers of reasons for various procedures," he added.

A talk with Congressional candidate Peter Flynn

By Judy Gilman

Sheriff Peter Flynn thinks El Salvador is a long way away. There are many more pressing problems within the 10th Congressional District, and that's why he is running against incumbent Congressman Gerry Studds (D-Cohasset) in the Democratic primary in September.

"I've thought about running for Congress in the past," he said last week during an interview in the Mariner office. "Everyone in political life does. Look who's running for Congress and for Senate. They come from the state Legislature. It's a higher plane to look to."

And Flynn, who talks with an animation about his job as sher ff of Plymouth County that speaks louder than words how much he enjoys it, has decided to look to that higher plane.

"I don't think the Congressman is paying attention to the problems back home," he said bluntly. "There's got to be more relevancy, a relating to the ordinary guy who's trying to pay his bills at the end of the month and get by. People are worried about unemployment, about the PCBs in New Bedford Harbor, about acid rain and what it's doing to our area and water supply."

And they're worried in the 10th District about how they're going to get to and from Boston. Flynn himself fell victim to the morning rush hour the day he announced his candidacy. Plans called for him to make his premier announcement on the 8 a.m. run of the Gracious Lady from Hingham to Boston. But traffic was heavy, and he missed the boat.

"A Congressman has staffing funds. If I were in the position, I would have hired a staffer to work with the constituents on the South Shore to work on a whole-area solution to the two-year mess. Some groups, like the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, have done a good job in looking at the problem. The Plymouth County Development Corporation is doing the same. But it's piecemeal, with no overall plan. That's where a Congressman can come in and do some good."

Before Flynn was elected sheriff of Plymouth County in 1980, he had served eight years in the state Legislature representing the 8th Plymouth District. He feels he made his most substantial mark as chairman of the Joint Committee on Public Safety, a natural link with his office as sheriff.

"When I ran for sheriff, it was one of those decisions you just have to make up your mind about. The opportunity was there, and the sheriff's position is a six-year term. I feel I've done the job well, made a lot of reforms, really done more in the last three years than was done in the previous 150. I don't think I've let anybody down."

Some of those changes included increasing the human services staff at the Plymouth County House of Correction, which Flynn oversees, from two to 23. Moving female prisoners from the facility to another and thereby freeing up another wing of the building to relieve overcrowding was another. "We're at about 130 percent of capacity, which isn't bad," Flynn said.

"I fully intended to stay there. But in political life, Congress is the next thing. When I was living in Bridgewater, I was in Margaret Heckler's district, and she was a strong representative. Then this came along."

"This," of course, refers to the revelation last summer that the incumbent Congressman had had a homosexual relationship with a Congressional page 10 years before. The House censured Studds and stripped him of his subcommittee chairmanship.

"I think he (Studds) kept backing away from the real question, the betrayal of trust, for six months. He kept talking about how he felt better being out of the closet, was a better person and would be a better representative. But I think, when it comes right down to it, that people have a certain value system. And his actions conflict with that system."

So Flynn thought about the possibilities of running, sounded the political waters, and commissioned a poll. "And I think it was all the worrying about making the decision," he said, that caused a strange feeling late at night, followed by three days of tests at Brockton Hospital. At the conclusion of those tests the 44-year-old Flynn was told by the doctors, "Get out of here, there's not a thing wrong with you."

Some of Flynn's prime worries and concerns?

The Coast Guard is one. "I think the Coast Guard should be the first responder to ships that need towing, not necessarily emergency resuces, just rescues. At the moment, commercial fishermen are forced to call a commercial tower who charges $2,500. The next week's fishing goes to pay that bill.

At the same time, Flynn, as a law enforcement officer, sympathizes deeply with the Coast Guard's job to curtail drug smuggling. "There was a major problem with drug-smuggling in Florida, and they poured millions into it to fight it. And they did curb it. That pushed the whole trade further north. A study by the state probation office shows the highest drug use in the Commonwealth outside of Boston and Brighton is the South Shore and the Cape. And it's because of all the drug-smuggling activity."

Flynn would like to see the Coast Guard taken out of the Department of Transportation and returned to the Department of Defense, where he thinks it belongs and

Home Delivered Meals provides service for homebound

By Jane Tamburri Spitz

The facts surrounding the Home Delivered Meals program (H.D.M.) are straight forward. A need was established by older citizens who wish to continue leading independent lives but are homebound, isolated and unable to prepare nutritionally adequate meals for themselves. Some of these people have been recently discharged from hospitals and will soon be back on their feet. Others are temporarily without the assistance of a homemaker. And there are the chronicaly ill, physically disabled or severely depressed who are afraid to leave their homes even to food shop.

H.D.M. has been implemented in communities throughout the country since 1972. It is a state and federally subsidized program under the Older Americans Act, which is up for renewal later this year. The purpose of the program is to provide a hot cooked meal, designed as the main meal of the day, to people 60 years-old and over who are in need of such a service.

Six years ago H.D.M. was established in 11 South Shore towns: Norwell, Hingham, Scituate, Cohasset, Hull, Weymouth, Holbrook, Quincy, Braintree, Milton and Randolph. South Shore Elder Services, a private, non-profit agency that was set up to funnel government funds to programs for the elderly, became H.D.M.'s overseer. Since its inception, the program has become more efficient, has expanded and continues to serve its clients well.

President Reagan is not known for his commitment to human services of this kind. In 1981, he froze federal funds allocated to H.D.M. and other programs for the elderly. However, since this is an election year he is expected to reauthorize the Older Americans Act legislation and therefore renew financial assistance to this project for another three years.

So, there are the bare facts regarding this program. But if we look a little deeper we find the truly significant element behind H.D.M. — the human element. Hundreds of volunteers not only make this program feasible on paper but they color it meaningful with time, effort and thoughfulness. These people are the most valuable resource H.D.M. has going for it.

"The volunteers are remarkable," says Gene Leonard, the agency's Nutrition Project Director, whose creative and skillful management keeps this and other related programs afloat. She capsulizes the relationships that develop between the volunteers and the people they serve by relating a recent telephone conversation. "I got a call the other day from one of our clients who receives meals at her home. She wanted to thank me for her beautiful Valentine. I had nothing to do with it. One of the volunteers gave Valentines to all the people on her route. That's the kind of commitment they make."

Nancy Marshall delivers meals one day a week to Norwell clients. She first drives to the Norwell Knoll Nursing Home where the food has been prepared by the kitchen staff and packaged by other volunteers. She puts the packages in her car and drives to the homes of 12 elderly people.

Marshall said, "I usually chat with them for a few minutes depending on their moods and whether they feel like talking or not. If they seem to be in a low mood, I try to pick them up. I may be the only person some of them will see all day. Many don't have any other callers." She said that the volunteers try to remember clients' birthdays and bring them small gifts. "I have made a lot of friends in the two years I've been volunteering. I find it very rewarding," she added.

Harry and Phoebe Mulligan are a retired couple who have been participating in the program for six years. They volunteer their services three days per week because they said they wanted to do something for people. "Sometimes the food is a little late or it arrives cold. But not too often," said Harry Mulligan. He and his wife bring Scituate clients their meals that are prepared at DAKA in Boston, the caterer responsible for 10 H.D.M. program towns. "It's very successful overall. The people like my wife and me and we've made a lot of friends," Mulligan said.

Anna Rulon, an H.D.M. volunteer for the past five years, also described the people to whom she delivers meals as her friends. "One person I bring meals to has no legs, another has only one leg. I like the idea of helping. It's very necessary," she said.

H.D.M. has no income guidelines. Less than half of its clients fall below the poverty level. Yet, their need for this support system is vital because they don't have access to any other program of this kind. All clients are urged to make a suggested donation of 75 cents for each meal they receive toward the total cost of that meal, which is $3.25. The money collected by the agency, which averages 68 cents per meal, is put back into the program to provide for additional meals. None of this money is used to offset administrative costs, says Leonard.

H.D.M. is not a service one can purchase and neither is the devotion of its volunteers. They consider the program not only worthwhile but essential and have therefore committed themselves to making it work.

Dramatic Club to perform 'Detective Story'

"Nobody made you a burglar. You wanted to be a burglar. So you're a burglar.—So be a good one. Be proud of your chosen profession!" The setting is New York City's hypothetical 21st Precinct Police Station, the speaker is a Detective named Dakis, and the object of his attention is a four-time-loser named Charlie.

They are two of the many and varied characters who will appear in the Cohasset Dramatic Club's forthcoming Town Hall presentation of playwright Sidney Kingsley's 1940's Police melodrama "Detective Story."

For this show, Cohasset's historic Town Hall stage will become a big city Police Station, complete with its quota of Law Officers and its share of assorted criminals and their victims.

Both sides of the Law will be represented by 30 Cohasset and South Shore residents, who themselves are, for the most part, perfectly average law-abiding citizens. Performance dates for "Detective Story" will be Friday and Saturday, May 11 and 12, and again on Friday and Saturday, May 18 and 19. Curtain time will be 8 p.m.

Playwright Kingsley, in preparing to write a realistic Police drama, says he "hung around" at some of New York City's precinct stations for an entire year to learn the environment and habitat of a big-city Police force. The result was "Detective Story," a slice-of-life melodrama characterized by the humor, tension, pathos and sudden violence.

The humor of "Detective Story" is Police humor,—that particualr release of tension of men whose lives are dominated by a sense of purpose.

Directing the Cohasset production of "Detective Story" is Wayne Miessner, and Production Manager is Betty Miessner. Tickets for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's spring show "Detective Story" will be available at the Town Hall box office at times of the presentation or in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.

Senior Citizens may attend at no charge, the final dress rehearsal, Tuesday, May 8 at 8 p.m.

Association for Retarded Citizens holds dinner

The South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens, Inc. (SSARC) celebrated its 33rd anniversary with the annual dinner dance held recently at the Lantana in Randolph.

Close to 500 participants joined SSARC in marking the culmination of over three decades of dedicated progressive growth in providing retarded citizens of all ages with a means towards a better way of life, proving that the retarded can be helped to help themselves.

The dinner dance, the association's one big social function of the year, opened with a cocktail hour, followed by a full-course roast beef dinner, with dancing to the music of Baron Hugo and his orchestra.

The invocation was given by Rev. James F. Darcy of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston. Father Darcy has been a long time SSARC advocate.

Dr. Thomas H. O'Connor of Braintree, past SSARC President, in his traditional role of Master of Ceremonies, welcomed the guests, active members of civic and business organizations, political friends and advocates joining in the celebration.

Graciously acknowledged were His Honor, Francis X. McCauley, Mayor of Quincy, Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, and Congressman Brian J. Donnelly.

A donation of $10,000 was presented to SSARC towards the purchase of a much needed passenger van. The presentation was made by Workshop Chairman, Renee Melsky of Milton, along with Alice Lutman of Hingham, Workshop Co-Chairman. Funds were raised by the members of the SSARC Workshop Parents & Friends, for many years diligently and actively involved in successful fund raising projects in support of the SSARC sheltered workshop program.

Arnold Rinkofsky of Milton, Special Events Chairman, in his role as Dance Committee Chairman, cited several groups individually as benefactors and supporters of SSARC, with a plaque awarded for appreciation.

Recipients of awards were: Rev. Charles A. O'Brien Council #4719, Knights of Columbus, No. Weymouth, with Grand Knight, Eugene Cavanaugh, accepting; St. Francis Xavier Council #5027, Knights of Columbus, So. Weymouth, with Grand Knight Richard Guerierro, accepting; Sons of Italy, Quincy Lodge #1295, President, John Tomasco, represented by John Marella; Quincy Police Betterment Association, President, David Doherty, represented by Detective, Bill Donnelly; Raytheon, Industrial Components Division of Quincy, accepted by Tony DeLollis, Product Line Manager; Boston Gas Co., accepted by Tom Nutley.

Rinkofsky, in turn, was paid tribute by Jack Hauck of Milton, SSARC President, for his dedication to SSARC and for extending his efforts as Dinner Dance Chairman for many years, stating that, "Arnold is the guy that puts it all together, every year." With that he presented Arnold with a plaque, on behalf of SSARC, as a well deserved reward for all his efforts and many years of service to the retarded. It was received with a special standing ovation and a round of music by the band.

Arnold extended thanks to his committee people, Maria Plante of Cohasset, SSARC Vice-President; and Board Member, Taffy Nothnagle of Cohasset, and to his wife, Bernice, for her consideration and patience. He noted that without Tom O'Connor's help something would be missing at the evening's function.

Before bringing the festivities to a close, Tom introducted Mr. Stony Midttun, Past SSARC President, and his wife Paula, SSARC advocate for many years, who had come in from New Jersey to attend the dinner dance.

The association, with its Executive Director, Rick Fentin, its offices, staff members, and sheltered workshop, is situated in Webb Memorial Park, 371 River St., No. Weymouth. It serves the residents of several South Shore Area Communities including Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate, and Weymouth. SSARC is a member of good standing and closely affiliated with the Mass. and National ARCs and is a member agency of the Mass Bay United Way.

A talk with Flynn . . .

where the service would have a better chance for increased funding for its increased responsibilities.

"The incumbent did a lot of work for the Coast Guard. but it was just to keep the budget from being cut, just to keep above water," Flynn said.

Flynn is also concerned about the federal deficit, now $180 billion. "The one place you can cut is the 30 percent of the budget that is defense," he said. On the popular subject of a nuclear freeze, he says he is most concerned about the development of outer space, with the threat of one superpower putting into orbit some sort of nuclear device. "That question must be answered."

But he doesn't believe in cutting social programs. "One thing the Reagan administration has cut is the so-called WICs program, funding for mothers, infants and children. So many of the people I see at the jail started out life with too little chance, with bad home situations, malnourishment and so forth. How can someone cut off aid to a mother who has children and can't work? We have to take care of them."

On other issues, he considers himself pro-life, for the death penalty and against gun control. "I know I'm not going to have people agree with me on everything," he said, "but I don't change positions just because some poll says a certain number of people feel a certain way."

He does believe, however, in getting out and meeting people. "I don't think the 'open town meeting' approach that the Congressman uses is particularly effective. How many people come to one of those, two or three dozen? I'd rather go to where the people are, to talk to them, make them feel comfortable. That's when you really get to hear what's on their minds."

Child of the universe, like the trees and stars, enjoy spring

By Lois Martin

Two nights in a row I've heard it and I finally got some of the words. The song is a soliloquy of sorts where the man says the words and the chorus sings them. Anyway, I like it because it's an affirmation that feels good.

". . . You are a child of the Universe . . . Like the trees and the stars you have a right to be here . . ."

Isn't that nice? Didn't you forget you were an important component of the character of this earth? We do, sometimes. We get swirling in a small circle of ourselves and the miniature portion of the planet in which we operate day to day. I wish I'd written those words of that song.

PATCHES

Since I didn't, I'd like to talk with the person who did, have a long lunch with him or her and hear how those words and the music came to mind and why.

Spring is a command performance. There is an inherent charge in its renewal that is intended to freshen the roots of our beings in preface to new blooms of our creation.

And they keep saying that unfortunately it's one of the times of year that impels people to suicide instead of to rebirth.

That's because some don't feel up to blooming. They've done the winter and considered that a victory, having forged through whatever forces stood in the way of their personal peace. That done, though, the burden of being remanded to burst forth is too much.

We've seen it already this spring, in the news. I watched a woman read a paper the other day and she winced. Her eyes had been unable to avoid the massacre in Brooklyn and the murders/suicide in Leominster. And when she reached the pigeon part, about the unnamed vandals who destroyed a Salem man's loved collection of homing pigeons, she couldn't take it anymore.

Strange how seasons affect us. We live here because of them. We don't sneer at those in more temperate zones, believing them as bland as the weather. But almost.

New Englanders demand vitality and unpredictability. Their wish is granted. But we, too, have residents who respond to spring like those in other regions. In fact, inveterate weather weirdos that we are, we respond with robust vigor with fall, nearly pounding themselves on the chest to challenge winter.

But spring inspires far more than it depletes. Remember a week ago? There was that day when the sun was out early and warm. And we all took off our jackets with temperatures in the high 50s to feel the warmth. A friend's asparagus plants came in the mail and she nearly swooned with anticipation of getting them in the ground. Another woman said if she didn't get in the yard soon and start digging and getting fresh blisters she was going to scream.

So if I add that information to my introspection on spring, I'd say if we've made it to here, we've done the hard part of spring.

It isn't that we don't love it or respond to it. It's just that it's the devil getting it here. There's the error in the calendar where some dodo marked March 21 as spring's beginning. And every year, though we should have learned by now, we take it at its word.

Directly after that day in whatever solstice they call it, we get two snow storms and then six weeks of rapacious rain with the dankest air that's created anywhere. By mid April we are thoroughly ticked in our annual disappointment and we start reading newspapers about crazies that kill others, themselves and a man's pigeons.

But, see, the good news is this. If you're reading this now, you've done the hard part. We had our Easter and we've done that one before in boots too.

And the lilacs are almost out. Forsythia won't have to be forced anymore. It'll bloom by itself and so will you. Just a matter of enough rain to make ready for the sun.

But I do think it's time to take a hand at correcting the calendar. From now on that period from March 21 through April is not Spring. It's Sprain. But it only lasts about six weeks. And it might be catchier next fall to say, "If winter comes, can Sprain be far behind?"

Just thought I'd mention it. "You are a child of the Universe. Like the trees and the stars you have a right to be here," especially when the real Spring stands up.

Musings

By John H. Cutler

☐ What I like about April: The weather starts to get warmer about the same time the tax collector takes the shirt off your back.

☐ Some notes about politics and politicians:

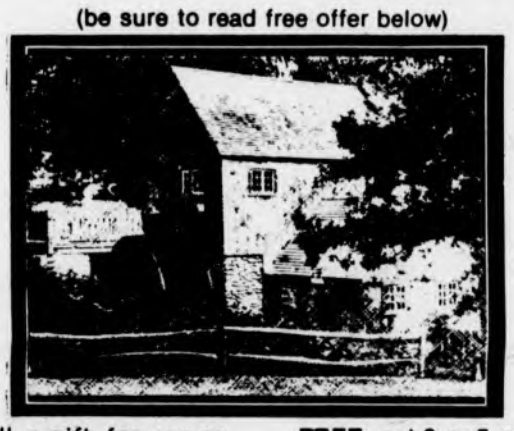
Capitalists and Communists are alike in that both want more than they have.

☐ Socialism is when the people work for the government. Democracy is when the government works for the people. Utopia is when the government really works.

☐ An honest politican is one who, when he is bought, will stay bought.

☐ A politician has to be able to see both sides of an issue so he can get around it.

☐ In my opinion, Jane Pauley is a television of loveliness.



☐ Pity poor movie queen Elizabeth Taylor. She doesn't know where her next husband is coming from.

☐ My inability to meet bills doesn't bother me half so much as meeting creditors.

☐ Clothes often fake the man.

Firstfest celebration at South Shore Art Center

Firstfest, the South Shore Art Center's 29th annual summer festival of the performing and visual arts, will come alive in an all new celebration.

A redesigning of the Center's summer celebration of the arts will culminate in a three-day festival beginning June 22, bringing to Cohasset "events of superb artistic expression both on the visual and the performing arts, according to Anita Franks, Firstfest co-chairperson.

Firstfest will come to life with a sparkling array of exhibits, performances, artistic demonstrations and children's events. There will be a champagne preview of the award winners from the juried art and photography exhibits, and a stroll through the sculpture garden, concluding Sunday, June 24 with a Japanese tea ceremony.

The bright green and white striped tents of festivals past will again house the juried exhibits and the members' show. But the tents are about all that is being carried over from past festivals. A new image is being created with Firstfest "reflecting an organization that continues to grow in sophistication and in excitement," according to Sheldon Ripley, president of the South Shore Art Center.

Firstfest events including a ballet performance, a jazz concert and an invitational craft exhibit are planned for the Cohasset Common and several satellite locations all of which lend a truly festive atmosphere for performers and festival goers. To ease traffic congestion on Cohasset's narrow streets, visitors will be provided transportation via an authentic trolley.

Working with Ms. Franks to set the stage for the Center's all new celebration of the arts is her co-chairperson Jan Daggett. Other chairpersons include champagne preview, Joan Appel; invitational sculpture, Barbara Gurnis and Walter Horak; juried show and jury selection, Becky Haletky; juried photography and juried selection, John Droege; invitational craft demonstrations, Chris Rifkin and Berj Kailian; members' show, Joan Cannon; invitational painting, Betty Kohlberg and Janet Tooker; children's activities, Karin Bartow, Karen Danstedt and Sue de Michele; Patriot Ledger children's art contest, Linda Summers; artists' demonstrations, Janet Blagdon; president's choice exhibit, Sheldon Ripley; ballet performance, Anita Franks and Chris Rifkin; tea ceremony, Barbara Bliss; and jazz concert, Anita Franks.

In charge of collecting receipts is Stan Nikkel. Other support chairpersons include Barbara Page, printing and design of program; Dudley Burke, tents and security; Susan Donahue, Ali Swedock and Liz Wyman, advertising, Robin Suhrbier, publicity; Marie Machlin, jurors' luncheon; Marion Bush, hostesses; Don Lettis and Ann McBride, hanging of works; Robert St. Pierre, panel set-up; Liz Wyman, signs; Claffy Williams, sponsors and patrons; Kay Calnan, artists' hour; and Jack Hennessey, breakdown.

A complete schedule of activities and performances during the weekend of the summer solstice will be available from the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, at 383-9548.

SS High and Quest address behavioral problems

(This is the fifth in a multi-story series on the South Shore Collaborative. Ed.)

By Theresa Sullivan

A group of some 10 students and three teachers sit in a circle with a student leading the discussion.

One boy raises his hand and when recognized asks for some 'feedback' from the group.

Each speaker, including the teachers, raises his hand and is recognized before speaking.

'You're a really good basketball player,' says one student.

'You're handling things better, but you still need to improve,' a teacher says.

'You're really a nice person; you care about people. I don't think you care about yourself,' says another teacher.

'Since you're here, you might as well do your best,' is another student's comment.

This is one part of a five- or ten-minute group meeting of South Shore High School students. The 25 South Shore High and the nine Quest students meet in similar group meetings twice a day.

South Shore High and the Quest program are designed for high school students with behavioral and emotional problems, Director Gary Urgonski said.

The accredited high school programs are part of the South Shore Collaborative. South Shore High and Quest are run by a 10-person staff in the former McCulloch School in North Weymouth and will be moving to the East School in Hingham in the fall.

There are no two students alike; so there is no way to say what a typical South Shore High or Quest student is like, Urgonski said. Most of the students in those programs come to the school because their problems tend to be reflected in their school work.

South Shore High began nine years ago. "It started because there was a need for a program for kids who were not going to high school or were not able to pass their classes," Urgonski said.

Although extremely hesitant to categorize the students, Urgonski said many of them lack motivation, have a poor self-concept and have difficulty in dealing with a teacher-student relationship when the teacher-student ratio is one to 35.

"We tell them it's a special school. The goal is to get them back to a regular school."

South Shore High and Quest work because the student-teacher ratio is low (four-to-one), he said.

The staff consists of Urgonski, who is the full-time director and a part-time teacher, a part-time adjustment councelor and a part-time expressive therapist, five teachers and two aides.

The expressive therapist "is person who does therapy with the kids by means of dance, video, art, group dynamics and psycho-drama (where students) act out parts to bring out their feelings. (This gives students) insight into how their behavior affects other people.

"Initially, the kids want to know what it's all about. (They are told) it's not an art class; we're going to explore our feelings," Urgonski said.

"Often times, issues outside of school affect them while they are in school. There's something particular about a student's makeup who needs a smaller structure." The reason for the students' problems is as varied as the students, he said.

"Half of them come from single-parent families," but that is not always the cause of the students' problems, he said. There may be trauma in the family, stress because of parent or peer relationships or alcohol abuse in the family which causes problems in a regular public school setting.

The two programs have a great deal of structure in the form of a level system. Students need structure and feedback on their behavior, Urgonski said.

There are 10 levels to the level system where a student has to meet specific requirements to climb the levels. As the levels rise, each has more privileges and responsibilities.

For example, at level 5 a student is eligible for paid work-study jobs. At level 8 a student gets 15 minutes extra for lunch.

"This motivates them." There is also a point system where students try to earn privileges. One such privilege is a 15 minute break part way through the school day where a student is free to play ping pong, computer games or just talk.

There is also a restriction room where students who don't earn the required number of points for a break are deprived those privileges.

can ask their peers and teachers for a level raise. Students and teachers vote and the majority rules except where a teacher vetos a vote if he feels a vote is unearned.

"It's not a popularity contest. More often than not, students will vote on what they feel is right. The school is not a democracy. (But) we try to run it as democratically as possible," Urgonski said.

(This look at South Shore High and Quest will be continued next week. Ed.)

Relocation stalls Town Hall ramp plans, again

Intentions have been the best, but it seems as if a handicapped acess ramp at Town Hall has been pushed back into another round of negotiations.

Construction of a 26-foot sloping ramp on the north side of Town Hall had been scheduled to meet the deadline of the town election. A reign of bad weather forced constant delays and about two weeks prior to the April election, selectmen requested the plans be postponed.

A temporary ramp had been built on the north side in time for the April 14 elections. Directly adjacent to it is the newly-constructed acess ramp at the Congregational Church.

Jim Lagrotteria, who has volunteered his time and energies to get the ramp completed, consented to selectmen's request. He was expected to talk with selectmen Wednesday night about the possibility of relocating the ramp to the south side of the building, near the parking lot.

It seems selectmen feel the ramp would be more easily accessible from the parking lot to the side entrance of Town Hall. The board members had previously discussed the future possibility of eliminating parking in front of the building.

Lagrotteria does not object to the new location, although he said he will have to have new engineering plans devised for the longer, higher ramp. If the ramp was located on the south side, it would be approximately 34 feet long, and the elevation would be twice as great.

A three-feet concrete wall would be visible from the front of the building, he said, which would be his only negative reaction to the relocation plans.

The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission must also review and approve the plans before final construction begins. Commission member Gordon Stevenson said no formal application had been made to the commission on either location, and the membership had taken no formal vote on the plans.

According to Stevenson, the commission was still awaiting application, and a definitive set of plans to be submitted by Lagrotteria.

Noting the commission membership often has seven opposing opinions from seven individuals, Stevenson said some members would like to see the ramp on the south side, and others were concerned about the necessary removal of cedar trees in that area.

Whatever the final decision, Lagrotteria said construction costs, most of which have been donated through free labor and cash pledges, will not change substantially.

This temporary ramp at Town Hall will be gone soon. Will it be relocated to the other side?

End in sight for town's long sewage struggle

By Jane Lane

Sewer Commission Chairman Charlie DeSantis is beginning to see the light at the end of a long tunnel.

With the alternative sewer project report and recommendations finalized, and a public hearing scheduled May 24, DeSantis is confident that Cohasset is on the right track. Voters will decide June 18 at the special town meeting whether to fund a portion of this alternative plan. If appropriations are approved, the green light is on for construction of a wastewater disposal system that has been a long time coming.

DeSantis is supremely confident that Cohasset will receive the necessary state and federal monies to design and construct the less expensive plan.

"I think our chances of receiving the grant money is extremely high. Afterall, Massachusetts approved the first phase of the Metcalf and Eddy plan for $3 million. Now we are asking for a town-wide plan for a total of $8.6 million that will cost the state $870,000. That's a lot less than $3 million," he said.

Last month, Ward Engineering Associates presented the town with a recommended alternative to central sewers. Basically, the proposed plan, endorsed fully by the sewer commission, calls for a connection to Hull's wastewater treatment plant, expansion of the sewer service area to specific "problem" neighborhoods, and the repair of about 300 failing on-site systems in town.

DeSantis claimed this alternative plan, far less expensive to the average Cohasset homeowner than the previous Metcalf and Eddy project, is also more comprehensive than its predecessor.

The total cost of the Ward-recommended plan would be $8.6 million. If we were to compare "apples to apples," according to DeSantis, this cost would be far less than two phases of the total Metcalf and Eddy project at $21,229,769 (using 1984 dollars - it was originally figured at $13.7 million).

In addition to the financial savings offered by the Ward recommended plan, DeSantis said this alternative will satisfy the state that Cohasset will no longer be in violation of its wastewater discharge permit. With the threat of a $2000 daily fine hanging over the town's head, this is no small accomplishment, he said.

"We are not only anticipating approval of this plan and its funding, but based on the attorney general's concern for immediate compliance with our discharge permit, and the need to begin expeditiously before the October 1 funding reduction deadline, we are convinced we will receive the necessary approval and funding, ' DeSantis added.

The important thing to remember, he said, is that Cohasset has been attempting in earnest to solve its sewage problems.

"We haven't created many more problems in the meantime, such as a bankrupt town. I am convinced that had we pursued the Metcalf and Eddy project, we may have met our discharge permit regulations, but we would have had many more municipal problems that other communities are currently experiencing," he said.

To begin the comparison of costs between the two plans, DeSantis noted that just the paperwork involved in the design of the Metcalf and Eddy plan is equal to the amount of money to be placed in the general fund for the design and construction of the entire Ward project -$511,194.

The total cost of tying into the underutilized Hull wastewater treatment plant and converting the Elm Street treatment plant to a pumping station, will cost the town about $512,000. This amount would be paid through a 20-year municipal bond. Thus, for an average homeowner, the cost the first year would be about $30 for the connection, and $12.57 by the end of the bond amoritization.

The homeowner who will be hooking up to the new sewer system will pay about $544, while on-site repairs will average $33 for each affected homeowner.

DeSantis said the Hull selectmen and sewer commissioners have indicated their approval of a tie-in to the treatment plant built there in 1980.

In the meantime, the Cohasset Sewer Advisory Committee will make a formal statement regarding the Building Inspector vacates post with regret

It is with an obvious sense of disappointment that Bob Dennis departs this week from his post as the town's Building Inspector.

Less than two years ago, he was filled with the hope that accompanies the prospect of a new job. Young, intelligent and ambitious, Dennis was optimistic about the task he was about to undertake.

But clouds of doubt began to form earlier this year as Dennis began to develop his department's budget. Not intending to wave a threat of resignation before his employees, Dennis did serve notice that certain conditions must be met.

Probably the foremost request made by Dennis this past year was for a pay increase. He was shooting for something in the mid-twenties range, and ended up with about $21,000. His argument for the raise was the constant increase in the amount of work, and complexity of the job.

Not simply a building inspector, Dennis assumed the assignment as the town's zoning and conservation enforcement officer, as as well as a liaison to the planning board. Noted throughout town as an inspector who spends little time at the desk, and many hours on the road, Dennis is proud of the job he performed.

"I think I was very active checking on what was happening throughout the town. I became very involved with other town departments in inspecting homes and businesses," he said last week. "But it was the legal things that got in my way. So many people here hire attorneys as soon as you say there's a zoning problem. It causes a lot of aggravation and headaches."

Dennis thought an increase from his $19,000 salary was justified this year. The surrounding South Shore towns all pay more than Cohasset, he argued, even though there was more construction here in the past year.

In fact, more building permits were issued last year (612) in Cohasset, than in any neighboring towns, including Hingham, Dennis said. About $25,000 in permit fees were brought into the town coffers in 1983, he added, more than any area community.

"There's a fair amount of new construction going on here. But there's a tremendous amount of remodeling being done. That's where the majority of our permits are from," he continued.

With all the responsibilities and time entailed in his job, Dennis received a pay raise, including an allotted step increase, of less than $2000. That's not much of a raise, he figured, to support his wife and child, with another baby on the way.

"We did a lot of thinking about this decision," he said. "We considered a lot of things. The number one thing had to be my salary, and it just isn't adequate.

Because, I really do enjoy working for the town, and I am pleased with the job I did. I wish things could have been different," Dennis added.

When the motor blew in his privately-owned truck, he took it to several mechanics who all agreed that it was the stop-and-go type traveling that caused the

Can Cohasset cope with its canines ?

The animal control situation in Cohasset is getting a bit messy.

Although complaints about stray dogs often fill hours of Selectmen's agendas, there are no definitive plans regarding where impounded canines will be housed.

After June 1, the Shishone Kennel in Marshfield will close. This is where Animal Control Officer Richard Yocum had brought Cohasset's stray dogs.

In January, kennel owners notified all towns using their facilities that they would no longer house dogs picked up by dog officers.

Shishone Kennel will continue to board privately-owned dogs. But the kennel had been impounding dogs from Hanover, Hull, Hingham, Norwell, Marshfield and Cohasset and it got to be too much to handle, owner Charlaine Scholz said.

Since being notified in January of Shisone's pending

Facility Stickers Rules

Selectmen will be reviewing a request tonight from the recreation commission to revise or exclude one section from the beach and dump sticker regulations.

In yet another go-round with the facility sticker rules, commission members last week said they favored a revision or elimination of the rules which prohibit stickers from being issued to cars registered out of state.

The recreation commission members reasoned that many Cohasset residents lease cars from their companies which are registered out of state. Or perhaps residents privately lease vehicles with out-of-state registrations. Under the present facility sticker regulations, these residents may not be issued a beach or dump sticker for that vehicle.

"We are concerned about the residents of Cohasset who have legitmate reasons for registering cars outside Massachusetts," director Jack Worley said.

One option may be to issue 30-day temporary stickers, although some commission members thought it would necessitate needless paperwork.

Low Income Housing Sought

A list of all surplus town-owned land suitable for construction of low income housing may be quite short, according to Executive Secretary Mark Lanza.

The Housing Authority requested selectmen list all surplus Cohasset-owned property that might be sold to them for development of low income family housing.

"The problem is, Cohasset doesn't have any surplus town-owned land suitable for building low or middle income housing," Lanza replied. The selectmen's executive secretary said it is now up to the Housing Authority to pursue all alternatives to develop the state-mandated housing.

Selectmen will facilitate that process in any way possible, Lanza added, but it is the Housing Authority's responsibility to develop all alternatives.

Selectmen previously refused to approve a request by the authority to buy or lease a section of Government Island for conversion into two units of low income housing. Last week, Housing Authority members suggested that property along Route 3A near the former Cohasset Motors land, might be appropriate for scattered housing sites.

Selectmen Meeting Change

Because of the scheduling of the election recount, selectmen will be meeting at 7:30 tonight at town hall. Among the many agenda items listed for discussion is the organization of the board, unless a tie vote is determined by the Wednesday night recount. In that event, a run-off election will have to be scheduled by selectmen.

Several town meeting changes will be discussed, including a suggestion to lower the quorum requirement, and changing the date of the 1985 annual town meeting.

Two warrants articles submitted by the sewer commission, pertaining to the Ward Engineering report recommendations, will be reviewed. Results of the police sergeant exam is scheduled tonight, along with the planned designation of a deputy building inspector and a discussion of a downtown improvement plan.

Expressway report

State DPW Commissioner Robert Tierney recently said the southbound entrance ramp from the rotary at Furnace Brook Parkway will be closed May 1, for nearly three (3) months.

Tierney also noted work was begun to repair damaged storm drains in the northbound local lanes Sunday, April 29, commencing at 5:30 a.m.

Democratic officers elected

Elected for a two-year term as officers of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee were: Chairman, Donna J. McGee, 27 Hill Street; Vice-Chairman, John K. McNabb, Jr., 53 Pond Street; Secretary, Edwin Tebbetts, 9 Jerusalem Road Drive; and Treasurer, Alice Daunt, 12 Todd Road.

Also elected at the April 13 organizational meeting were four Representatives to a Senate District Caucus April 15 to elect one male and one female member of the Democratic State Committee from the Norfolk-Plymouth District.

Elected as Representatives were Charlotte Leland, 9 Margin Court; Karen Corcoran, 4 Stevens Lane; Fred Koed, 92 Pleasant Street; and Ronald H. Goodwin, 134 South Main Sreeet.

At the Senate District Caucus, held in Hingham, Peg McKenzie of Weymouth and Phil Johnston of Marshfield were elected to the Democratic State Committee.

No opposition for Murray

Mary Jeanette Murray will have no opposition in her re-election campaign for state representative.

The deadline for filing nomination papers was Tuesday at 5 p.m., and no papers were submitted. That means Rep. Murray will seek her fifth term as representative from the Third Plymouth District without opposition.

The Cohasset resident said Wednesday, "I'd like to think my constituents, in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull are very knowledgable and are aware of the many projects and funds I have worked to obtain for our district."

The long-time political activist said this campaign will be her first without an opponent. "I'm surprised," she said, "and pleased that my constituents are happy with my work."

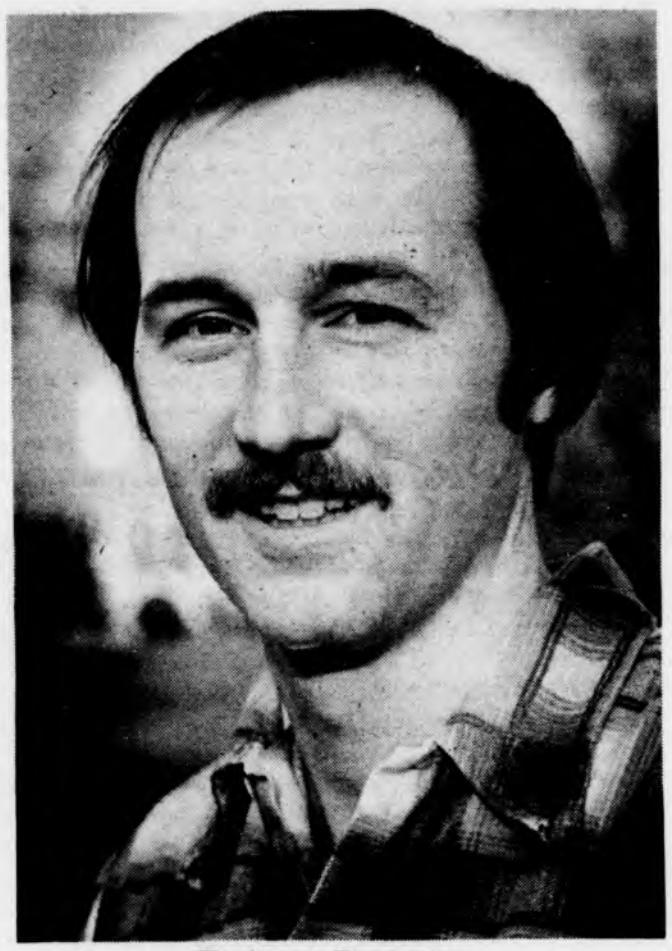
malfunction. Dennis realized this was part of his job as inspector, but proposed some alternatives to his having to purchase a new vehicle.

He figured that any vehicle he bought would soon wear out because of the constant start and go, so he wondered if the town could purchase a used truck or car for his use. He proposed that selectmen either lease a used vehicle, or obtain a used police cruiser for his official duties. Several possibilities were brought to the board's attention for review.

But selectmen opted for an increase in the mileage allotment, raising it to about 20 cents per mile. But Dennis explained that was not enough. Although he drives only a few miles, he makes about 30 stops a day. That type of driving quickly destroys a motor, a starter or the battery, he explained.

"Nothing was resolved satisfactorily regarding that issue," Dennis said.

A graduate of Fitchburg State College, Dennis admitted, "I knew it was going to be busy in this office. And I probably made it more busy than I could have. But I wanted to keep a handle on things. If I couldn't do the job to the best of my ability, then I would rather not have done the job at all."



"I really wish things could have been different," he added. "I hope the town will look at things now, change some things, and get someone in here for a long stretch of time. It's really important for the contractors in town to get to know the building inspector, and for the residents to know what's expected of them."

The inspector said he also requested fulltime secretarial help in his busy Town Hall office. That commodity is scarce among all town departments, but Dennis reasoned that his 40-hour job was greatly expanded because of his lack of office help.

He now has parttime help with a secretary who splits her responsibilities among other departments.

"I don't want to sound like everything is wrong with this department, because that's not correct. But I am saying that if certain needs are not recognized, Cohasset can expect to be looking for a new building inspector every couple of years," Dennis said.

In the meantime, construction is booming in Cohasset, and a watchful eye should be cast upon new developments, he said. New condominium developments, business expansion along Route 3A, and house starts throughout the town will be on the new inspector's immediate agenda.

Robert Dennis

An instructor of architectural drawing in the Westwood public schools prior to his Cohasset assignment, Dennis intends to restart his privately-operated contracting business here.

"We've made a lot of necessary changes in the past two years regarding building codes and permits, and zoning requirements," he said. "There's a lot of responsibility as the town's building inspector, but the headaches just got to be too much."

North Cohasset fire station

By David H. Wadsworth, Curator

The future of the old North Cohasset Fire Station at West Corner has been a matter of discussion for several years. But perhaps not many residents know the historical origins of the old building which served for many years in the dual role of satellite Fire Station, and as the U.S. Post Office for North Cohasset.

During the latter 19th centry, as homes and large estates grew more numerous along Jerusalem Road and in the areas near Cohasset's westernmost village, residents requested additional municipal fire-fighting capability for that section of the community.

A look at Cohasset's records shows that June 21, 1902 at a Town Meeting, voters instructed the Board of Selectmen to "purhcase a Hose Carriage House at North Cohasset", the cost not to exceed $700. Later, the voters added more money to that sum. At Town Meeting of May 25, 1903, the Selectmen were authorized to provide a suitable building and purchase the Studley estate if it "can be purchased for not more than $2,000.

The building referred to was an existing store on Hull Street at West Corner owned by the Studley family and shown on contemporary maps as being the building of E. Studley.

Soon after the Town Meeting vote, the property was conveyed to the Town, and January 30, 1904 the Selectmen voted to award the contract "for material and work on the building recently purchased from E. Studley at North Cohasset to be converted into a Hose Carriage House according to plans and specifications of Edward Nichols, Architect".

Some of those architect's drawings still exist in the Town's archives. Edward Nichols, a prominent Cohasset resident, was the designer of the original Osgood School at Elm Street (1891), the then-new Paul Pratt Memorial Library building on South Main Street, the town's large Town Home on Pond Street, and he was the supervising architect for Isabella Stewart Gardner's famed "Fenway Court" in Boston, now the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum.

He also designed many Cohasset homes in the late Victorian or "Queen Anne" style. In 1904, work went ahead in the converting of the store at West Corner, and on March 17 the Selectmen visited the site. They reported "the remodelling to be in a fair way toward completion".

Almost immediately the Board voted to lease the north half of the building to Alfred Beal for a Post Office at the yearly rental of $100, "the lessee to furnish all lights and water and all fixtures". From that time the newly converted municipal building housed both the U.S. Post Office at North Cohasset and the Town's Hose Carriage #3, one of Cohasset's fleet of horse-drawn fire engines.

Later the town added a bell tower, now gone, to the structure. Oil heat was installed, and the Selectmen directed the maintenance and repair of the building. Some years ago, the U.S. Postal Service, in an economy move, discontinued the North Cohasset Post Office, and the north half of the building became vacant. The Town's Fire Department consolidated in 1981 and the old satellite station at West Corner was closed. With the departure of the Beechwood Fire Station building to neighboring Scituate, the North Cohasset station is the sole representative of Cohasset's turn-of-the century Fire Stations.

For that reason it has been listed by the Town's Historical Commission in their "Survey of the Historical Assets of the Town of Cohasset", a permanent record of which is in the files of the Massachusetts Historical Commission, a branch of the Secretary of State's Office.

Historical preservation in Cohasset suggests that the old Fire Station might well be a candidate for recycling rather than demolition.

Everything hinges on recount

Everything hinged on the results of last night's recount.

Depending on the outcome Wednesday night, both selectmen candidates have said they will "take one step at a time."

Candidate Doris Golden had previously said she would pursue all legal avenues to ensure a proper election process. This week she said she would await the election recount results before deciding whether to challenge the outcome in court.

Incumbent Mary Jane McArthur has said since the tie vote conclusion of the April election, that she would petition for a recount, but would not say whether she would contest the recount results.

In the event the tie vote was confirmed, selectmen ere expected to set a date for a second election between the two candidates.

The official recount was set to begin at 7 p.m. Wednesday in Town Hall auditorium. The public was invited to attend the event, although they were to be sequestered from the actual election workers and the candidates' official observers.

Stringent regulations, as established by the secretary of state's office, were in effect Wednesday night. Each candidate was represented by an attorney and 12 official observers. There could be an observer for both candidates for each of the 12 town election workers at the recount.

The election workers, observers, attorneys and candidates were to be blocked off from the remaining members of the public. There were to be four tables, with two election officers assigned to each, to count the ballots.

An attorney representing Golden had requested the use of an overhead projector to clearly identify punchouts made into the IBM computer ballots.

A hand count of every ballot submitted for the April 14 election was to be completed. The ballots were given to the election workers in packets of 50.

The ballot recount was solely for the selectmen's race, which includes ballots cast for John DeBassio and all blanks. Approximately 500 ballots were to be counted per table. Although Town Clerk Frances-Marks said the recount should procede smoothly, with the addition of the overhead projector, the tabulating was expected to take several hours.

The Board of Registrars will oversee the recount, with Raymond Buckley standing in for Burtram Pratt. The temporary registrar was appointed by selectmen last week specifically for the recount. Pratt had earlier disqualified himself from the process, saying he was a personal friend of McArthur, and a supporter of her candidacy.

This garden is a treasure of edible delights

By Theresa Sullivan

Their garden was chosen the best in New England based on a tour of the garden by flashlight and a photo.

Four years ago, Peter and Patty Abbott of South Main Street, Cohasset won a national contest for their garden on 'Crockett's Victory Garden,' a program on PBS.

After being selected to represent New England, the Abbott's garden was videotaped and appeared on public television nationally. Viewers of 'Crockett's Victory Garden' then voted on their favorite garden and the Abbott's garden won by a landslide.

Their garden has been featured in "Better Homes and Gardens" twice; the most recent article is in the Garden Ideas and Outdoor Living 1984 issue.

The Abbotts think the reason their garden won the 'Crockett's Victory Garden' contest is because they combine vegetables with flowers and herbs. "That was one of the original ideas of the Victory Garden, to combine textures and heights," Peter said.

They plant a row of flowers next to a row of vegetables; so their garden has different colors, forms, and textures dispersed throughout the whole garden.

The way they lay the garden out is not the only thing they do that makes their garden different. To begin with, the garden was made in secret "out in the middle of the woods."

Peter cleared the woods himself with a chain saw and ax. To pull the stumps out of the ground, a truck with a comalong (a device attached to the truck used to pull out the roots) had to be used. Finally, a road had to be cut in through the woods so the truck could reach the garden.

The Abbotts' garden is near the ocean in Scituate, but they preferred keeping the exact location private.

This isn't to say they are stingy with the garden's beauty and produce. Patty gives a lot of the vegetables away. When people walk through the garden, they rarely leave empty handed, Peter said.

"A lot of people make daily walks out to the garden. I like to share it." The Abbotts also don't mind people coming to paint their garden as long as they make an appointment with the couple.

Although insecticides are not used, they do not have too much of a problem with insects because of the positioning of plants. "We put onions, garlic and marigolds near certain things to discourage certain insects," Patty said.

Also, the pigeon manure and two feet of seaweed they put on their garden helps too. Using seaweed is "a very old practice around here. It . .utralizes the soil," Peter said.

It gives bulk. The seaweed is "rotor-tilled" into the soil so that it doesn't smell and attract flies, Patty said.

The seaweed also protects the garden from erosions, Peter said. Because the garden is on a ledge, it can easily become knee deep in mud if something isn't put on top of it.

Peter is the owner of Abbott Arborists and started the garden before meeting Patty. His family summers in Scituate where he later settled year-round.

Patty, a nurse, was from Hyde Park and not what could be called a seasoned gardener. She says she's a "self-taught, self-motivated" gardener. She learned through books and fellow gardeners.

Patty makes the trip to the garden every day during summer's dry spells to water the garden. Keeping plants moist is essential, they said. She also cans the vegetables and handles the flowers for small garden weddings.

For her own wedding, she used herbs and flowers from their garden. Her straw hat was decorated with sea lavender, babies' breath and dried flowers.

They have every herb that can be named—sage, lavender, artemesia, tarragon, lemonbud, basil, dill, parsley, oregano, chives, and thyme are some.

The Abbotts eat a lot of vegetables in the summer. Like their herbs, they have a variety. They include tomatoes, cucumbers, winter and summer squash, cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, beets, onions, scallions, leeks, green beans, lima beans, horticultural beans, peas, carrots, turnips, potatoes (and strawberries).

They have to really enjoy the work because the year they were getting married they lost all their seeds in a rain storm and had to reseed. Considering they spend some $50 or $60 on seeds a year, laying the garden takes awhile.

The only time the couple has to spend on their garden is Sunday. They said they spend every Sunday at their garden (next to the ocean) in the summer. "Nothing can beat taking your salad bowl and making a salad right at your garden," Patty said.

The commission chairman said an extra advantage to the Ward-recommended plan is that it is a comprehensive project, which is intended to service the town for more than the federally-mandated 20-year period.

Although this testing is available to all students in Grades 9-12, it could be most helpful to 10th and 11th graders as they begin to formulate future career and educational plans.

The test will be administered in the Cohasset High School Cafeteria beginning at 8:30 a.m. and ending at approximately 3 p.m.—with a one hour lunch break. Students are asked to bring lunch or make other arrangements, since the cafeteria will be closed during that period of time.

☐ Jeff Hartwell received special recognition recently, something certainly worth telling about . . . Jeff was chosen by the Seahawks Hockey Organization to receive the Bobby Orr Award for Sportsmanship. Any boy who plays hockey for this Seahawks and is between the ages of 7-14 is eligible for the honor, and Jeff won! The award also included a dinner at the Providence Marriott, where Jeff was with Bobby Orr for three hours! Imagine the thrill that must have been! Certainly a motivation for all the youngsters to display good sportsmanship, which is exactly what Bobby Orr is looking for. Congratulations to Jeff.

☐ While on the subject of hockey and awards, Domenic Campedelli comes to mind immediately! At the hockey breakup dinner a few weeks ago, Boston College gave out awards to their team and he won the Most Valuable Player Award. As everyone knows, Dom is a sophomore, so the honor is really outstanding . . . by the time he is a senior, people will be sure to know that Cohasset is on the map!

☐ "The Spirit of Massachusetts" was launched last weekend and Henry Dormitzer's beaming face was on all of the newscasts. An effort that really paid off, now we all anxiously await the fleet's passing so that we can get a first hand view of his efforts.

☐ All reports are in, and the Senior Class Play, "Guys and Dolls," is coming together beautifully. This weekend is the grand showing. If you haven't ordered your tickets yet, do so as the play starts tonight! It's great fun to watch the kids perform, they work so hard to give a polished performance. Don't miss it.

☐ Doris Golden called last week to report that she is staying at Cohasset by the Sea until they complete work on her house at Bound Brook Lane. Anyone who needs to get in touch with Doris can reach her there.

☐ The day couldn't have been nicer for the Little League Parade that took place last Saturday. Following the parade was "Opening Day," complete with ceremonies. Everything was ready, the Public Address system was working well, the band played the Anthem, then Mary Jeannette Murray went to the plate to throw out the famous first ball. That's where the hitch came in . . . no one could find a ball! It seems that they were left at the start of the parade route. After they were found, Mary Jeanette threw the ball and the games were underway. Brendan Mulcahy received that first ball, as well as special applause for all of his efforts in readying the Little League Field for the big event. All teams are hoping for a successful season, make it a point to stop by and catch an inning or two. It's great fun to watch.

Jennifer Pool (L) of Cohasset and Darlene Crowley of Wakefield recently modeled these dresses.

☐ Everyone's holding their breath as the recount day approaches, wondering how it will turn out . . . by now you know, so here is a reminder to support your candidate no matter how it came out! They both have worked so hard!

☐ Don't forget to take in the Decorator Show house tour that is taking place at the 1802 Norfolk Inn, 19 Court Street in Dedham, through May 20. Cohasset should be proud that we have two decorators that participated in making the show house a reality, Marie Johnston and Phil Smith. It is said that this is the best one ever, it's not to be missed. You can even buy a ticket locally and save a dollar. They are available at Flemings.

☐ Hats off to Maureen Buckley, who is certainly doing an outstanding job at Bates College, both scholastically and in her drama work. It's so nice to see someone take full advantage of their talents, as Maureen has obviously done.

☐ There's a part time job available at the library for an interested high school student. It's for twelve hours a week, at three dollars an hour. The library has further details. If you are interested "check it out" there.

☐ Jennifer Pool (L) of Cohasset and Darlene Crowley, of Wakefield recently modeled beautifully-made dresses from "Nantucket Designs for Children," which were featured at Lord & Taylor exclusively for the day of the fashion show.

☐ The Fire Department would like to thank Mrs. Barbara Powers for the executive swivel chair for the watch officer. It fits swell.

☐ John B. Ayer a senior at Colby College (Waterville Maine) has been elected to the membership of Phi Beta Kappa, the academic honor society.

John, a graduate of Cohasset High School, is a government/public policy major. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander P. Ayer.

☐ Joanne Gatto a nutrition education consultant to New England Dairy and Food Council, led a workshop for Cohasset coaches. She explained that athletes can boost their energy stores by choosing exta helpings of foods high in complex carbohydrate. These include whole grain breads, fruits and vegetables.

Coordinating the sports nutrition workshop was Pat Wunschel, Cohasset High School Home Economics teacher. More than 15 coaches and teachers attended the event.

☐ Anna Abbruzzee, daughter Annie and sister Nancy Anderson all had a grand trip to Italy recently, where they were visiting Michelle. That sure is one benefit of having a daughter that is living in another country, you sure get to see parts of Italy that the regular tourist might not even know about! They all loved it!

☐ While doing your spring cleaning, keep the Republican Town Committee in mind. They are planning a yard sale and can use your items to help make it a success. If you have such items, call 383-0939 for more information.

☐ The Boosters Club White Cohasset Sweaters look so good on all that wear them! Grand idea for spring!

☐ Keep your news coming!

State education chief eyes future

By Judy Foley

The man who now heads the state Board of Education, possibly on the verge of assuming major responsibilities in assessing basic standards for every school system in Massachusetts, lives amid the fast-paced comings and goings of a large family in a modest home on Old Town Way.

James Grande of Hanover, 52, was elected chairman of the 11-member board last week. He was appointed to the board by former Gov. Edward King four years ago, and has served on the state Commission of Occupational Education, an advisory group to the Department of Education, for seven years.

He is a union job training director in heavy equipment for the construction industry, and was previously involved in a local citizens group, HALT, which pressed for lower taxes in the years before Prop. 2½.

He is soft-spoken, unassuming, and quite articulate in his beliefs about education.

The Board of Education, comprised of 11 lay people including representatives from labor and business ("There are enough educators in the Department of Education," Grande says), currently assists in state wide planning and offers assistance to local school boards, distributes federal funds through Requests for Proposals to school departments, assists vocational school systems, and advises the state on regional school districting.

The board may assume vast responsibilities under a $400 million legislative package of education reforms now before a joint legislative committee, which is expected to go before the full Legislature next month.

For Grande, who testified before the committee with State Education Commissioner John Lawson at a special public hearing last Saturday, the path to a leading role in the future of the state's educational system was a natural one.

"My job is in training on heavy equipment for the construction industry, and that alone led to an interest in education. With six kids, I couldn't help but get involved in the schools."

Grande and his wife, Joyce, have three children still at home: Lisa, 25, Christopher, 21, and Marilyn, 17, a junior at Hanover High School. The three eldest, James, 27, a Hanover police officer, Kathy, 26, of Bridgewater, and Alison, of Plymouth, still keep close ties with home. The couple has three grandchildren.

"Going back, I think it was the new math that got me first involved in schools. With the modern improvements in math, like most people my age I was trying to understand what was going on."

He became involved in HALT to curb rising taxes when local officials proposed an addition to the high school. "I was concerned about the taxes and opposed the high school addition, with so many other things coming at once, and that led me to HALT with others who felt the same." The addition was never built, and the following year the state approved tax cutting measures under Prop. 2½. "I was the only member of the group opposed to 2½, and I still am. It's the worst thing that could have happened to this state. There are better ways to improve government without cutting your nose to spite your face."

This year, as chairman of the Board of Education, Grande faces a hectic schedule and his board faces "a tremedous opportunity" to set state-wide standards in education.

House Bill 5000, drafted by the special joint committee on education over the past nine months, will greatly increase the board's responsibilities, he said.

Under the proposals, the board will set standards and ask each school sytem to develop a plan to meet those standards. The state's mandatory basic skills program will also be strenghtened. In addition, each school system would be evaluated, including the physical plant, Grande said. "A town may have the best teachers and the best programs, but if the plant is not in good shape it's only a matter of time before you've lost everything."

He said there is some concern that once the state becomes involved that communities will lose autonomy. "In four years that I've been on the board, I've yet to hear any discussion on greater state involvement. Local school committees will not see the loss of power they think."

The proposal would set some form of base line in education, "so every parent can know what his son or daughter can be expected to achieve in school. I don't think it's right that if I moved from Hanover to another town I would have to learn everything about that town's school system to know what kind of education my child would get."

How to get More for Your Money at The Meadows

It costs less per square foot to build a two-story home than one that is all on a single level. That's why so many traditional homes are two stories. A smaller roof covers twice the interior space ... a smaller basement suffices ... and more home goes on less land. Owning a two-level condominium also offers advantages ... excellent wall space for hanging paintings and decorative objects ... lower heating and air conditioning costs ... and excellent privacy between levels.

A time for thanks

There is nothing more precious than life. We give thanks to those who are there when we stumble; who are there to help in our struggle.

The days of the neighborhood cop on the corner are gone. The scene of the friendly fireman leisurely rescuing a stray kitten on a tree limb is all but faded away.

The fiscal and political realities of modern life have necessitated some changes.

Yet, despite these changes, we take great comfort in the knowledge that we can still rely on our professional police officers and firefighters.

No matter what internal strife may take place behind the department's doors, these are the men and women on whom our lives may depend.

It's difficult to say why an individual chooses to serve a community, not necessarily his hometown, in this profession. But to be an enforcement officer, or someone trained to battle the danger of a fire, is a special vocation indeed.

Richard Abbadessa has been a Cohasset cop for almost 13 years. One night last summer, he and several others attempted to save a family from a tragic fire.

What makes someone risk his life for others? Richard can't say for sure. But he would do it again.

He and his family were honored Tuesday for his endeavors "above and beyond the call of duty." Not one to bask in notoriety, Richard shuns this limelight shed for him. He doesn't like to talk about or remember the events of that summer night.

So, in our quiet way, we thank Richard, his fellow officers, and members of the Cohasset Fire Department, for helping us when we need them.

We are grateful for the knowledge that there is more to being a cop or a firefighter than the possession of a badge.

NEWS ITEM—Cohasset: Recommendation made by the Ambulance Study Committee to form an Emergency Medical Services Committee, a new advisory committee has fire department fuming. 'Such a committee might be formed if there were complaints about the system, but there haven't been any. So why is another committee needed?' asks the fire chief.

" . . . Hold it! . . . Now they're talking setting up a study committee to study the Emergency Medical Services Committee set up by the Ambulance Advisory Committee before they can send an ambulance. Try jogging to the hospital . . . "

Republican officers elected

At the recent organizational meeting of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee the new slate of officers was passed. Serving as Chairperson is Julie Guild; Vice-Chairperson is Rita Strong; Secretary is Martha Gjesteby; Treasurer is Ed Marshall and Auditor is Fred Howe.

Plans were also discussed to hold a fundraising yard sale again this spring with a date to be announced. To make arrangements for donations of sellable items please call 383-0939.

The 10th Congressional Caucus to elect delegates and alternates to the Republican National Convention in Dallas will be held on Saturday, May 5 at the National Guard Armory in Buzzard's Bay. Pat Buckley has announced that she will be a candidate to become a delegate. Bus transportation to the Caucus will be provided for any registered Republicans who are interested in attending. For further details please call 383-0304.

Finding the right job takes guidance

By Claire McDonough

Skipper frowned. "I have an appointment with my guidance counselor."

"That's nice," I told him.

His frown deepened. "I suppose so. But to tell you the truth, I feel a little funny taking career guidance from someone who settles for the salary of a guidance counselor."

"That's because they're dedicated and concerned," Breida told him. "They really care about what happens to kids."

"I suppose so," Skipper said. "But I'd still feel better if they made more money."

"So would they," I observed. "They have to be really dedicated to stay with it."

The Dragon nodded. "That's probably why there's such a shortage of good guidance counselors. Everywhere you go you meet people who are clearly in the wrong line of work and could have benefitted from career guidance."

"Right," Kevin agreed. "Like whoever decided to have convicts make license plates that say 'Live Free or Die.' "

"How about the man who tried to rob a bank from the drive in window?" Breida asked. "He told the teller to go get him all the money. She said okay, stepped away from the window and called the police. That guy could have used a lot of help."

"He made a terrible bank robber," Patrick agreed, "but he may have missed a wonderful career as a stand-up comedian. All he needed was a little guidance."

"You know who else is in the wrong job?" Kevin offered, "Whoever wrote the script you get on the telephone recording that begins, 'The number you have reached is no longer in service.'

"If it isn't in service, then obviously you haven't reached it."

"The world is full of people in the wrong line of work," the Dragon said. "I mean, someone who believes in using up all our natural resources would probably be happier as something other than Secretary of the Interior. No wonder the poor man resigned."

"And I'm sure he's more at home working for Amway," Breida added. "The fellow is clearly into consumerism. Maybe the man at the White House who wants to mine Boston Harbor because of all the communists in Massachusetts ought to join him."

"How about the one who appointed them?" Skipper mumbled.

"I liked him better on 'Death Valley Days.' "

"I'd recommend help for that policeman in the midwest who stopped a lady for speeding. He got a call on his radio, and he handcuffed her to a tree so she wouldn't leave before he got back and finished writing her up. Somehow I don't think he has a grasp on the finer points of law enforcement," Kevin noted.

"I read that last year the Delaware Association of Weather Forecasters had to postpone their annual picnic," Patrick contributed. "Because of rain. Now there's a whole group of people who are clearly in need of guidance."

"Sort of like the astrologer who doesn't insure her house before it burns down," I agreed, reaching for a pencil. "Can you think of any other obvious misfits?"

They looked at me with suspicion.

"Yes," the Dragon replied. "A newspaper person who'd spend a whole column on people who are in the wrong job."

"Hah!" I interjected smugly. "Not if she's making the princely wages I am. Hour for hour, I'm pretty close to being up there with guidance counselors."

District well represented by Murray

(This is a letter sent to Rep. Murray.—Ed.)

Dear Representative Murray:

Your active support of the Republican Local Aid Amendment on Monday, April 23, is indicative of a strong concern for your constituents.

This measure will provide additional local aid in the amount of $35 for each child attending public school (kindergarten through twelve) for each community in the Commonwealth. Even more importantly, this increase carries no earmarking. Local government will determine how and where it will be spent.

Because of your vote the communities of your district will receive the following increase: Cohasset, $47,600; Hingham, $141,540; Hull, $68,285.

The people of your district and the Commonwealth have been well served by your action.

Sincerely,
William G. Robinson
House Republican Leader

Police officer honored

Tuesday morning, a 13-year veteran of the Cohasset Police Department was the recipient of the first annual Robert Dana Distinguished Service Award.

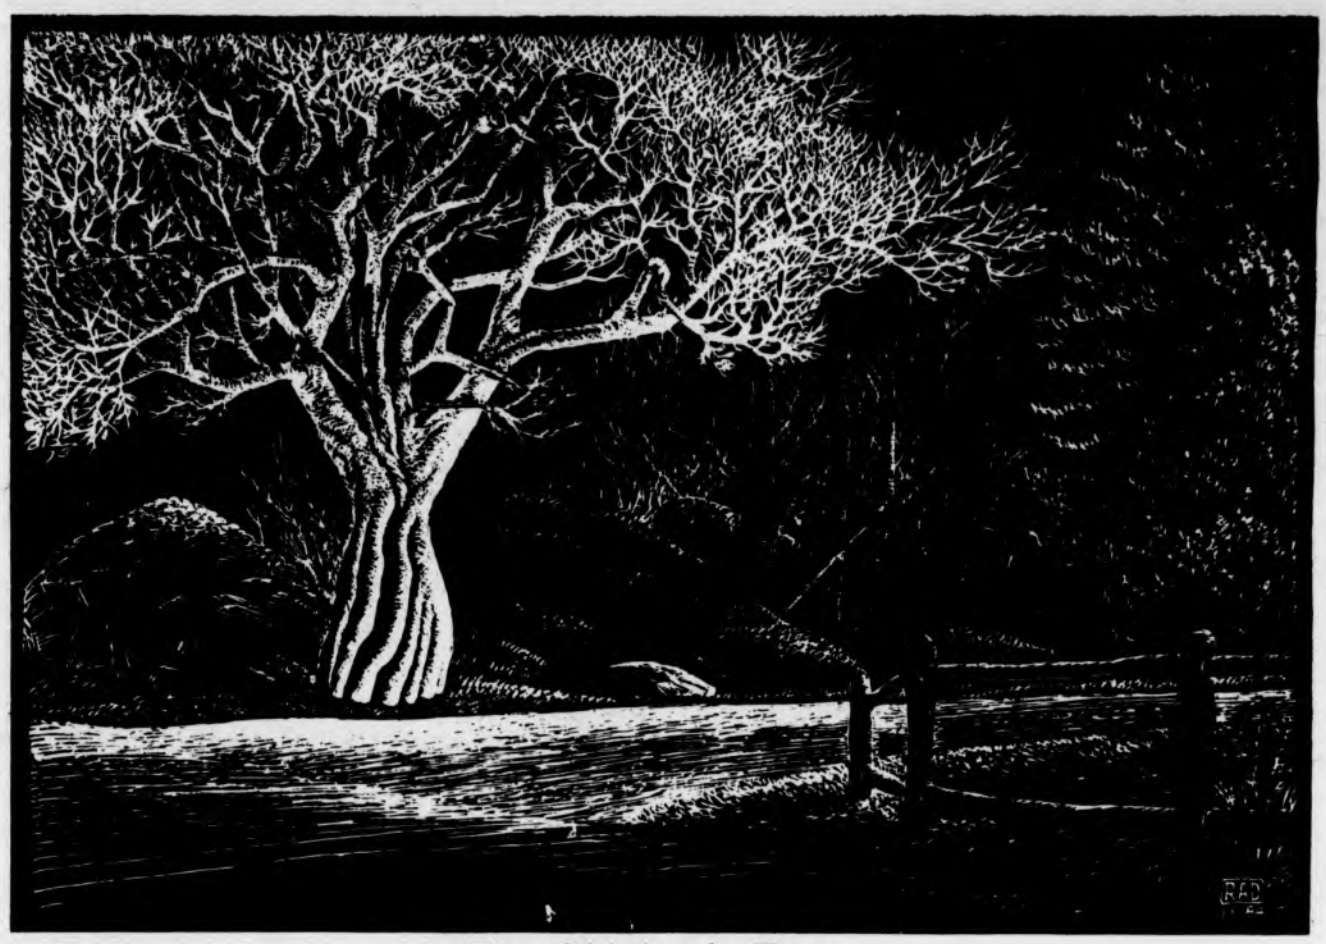
Officer Richard Abbadessa was among five south shore law enforcement officers who were honored for their efforts "above and beyond the call of duty".

With his wife, Ginny, two sons, Richard and Robert, mother Edith Abbadessa of Hingham, and mother-in-law, Anna Judge of Quincy, in attendance, Officer Abbadessa received the award at Quincy District Courthouse ceremonies. Charles V. Barry, Massachusetts Public Safety secretary, presented the awards to the five officers.

Although Officer Abbadessa had received community commendations and "thank you's" in the past, this was the first official honor bestowed upon the Cohasset resident. Chief Joseph Kealey, who recommended the commendation, said Abbadessa was the first Cohasset police officer to receive such a distinguished honor.

Based upon Fire Chief Martin Dooley's testimony and recommendation, Chief Kealey submitted the request for commendation to the Quincy District Court.

According to Chief Dooley, Officer Abbadessa's actions the night of August 19 during a house fire were "heroic" and "did not go unnoticed and therefore, should not go unrewarded." He said the officer "should be awarded a commendation for his heroic actions in assisting the Cohasset Fire Department."



According to the police officer, he was on routine patrol that night when he was called to the scene of a reported house fire. The first to arrive at the home, Officer Abbadessa made several attempts to search the burning building, without the aide of protective fire gear.

Although the officer said it is "nice to be recognized," without hesitation he added, "I'd do the same thing again."

The Robert Dana Distinguished Service Award was named for the MDC police officer slain March 25 while on duty. His widow, Charlotte Dana, a Milton police officer, participated in the award ceremony.

The Old Apple Tree

(These are the artist's words he used to supplement his scratchboard drawing.—Ed.)

This is a very old, but well known apple tree. It has stood at the entrance to a driveway on Atlantic Avenue, not far from Cunningham Bridge, for a long, long time.

Recently something happened to it. Maybe someone kicked it in. It's not long for this world, and I thought it a good idea to remember it.

A better budget so far

The Better Budget for Fiscal Year 1985 is based on a very simple tenet—sharing with Massachusetts taxpayers and municipalities the benefits of a healthy state and national economy.

As the state budget meanders through its fourth week of debate, the Better Budget continues to effect enormously the shape and philosophy of the revenue plan. To date, three Better Budget Amendments have become part of the budget document, amendments which clearly help every individual and every city and town.

MORE LOCAL AID

On Monday, April 23 a majority of my colleagues joined me in voting for a Better Budget amendment which will send back $35 per student to every city and town in additional local aid.

This amendment deals directly with the problems our communities face concerning education. It concerns itself precisely with students and schools without earmarking.

The amendment was structured to deal with Massachusetts education on a per student basis, grades kindergarten through twelve, to avoid many communities from being shut out of the local aid process. This was a question of fairness as well as education.

HOMEOWNERS TAX BREAK

Massachusetts homeowners who currently pay a mortgage, will soon be able to deduct 50% of the total mortgage interest up to $2,500 on their state income tax because of a Better Budget amendment which passed on a vote of 81-67. This tax break will apply to those owner-occupied residences which contain no more than six units.

This amendment will give incentive to those who are about to purchase a home—the American Dream. It will make it possible for our children, our grandchildren, even ourselves to afford a home. This one is truly for the average guy who works and is paying his taxes.

4% COST—OF—LIVING INCREASE FOR RETIREES

Another Better Budget amendment, this one providing for a 4% cost-of-living increase for retired public workers, passed earlier in the budget debate. The Governor offered only a 3% cost-of-living increase for the retirees in his budget.

As the rate of inflation is 4% for the year, we thought it was only fair that retirees get an adequate cost-of-living increase to 4%.

Teachers and other public service employees are the true benefactors of this Better Budget amendment.

Remember, in order for these initiatives to become law, they must pass the Senate and be signed by the Governor. If these proposals appeal to you, contact your State Senator as well as the Governor and urge their support.

STILL MORE TO COME

As the budget continues we will offer other Better Budget amendments, among them the Sales Tax Free Holiday on October 19, 20 and 21, 1984 and a three-year phase in of tax cuts on unearned income for the elderly.

Keep watching Channel 44 for all of the state budget debate.

State Education Chief...

The proposal would affect academic standards "to some degree, depending on the town," Grande said. Mandated basic skills testing could include state tests and assessments. Currently towns can develop their own tests and set their own passing marks.

"The board has been debating the value of the (basic skills) program for two years," he said. "There wouldn't have been any basic skills without local discretion when it was first imposed. It couldn't have been done without the work of the previous board.

"I don't necessarily think comparision is bad," he said. "Any parent is entitled to education with some basic standards."

The massive education reforms package includes some funding "based on need," he said. "One key of the proposal is that it can provide a town with technical and some financial assistance from the state if a town can show there is a need through no fault of the school system.

"The idea is not to let a school system flounder but to get it back to where it belongs."

Grande is encouraged by Gov. Dukakis' strong commitment to education in this year's financial aid package to cities and towns. "He's basicly saying that towns which don't support their school systems are jeopardizing that local aid. When the chief executive of the state makes a statement like that, it's got to have an impression."

"I think this board is on the verge of an historic opportunity. Other (previous) boards did well in many areas such as regional systems and vocational schools. But times have changed. No one ever dreamed of anything like Prop. 2½, and financing has caused really serious problems for some.

"We're beginning a whole new era in the high tech and computer fields, and we're able to get advise from the experts, rather than assume we are the experts. That's one benefit of having a lay board."

The current board is comprised of members from all walks of life, including a priest, a nurse, a business administrator, a mother (who brings her four-month-old infant to monthly board meetings), and a high school student with full voting powers.

"We've had good experiences with this board. The people are excellent and considerate of the others' positions, locales and backgrounds. They're not too bashful though, which is good. It's an excellent match which makes for good discussion and debate."

The board supports much of Bill 5000. "Regardless of what lcoal officials fear, none of this is going to be done in a vacuum. The entire plan will be done in public and in fact require public involvement on developing local plans."

Grande does not expect to establish any major new goals while he chairs the panel this year. The board has a full agenda with on-going priorities and the new proposals under Bill 5000. "As long as I'm chairman our work will be done with vigor. We're not going to step backawards.

"I think it's going to be a good year, but more than that, I think the years to come will be good because of it."

Coping with canines...

situation, Yocum has been bringing dogs to a privately-owned kennel whose owner wished to remain unidentified.

This kennel boards dogs and the owner expects his facility will fill up in the summer, particularly on the weekends. Cohasset has a restraining law which prohibits dogs from being on public or private property without permission from the property owner.

Yocum is a police officer for Cohasset who picks up dogs when someone calls in a complaint and when he is off duty. He regularly checks the Stop & Shop area, the schools, Cohasset village and the beaches in the summer.

Asked what he'll do in the summer if the kennel he now uses is full, Yocum said, "Maybe I'll keep them at my house." At this point, Yocum has no long-term plans for where to hold the dogs he picks up.

He said Hingham may be building a town-operated kennel which Cohasset can use. But Hingham has no definite plans to even build a kennel.

The only other alternative is bringing the dogs to a Weymouth pound, Yocum said, but nothing has been discussed with owners of that pound.

Cohasset does not charge a pet owner a penalty fee if his dog is picked up by the dog officer. The owner is required to pay an impounding fee which can range from $5 to $8 a day, depending on the size of the dog. The owner also has to pay a $10 transportation fee.

If the dog is not claimed, the town must pay the impounding fee. Charlaine Scholz at Shishone had worked hard to find an owner for an unclaimed dog, sometimes holding a dog two or three months until an owner was found, Yocum said.

State law requires a dog be held for 10 days, but after that, an unclaimed dog is put to sleep. Now that Yocum is not using Shishone, he has taken the responsibility of trying to find homes for dogs. "I've been lucky so far; I've found homes for all the (unclaimed) dogs," he said.

Yocum currently uses his own car to pick up dogs and he is on call 24-hours a day. He occasionally receives a call at 2 a.m. and has to pick up a stray dog, he said. In June, the Special Town Meeting will vote on a request to purchase a used van for the dog officer.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza was asked what the plans were for housing animals picked up by the dog officer and he said, "I have no idea. We (he and Selectmen) have not addressed the issue."

Access study for park is a puzzle

By Patricia Desmond

The state Department of Environmental Management (DEM) has had the money to do an access study at Wompatuck State Park for nearly a year now.

But Norwell officials only learned about the funds within the past month. And they want to know why they weren't told about the study earlier.

The money was placed in the DEM budget on a separate line item by State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, the Republican who represents Hingham and Cohasset. Since the money is in a line item, it cannot be used for anything except the study and it need not be spent by the close of the state' s fiscal year (June 30).

So far the state hasn't done anything about using the money. Murray said she would get working on that soon.

"I expect it will probably go out to bid this summer," she said.

The money for a study of access to the park would begin with a one-year traffic count. Murray said it is important for all four seasons to be included in the count.

At present (as everyone in the park towns should know) there is only one entrance to the park on Union Street in Hingham. Hingham officials have complained for some time about the park generating an increase of traffic on Route 228, which is the only route leading toward the park entrance from Route 3.

In the past, Hingham officials who hope for a second access to the park were blocked by Norwell's representatives to the Wompatuck State Park Advisory Committee. DEM refused to even study the access question without the agreement of the advisory committee and Norwell's representatives on the board prevented that agreement from happening.

That was true until Murray placed the line item in DEM's budget.

"Any representative can put a line item in the budget," Murray said. "And no one took it out when the budget went to the Senate, so . . ."

Murray sought the study because it is in the interest of her constituents.

But Terrence Finan, executive secretary of the Norwell selectmen, doesn't think much of the way the issue has been handled.

"It's a question of simple courtesy," Finan said. "Whatever traffic there is to the park concerns all the towns that the park's located in - Norwell, Cohasset, Scituate as well as Hingham.

"You'd think the officials involved would have mentioned it before now."

Finan said he was concerned because of a remark made at a Hingham meeting recently that indicated the study would involve a road to "join Wompatuck State Park to Route 3, probably through the northern part of Norwell."

He said he wants to make sure Norwell officials know what corridor is being considered.

He has written to James Hoyte, state environmental secretary, for information about the study. No reply has been received thus far.

Norwell Selectman Anthony Buono asked him to write the letter after having trouble getting information from the state over the telephone.

At a recent meeting of the Norwell selectmen Buono said the problem "is that the town of Hingham has basically overdeveloped.

"The amount of traffic passing the entrance to the park has increased substantially. The pressure is on the town of Norwell to offer some kind of relief valve through another access road.

"The theory is that with another access road more people will use the park. The theory hasn't been proved but $100,000 may prove it."

Meanwhile the facilities at the park continue to improve. The shelter over the Mount Blue Spring, which burned down last year, has been reconstructed. New signs have been added to parts of the park system trails.

People who use the park say its use has increased dramatically with the coming of the warm weather.

Finan said the whole issue may be a tempest in a teapot but "if it's found another access is needed and the corridor in Norwell is to be studied, then there's a need to be concerned about what is going on."

There are a number of existing roads that lead into the park besides the entrance off Union Street, Hingham. All the other roads, which were part of the old system used by the federal government before the park was created, are barricaded at present.

"We were just outclassed," remarked coach Fallon, "we didn't have the power or the pitching they had."

Against Norwell, Cohasset won 6-5 in an extra inning.

"The win was due to our batting streak in the top of the seventh with two outs and down two," commented coach Fallon.

"In addition, Kerry O'Brien pitched well," added coach Fallon, "and she was backed up by good defense."

Tara Stanford, Carla Lucas, Lisa Shumaker, Ann O'Leary and Kerry O'Brien each had two hits.

Boys Baseball

The boy's had another tough week, losing both of their games. Wednesday, Cohasset lost to Holbrook 8-3, and Thursday, Norwell beat Cohasset 9-1.

Against Holbrook, David Ormiston had two hits and one run batted in while Chris Kuhn hit a double and brought in a run. Philip Mahoney and Jamie Roy each picked up a hit. Bret Wetzell had a hit and a run batted in off Norwell, and both Lee Reid and David Ormiston played outstanding defense.

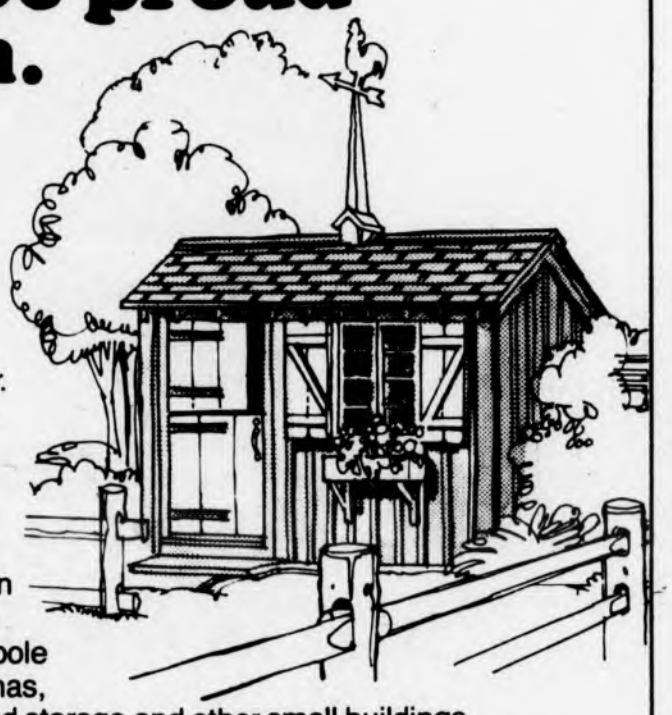
Their coach, Joe Bouchard, feels optimistic about their future and says, "The boys are starting to hit and work together as a team."

Boys Tennis

The boys improved their record last week by winning two of three matches. Cohasset defeated Abington Tuesday, 3-2, and Norwell Thursday, 4-1. Against Hanover Monday, Cohasset lost 3-2.

Against Hanover, both doubles teams won. Curtis Erickson and David Lord came back to win their match in a tie breaker. David and Curtis won again against Abington in a tie breaker. Brian Ramsey and Rich Redick also won their matches to help Cohasset's winning effort. Rich Redick, the number-one player, also won against Norwell. The first doubles team and Brian, won their matches despite losing their first sets.

The tennis team's record is now 2-3, and they are looking much better. Their coach, Toni Jillson hopes to keep their winning streak going.



Golf

The golf team continued their winning streak with two decisive victories this week. The team shut out Rockland 9-0 Monday, and Thursday beat Abington 8 1/2 to 1/2, despite missing their number one and two players, John Drago and Chris Powers. John Drago is suffering from a separated shoulder and hopefully will be able to play this week - crucial one for the team.

According to their coach, Jim Franey, "This is the best Cohasset team yet, and is even a little stronger than last year's team." The boys are expected to have a good year as their present record indicates.

During April vacation, John Drago, Troy Chatterton, and Chris Powers participated in the South Shore league pre-season tournament. Considering the freezing weather conditions, the boys played well. Chris shot an 84, and both Troy and John shot an 83.

"Guys and Dolls"

It's senior class play time again. The class of 1984 is performing the ever popular "Guys and Dolls" with more zest than any class before them.

Leading an enormous cast are talented singers, Linton Young and Lilly Carbone as Sky and Sarah and Chris Kuhn and Janet Carlson as Nathan and Adelaide -both terrific scene-stealers. They get brilliant support from other leading performers, Peter Caruso, Richard Tinory, Paul Sheppard, Kurt Hochkeppel, Tom Jones, Julie Atkinson, Susannah Barrett, Leah Hale, Joe Donofrio, John Replogle, Joe Hoffman, Nick White -and many more. The entire cast, large parts and small, is pure dynamite!

The chorus and dancing this year are nothing short of spectacular. The voices just may lift the roof off the hall and the Hot Box kick line, itself, is worth the price of admission. Choreography is by Jo Ann Fichtner and the production is directed by Scott Ketcham.

The show opens this week, May 3, 4, and 5 at Cohasset High School auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets are $3 from seniors, or at the door.

Mystery House week no. 8

Week 8 was not a good week from a pictorial perspective.

After evaluating how the picture developed in last week's issue, we decided it was too difficult to distinguish. Our apologies but we felt it was too light to guess at and certainly not fair to those people who faithfully entered weekly.

In fact none of the 11 entries were correct as guesses from 88-90 Elm Street, 23-25 Highland Avenue, 417 Beech St., 31 Highland Ave., 130 King St. failed to hit the correct address of 78 Elm St.

This house was built probably around 1822 by John Parker. He was born in 1795, married in 1822 to Mary Oakes Lawrence of Cohasset. Between the years 1823 and 1849, they had 12 children. He died in 1868, she in 1876.

On May 6, 1891, it was sold to Charles A. Cousens at an auction for $4,000, and in July of that year was moved back from the streetside to its present location. At one time a semi-circular driveway led from the street past the front door of the house.

This week's clue is: the pre-Revolutionary War house had numerous family members from Cohasset's earliest days. This again will be Week 8 of the ten-week Mystery House Tour. If need be, two houses will be provided for playoffs.

Once you find the home, write down the address of the homes, exact number and street along with your name, address and phone number and send it to the "Mystery House Tour" care of the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025 or drop off the answers in an envelope at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or at Hennessey's News, both in Cohasset Village.

The deadline for weekly entries will be 9:30 a.m. sharp Tuesday.

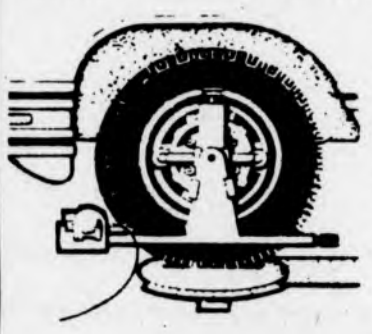
The following week we will disclose the correct address with a picture of how the home looks today with a little history brief about each house.

Remember, only one guess per week.

Agricultural engineers catalog

For those people interested in farm buildings, storing garden vegetables, raising sheep, heating with wood, setting up a workshop, or other engineering related agricultural matter, they may find the information they need in the latest catalog of NRAES handbooks.

NRAES is the Northeast Regional Agricultural Engineering Service, a group of agricultural engineers from the Cooperative Extension Services of the Northeast states.



The handbooks are user oriented, written for the farmer, home owner and do-it-yourself builder. The engineer will find them a useful design tool as well.

Some of the more popular handbooks include, "Solar Greenhouses for the Home," "Burning Wood," "Trickle Irrigation," and "Horse Housing and Equipment." Two other popular books, "Pole and Post Building Construction" and "Small Farms—Livestock Housing and Equipment" are newly revised. Other handbooks cover a wide range of subjects from family housing to field equipment for growing crops.

All NRAES material is described in a catalog along with prices, ranging from $1 to $4 for most handbooks. For a free catalog and more information about NRAES Publications, write to the Cooperative Extension Service, Bulletin Distribution Center, Cottage A, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, 01003.

Education reform

The Massachusetts Teachers Association (MTA) president recently praised the Joint Committee on Education for including in the redraft of the education reform bill, H.5000, many of the proposals supported by the MTA in the past and at hearings before the Committee in February.

"The revised H.5000 represents a significant step forward in many areas that affect the quality of education and responds to the public need for educational change as well as some critical aspects for teachers," said Carol Doherty.

Some major aspects of H.5000 that MTA supports which were included in the redraft are:

Early childhood education: pre-kindergarten and kindergarten programs with the former being optional for attendance and the latter mandatory.

Maximum class sizes between 20 and 28 for K-6 (depending on grade), with a provision that school districts with lower class sizes would not be permitted to raise them to the maximum.

Early retirement plan permitting teachers with 32 years experience to retire with maximum benefits at age 55 (to be phased in over five years).

Establishment of a minimum salary of $18,000 for teachers.

Insertion of "just cause" dismissal standard into the tenure law giving teachers the option of a school committe hearing and providing for a substantive and procedural review before an arbitrator.

Creation of a state dispute resolution council intended to better resolve impasse situations.

Golden coordinators named

Alice Daunt, Priscilla Tebbetts, and John McNabb, Jr. have been appointed as co-coordinators in Cohasset for the William B. Golden campaign for the State Senate. They are working with a local Committee who support Golden's candidacy in Cohasset.

"I am extremely pleased and gratified that such a highly qualified team has offered to coordinate my campaign in Cohasset," said Golden, a resident of Weymouth.

"I have fond memories of growing up in Cohasset, of being taught by Alice Daunt in the fourth grade, of delivering newspapers to Priscilla Tebbetts and many other people in Cohasset," said Golden.

"In recent years I have worked with these three individuals on othe political campaigns, and am confident that the people of Cohasset will respond favorably to their efforts for this campaign," Golden noted.

"Alice, Priscilla, and John are all highly committed and involved people," said Golden. "I am confident these three individuals will work well with the many other friends of mine in Cohasset to provide the South Shore with effective, active representation in the State Senate."

No wonder Boston women are said to be dowdy when compared to the new look dreamed up at the International Beauty Show in New York. While some of us may feel positively giddy after getting two inches cut for a shorter, cooler summer hairdo, heads wouldn't turn on Fifth Avenue, where the latest fad is sporting red, green, blue, purple and pink hair, with several strands glued together with "Glitter strip." Solid-gold fingernails sold for from $45 for a plain 14-karat one to $590 for gold with 19 diamonds. One New Yorker at the show seemed pleased with the new nail on her right index finger. On her left pinkie, she had what resembled a pierced earring bolted into her nail—a tiny gold T (her name was Terri), with a small diamond. As for me, I think I'd rather be a staid Bostonian munching on Millie Carr's crunchy

CHEDDAR CHEESE CRISPIES

1 c. grated cheddar cheese
1 c. flour
1 stick butter
1 c. Rice Crispie Cereal

Cream together cheese and butter, softened at room temperature. Add flour and mix. Add cereal and form into small balls. Place on ungreased cookie sheet and flatten each walnut-size ball by pressing down with the bottom of a small glass which has been greased. Bake at 375 degrees for 10 min. NOTE: Millie says when she served these hot from the oven to her guests, "boom," they were gone in a flash. Like so many of us, she is never without a can of "Pam" for spraying pans that must be greased before baking and finds a multitude of other uses for the spray, such as loosening windows that are stuck and door locks that are rusty.

Manhattan's eating circles are trendy as well. There, where one finds the fanciest restaurants on earth, Russell Baker writes that last year's in thing for gormands wishing to appear fashionable was the Year of the Goat Cheese. All over the city, people who eat with the trends ordered or served what only reminded Baker of the fragrance of goats. "Such is the power of fashion," the columnist writes and goes on to wonder what chic people will be eating next year to prove they have gourmet palates. In 1982 it was something called creme fraiche, white and gooey, to put on things like cabbage leaves and raspberries and before that, was the Year of the Red Lettuce, preceded by the Year of the Pesto and then the Year of the Nouvelle Cuisine with "its dispiriting parade of vegetables passed quickly through steam to destroy their taste." All this trendy food is hardly the fare we Yankees dream of, such as home-baked beans, hot homemade rolls and clam chowder, or Mary Faas way with chicken called

CHICKEN DIJON STYLE

Sauce:
1½ T Dijon mustard
1/4 c. scallions, chopped fine
1/8 tsp. tabasco sauce
1 tsp. parsley, salt and pepper to taste
1/4 c. melted butter

Cover boned, skinned chicken breasts with sauce. Roll in Italian-style bread crumbs. Drizzle with 1/8 c. melted butter. (May freeze at this point). Bake at 350 degrees for 45 min. Mary notes that this recipe may be doubled as it only serves 2 to 4, by doubling sauce recipe to cover more chicken breasts.

Have you ever noticed that fashions in names change as well? In the '20s, the boys were usually named Robert, John, George, Joseph, or perhaps Donald. By the early '50s the following were "in:" James, David, Thomas and Mark. But in the mid '70s when birth announcements were still being sent out, they were apt to read, Jason, Matthew, Christopher, or Daniel. Today, Jason is though to be No. 1, with Todd, Duane, Scott and Brad the most popular. Girl's names 50 years ago were Mary, Barbara, Ruth, Helen, Elizabeth and Jean, but by 1975 the baby girls were most often Jennifer or Amy, Sarah, or Eliza. Today, when Heather, Kristen and Michelle are popular, we'd all come running if we heard our name called to enjoy a slice of this fruit yogurt pie served at a recent Community League luncheon by Diane Kirkland and her committee.

FRUIT YOGURT PIE

Two 8-oz. fruit yogurt, mixed with one 9-oz. container Cool Whip and extra fruit if desired. Fill 9" graham cracker pie crust and freeze for a minimum of four hours. Remove from freezer 30 min. before serving. This is delicious, plus being low calorie

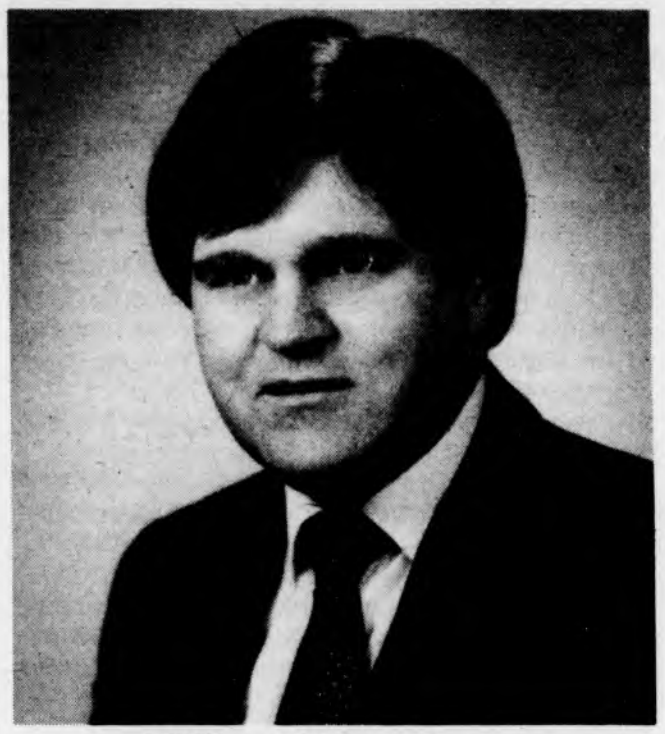
Brothers elected treasurer of Cohasset Savings

William K. Brothers of Marshfield, a member of the Cohasset Savings Bank organization since 1977, has been elected Treasurer of the Savings Bank.



Mr. Brothers joined Cohasset Savings as the first manager of its Bound Brook Office in North Scituate when it opened in 1977 and later transferred to the bank's main office in Cohasset where he has been responsible for various administrative functions including the installation of the latest in computer equipment and teller terminals.

He was named Assistant Treasurer in 1980 and Assistant Vice President in 1982.

He is a graduate of Norwood High School, attended Boston State College until interrupted by military service, and then resumed his studies at Stonehill College where he earned a bachelor of science degree in 1973.

Before coming to Cohasset Savings he had been employed by Household Finance Corporation and more recently at the former Dorchester Savings Bank and Weymouth Savings Bank.

In 1976 he graduated from the School for Supervisory Personnel conducted by the Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts, and in 1980 from the Graduate School of Savings Bank operated by the former National Association of Mutual Savings Banks in Fairfield, Conn.

Legislative youth program

My high school juniors legislative orientation program has started its eighth year.

I encourage my district students to be involved in government and encourage them to seek election to the student government.

The elected students from high schools throughout Massachusetts run the state government for a day. Committee members are appointed. Hearings take place on student initiated legislation. The senatorial and representative chambers meet and handle the process just as if they were legislators.

The government program starts in February and runs through May. Students from three towns, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull have all participated over the years.

I am an avid believer in stimulating the youth to be interested, informed and involved in participating in our government. As young citizens of our Commonwealth and our nation the responsibility of the future of our country will be on their shoulders.

No one in power has a squeaky voice, because . . .

By Lois Martin

It's all in the voice, I told her. Because she was saying how no one in authority listens to a woman when she speaks about her cause or a problem. And I was telling her about this article that I'd read about what women need to do to be taken more seriously in their oral dissertations.

Ever watch a man and a dog? Well, it annoys me because when a deep-voiced person who shaves says something to a dog, the animal feels commanded. When a woman speaks, the dog feels petted.

Perhaps now you're wondering if I'm going to undertake Part II of "Origin of Species." No, I'm just persuaded it's all in the voice.

PATCHES

If my voice had been deeper when my children were little, I'd never have said, "Wait till your father gets home." In fact the only effective voice device I ever discovered in child rearing was my silence. The boys always knew they had relative safety when my mouth was sending out its usual remonstrances or mild threats.

My power to make them truly nervous lay only in my silence, a weapon I used too little because it's not easy to be quiet.

Anyway, recognizing the traditional impact of a male's voice, someone did some work on how the woman with her soprano could become more effective. I'd like to point out there are two reasons the male voice has carried more authority. First, that's our training. And for another, it carries, deeper, stronger, more imposing in power, richer volume.

The thing is, a woman's voice at best is AM. A man's equipped with FM Stereo. Need I say more?

So in this article the writer is directing women toward effective use of vocal cords. We have this dreadful habit of letting our calm contraltos rise to hysterical falsetto when we are putting forth a dynamic argument.

Women of the world, forget that. When we are trying to be persuasive, we're supposed to lower our voices, not raise them to that disconcerting merger of panic and whining.

And drop your voice at the end of a statement. Write that down. Women finish everything as if it were an inquiry, or request for permission. Cut that out. Finish your statement and sentences with dropped tones. That means you've made a statement instead of seeking permission.

Frankly until we train our government officials, and I've heard some of this, to stop saying, "Can I ask a question?" we're never gonna get to the White House.

Not only can we ask questions, we're perfectly capable of answering them to both men and women.

Historically, men have had power and women have had strength. That gets challenged periodically and it's getting knifed in theory now. Women want some power. It's in the voice, I tell you.

Personally, I prefer power used to energize rather than to dominate. That's a subtle nuance I hope women employ if we get the hang of power.

This brief training in voice usage will give us a better chance at getting potholes in front of our house repaired before the man next door gets his fixed. At least it will be a tie in road repair decisions.

However, and this is a warning that's not to be treated lightly, there are times to let that voice rise naturally into its pathetic helpless whine.

I speak of burning buildings, or monstrous situations like when your car's in the ditch up to its ashtrays. Don't speak then as if you know how to direct remedies for the problems unless you do. Just use the hysterics that come naturally. With our luck, we'll misuse our new voice modulation and everyone will follow our directions in getting out of jams for which we should rely on those people with the deep voices.

Incidentally, for the men, here's a truth. There is nothing more powerful than the use of a rich baritone in the softest of tones, kindly applied. That's a fact.

Musings

By John H. Cutler

☐ The Vice-Presidency is the last cookie on the plate. Everybody insists he won't take it, but someone always does.

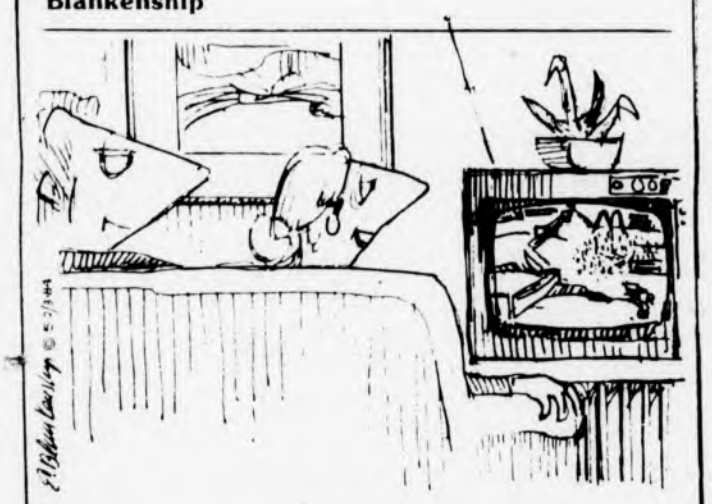
☐ If Patrick Henry thought taxation without representation was bad, he should see it with representation.

☐ A newspaper reporter showed up at his girl friend's house after a long absence. Asked where he had been, he said, "I gave you up for Lent."

☐ Monday is a tough way to spend one-seventh of your life.

☐ A Texan asked a Maine farmer how much he though his prize Jersey cow was worth. The farmer thought for a moment, looked the stranger over, then said: "Are you the tax assessor or has she been killed by your car?"

☐ It's too bad that a mere 90 percent of politicians give the other 10 percent a bad name.



☐ Trying to solve America's problems with Congressional oratory is like trying to untangle a traffic jam by honking the horn.

☐ "Reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man and writing an exact man." Francis Bacon said it.

☐ As you know, Phyllis Schlafly is definitely anti-ERA. In Common Cause magazine she was recently thus quoted: "Any politician who thinks he will get the women's vote by putting a woman on the ticket is really living in some kind of dream world. All you have to do is ask the NOW women if they would support me . . ."

☐ As some anonymous sage said: The way things are being done in Washington these days reminds me of the fellow who sawed off a board 3 times and it was still too short.

SSHigh and Quest give new meaning to school

(This is the final part of a multi-story series on the South Shore Collaborative. Ed.)

By Theresa Sullivan

When judging a Christmas decorating contest at South Shore High, South Shore Collaborative Executive Director Dr. Michael Savage noticed one student had outstanding artistic ability.

Because there were no fine arts classes at the school, Savage set up an art tutoring sesssion for the student once every two weeks. This boy, who is in the Quest program, didn't like going to school, he said.

Since Christmas, his confidence has improved "quite a bit" South Shore High Director Gary Urgonski said. "He just didn't go to high school his freshman and sophomore year."

Savage said, "Now he's talking about finishing school and going to art school. This kid is so thrilled!"

"Now he's coming out. He had nothing before," Urgonski said. "Now kids say, 'You're a good artist. Draw me a picture of Jimmy Hendrix.' It gives him something to come to school for."

This same boy is also the lead guitarist in a band formed at school.

The 25 South Shore High and nine Quest students are at the school because of emotional or behavior problems. Many students excel in the program because the student-teacher ratio is small (four to one) and students don't "fall through the cracks," Urgonski said.

"Most kids in Quest couldn't handle being in the impersonal atmosphere in a school with 1,000 kids. In a school like this, kids excel."

South Shore High and the Quest program are accredited high school programs which are part of the South Shore Collaborative. The South Shore Collaborative serves Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

The two programs are run by a 10-person staff in the former McCulloch School in North Weymouth and will be moving to East School in Hingham in the fall.

The staff consists of Urgonski, who is the full-time director and a part-time teacher, five teachers, two aides, a part-time adjustment counselor and a part-time expressive therapist.

Most of the South Shore High and Quest students come to the school because personal problems affect their school work or behavior in school, Urgonski said. He avoided categorizing the students in any way but said many lack motivation, have a poor self-concept and have difficulty dealing with a teacher-student relationship when that ratio is one to 35.

South Shore High and Quest students call their teachers by their first names. The teachers exercise their authority if it's necessary, but they are also approachable, Urgonski said. "All the teachers have kids coming to them for advice."

All Quest students receive individual counseling once a week. As many of the South Shore High students as possible also get individual counseling.

Twice a day students meet in groups and discuss issues, plans and themselves. Teachers are present at these meetings, but students lead the discussion.

Working with these students is demanding. The teachers have no breaks; they are with the students all day, even during lunch.

"Teachers like working with these kids more than kids in a regular high school. The teachers give so much more. These kids are very honest, very open.

"I like working with these kids. I get a lot of satisfaction from working with kids that have problems. They're a lot more interesting.

"You have to give a lot, but you get more than you give. You see some of yourself in these kids." When Urgonski talks with students, he is not patronizing or 'one of the guys.' He seems able to blend authority and friendship, caring and helpfulness into his role.

"We encourage the kids to be responsible. In addition to academics, we teach the kids that they can be accepted; people can care for them."

For example, some seven months ago, $5 was stolen from a student. "We make it a group issue if something is stolen.

"Kids are encouraged to confront the issue as something that everyone sees as a problem and (something that) isn't going to be ignored. We said until the $5 is returned, there will be no more breaks. (Students get break time as a privilege.)

"Nine times out of 10, the money turns up on my desk. We've had kids who came forward and said, 'I took it.' "

South Shore High and Quest run on a level system where students rise on the scale through good behavior and decline through unacceptable behavior. With each added level, a student is entitled to more privileges. The highest level is 10.

When a student reaches the top levels and maintains his position for awhile, he may be eligible for transfer back to the high school in his town. Most students are at the school at least a year and up to four years, Urgonski said.

"Some kids want to go back; other kids don't want to go back and we kind of force them" if the staff thinks they're ready. Others don't want to go back and the staff doesn't make them go because they wouldn't be able to adjust, he said.

There are no extracurricular activities or interscholastic sports at South Shore High; so the staff tries to encourage students to return to their public schools.

When a student does go back to his high school, the staff at South Shore High plans a schedule for him and sets up support services at the school.

If a student is not able or ready to return to a larger, more impersonal school, he may stay at South Shore High and receive his diploma through the school.

Two of last year's graduating seniors went on to college and a girl in this year's senior class has taken her SAT's and plans to attend college. "I think some of these kids definitely are going to be professional people," Urgonski said.

The Rewards of SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Some of us, they claimed, would never walk
Nor have the chance to learn and talk.
A few predicted a lifetime of pain—
But we proved them wrong when "our time" came.
Learning begins with love and care
For every child born everywhere.
We're grateful to those of you
Who had the faith to see us through.
We run, we laugh, and we throw the ball—
And on the pedestal we stand tall—
With medals 'round our necks to display—
The rewards of SPECIAL OLYMPICS DAY!!!
